TIMES IN THE FIRST POUCH

OVERSEA FLIGHT PREDICTED

Department Lays Plans for Extending the Service Throughout the Country.

The first regular airplane mail service in the world was inaugurated between Washington and New York yesterday. With the exception of an accident to one of the airplanes between Washington and Philadelphia, it was a complete success. Leaving Belmont Park at 11:30 in the forenoon with 144 pounds of mail, Lieutenant Torrey H. Webb arrived in Philadelphia at 12:30, from which point the mail was relayed through the air by Lieutenant J. C. Edgerton, who delivered it in Washington at 2:50 P. M. The actual flying time of the two couriers, deducting the six minutes' intermission in relaying at Philadelphia, was three hours and twenty minutes. Although this record was not quite up to the ninety-five-mile average, which the aviators were expected to make, it was considered satisfactory for the initial trip with new machines.

The opening of the air route was marked by only one mishap. That occurred on the lap between Washington and Philadelphia when Lieutenant George L. Boyle, driving a plane with a large pouch of mail for Philadelphia and New York, was forced to descend twenty-five miles out of Washington. It was reported that he lost his way and in landing snapped a propeller blade. Washington and Philadelphia were quickly informed, and a special mail truck was sent to Lieutenant Boyle's relief. The mail which he carried included letters from the President and other Government officials to Postmaster Patten, as well as a communication from Postmaster Burleson to the publisher of THE NEW YORK TIMES containing a facsimile of a letter sent by the publisher of another and earlier NEW YORK TIMES in 1835 to the then Postmaster General urging more rapid mail service.

To avoid any delays in the general schedule that might be caused by Lieutenant Boyle's mishap, it was decided not to wait for the arrival of the Washington mail which he carried. The plane scheduled to relieve him at Philadelphia, piloted by Lieutenant Howard Culver, left that city at 2:20 o'clock, carrying only the Philadelphia mail for New York, and arrived at Belmont Park at 3:37 o'clock. Lieutenant Culver brought a pouch containing 350 letters, 200 for distribution in New York and 150 for points beyond.

The Start from New York.

Interest at this end of the new air route centered largely upon the departure of Lieutenant Torrey H. Webb of Gazelle, Cal., a Columbia graduate, who enlisted in the air service of the army immediately after the United States entered the war. At his side up to the very moment of departure was his young wife whom he married only a year ago

Many persons of prominence assembled to see Lieutenant Webb start. Among them were Postmaster Patten, Alan R. Hawley, Byron T. Newton, Murray Hulbert, Commissioner of Docks; J. A. Kelly, Postmaster of Long Island City; T. A. McMahon, Postmaster of Far Rockaway; A. J. Kennedy, Postmaster of Flushing; Daniel Shea, Postmaster of Jamaica; Post Office Inspector George M. Brown, Henry Woodhouse of the Board of Governors of the Aero Club of America, and Rear Admiral Fiske. Three French aviation officers, Lieutenants Parri, Campizono, and Dobelle also watched the departure.

The ceremonies preliminary to the start were opened by Postmaster Patten, and President Hawley of the Aero Club was in the midst of a speech when the time to make the ascent arrived. With military promptness Lieutenant Webb leaped into his seat and rose from the ground, leaving Mr. Hawley talking to an audience that had its eyes turned skyward. The machine which Lieutenant Webb drove was of the Curtiss type, model J. N. 4, with a speed capacity of ninety-five miles an hour.

On leaving the ground the pilot mounted at the rate of 1,000 feet a minute. A light wind, about eighteen miles an hour, was at the back of the aviator. Within ten minutes he was out of sight, making his way southward. He carried two pouches containing 2,457 pieces of mail. With the exception of three packages and a copy of yesterday's NEW YORK TIMES, the mail was all letters. The packages contained a music roll addressed to President Wilson, and two copies of Secretary Baker's book on

New Ship Tuckahoe in Service; Was Ready for Sea in 37 Days

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, May 15.—Completed and ready for her cargo, the collier Tuckahoe, built by the New York Shipbuilding Company, Camden, N. J., in world's record time, today was turned over to the United States Shipping Board in this city. Thus, thirty-seven days after the keel was laid the big steel ship, of 5,548 tons deadweight, was prepared to sail across the seas.

Demonstrations today by the workmen of the shipyard were even more enthusiastic than those of Sunday morning, ten days ago, when the ship was launched in the presence of Director General Schwab and other Government officials. The Tuckahoe had a most successful dock trial two days ago. Coal and supplies for the crew were put on board yesterday, and early this morning the Captain and crew of forty men took possession of the ship.

DUVAL TO FACE A FIRING SQUAD

Bonnet Rouge Director Condemned to Death for Treason by Paris Court-Martial.

PRISON FOR 6 ACCOMPLICES

Sentenced to Terms Ranging from Two to Ten Years—Two of Them Also Fined.

PARIS, May 15.—M. Duval, who was director of the suppressed Germanophile newspaper Bonnet Rouge, was condemned to death today by court-martial for treason. The six other defendants were sentenced to imprisonment for terms ranging from two to ten years. Every decision of the court-martial was voted unanimously.

M. Marion, assistant manager of Bonnet Rouge, received ten years' imprisonment at hard labor.

Jacques Landau, a reporter on the newspaper, was condemned to eight years at hard labor.

Goldsky was sentenced to eight years at hard labor and military degradation.

M. Joucla, a reporter on the Bonnet Rouge, received five years at hard labor.

M. Vercasson was sentenced to two years in prison and fined 5,000 francs, with sentence suspended.

Jean Leymarie, former director of the Ministry of the Interior, was sentenced to two years in prison and fined 1,000 francs.

Duval, who had expected the verdict, heard with great fortitude Colonel Voyer read the death sentence. He then said:

"The judgment of man often is erroneous. Posterity will judge whether I am guilty of treason."

Before the verdict was reached Duval in an impassioned speech had declared that none of the accused was in any way an accomplice of his. He declared he was ready to face any verdict serenely.

Landau and Jouda collapsed completely. Jouda exclaimed:

Goldsky maintained the same sneering attitude which characterized him throughout the trial.

Leymarie, addressing the court, said he had been sufficiently punished for any lack of foresight he had shown. He was apparently overcome with emotion. He told The Associated Press he expected at least the same treatment as that accorded Vercasson, whose sentence was suspended.

"I am a ruined man," he added.

In pleading for him to day Attorney Guillain contended that the former Director of the Ministry of the Interior and later head of the Secret Service was blameless. He denied emphatically that Leymarie was a gambler and had played poker with Louis Malvy, former Minister of the Interior, and others, as was stated by L'Action Française. Addressing the court, the lawyer said:

"We ask no mercy. Apply the law without fear and without weakness."

Leymarie's condemnation roused greater public interest and discussion than did the death sentence of Duval as the court emptied, as public minds naturally connected his sentence with the forthcoming trial of Malvy.

Duval, Marion, and Goldsky have signed requests to be permitted to appeal from the judgment of the court.

The second treason trial connected with the German propaganda of "Boloism" or "defeatism" in France has ended like the first—that of Bolo Pacha and his associates—with the conviction of the defendants. But the "cause célèbre" of the series is yet to come with the court-martialing of former Premier Joseph Caillaux, said to be the brains of the whole "defeatist" propaganda. He is alleged to have had illegal relations with Germany even when he was Premier and Minister of the Interior at the time of the Agadir crisis, in 1911, which became treasonable when the war began.

At that time the Under Secretary of Interior was Louis J. Malvy, who was Minister of the Interior under Ribot last year and upon whom Caillaux is said

ASKED VOTE OF CONFIDENCE

President in Letter to Martin Challenged Senate's Purpose

SAW WAR CONTROL SOUGHT

HUGHES TO AID GREGORY

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 15.—Three moves of prime importance were made today in connection with the aircraft controversy:

President Wilson in a letter to Senator Martin, the Democratic floor leader, vehemently opposed the Chamberlain resolution for an investigation of the conduct of the war by the Committee on Military Affairs of the Senate. He said passage of the resolution would be "a direct vote of want of confidence in the Administration," and would constitute "nothing less than an attempt to take over the conduct of the war." The President called upon supporters of the Administration in the Senate to rally to its support.

The Senate Committee on Audit and Expenses, to which the Chamberlain resolution had been referred, voted three to two to order a favorable report on the resolution after modifying it so as to limit the investigation to "the progress of aircraft and ordnance production in the United States, or into the status of the Quartermaster General's supplies or expenditures in any of those branches of the War Department." The reference to the "conduct of the war" was eliminated and a proviso added "that nothing in this resolution shall be held to authorize the Military Affairs Committee to take over or in any manner direct or superintend the executive branch of the Government in the conduct of the war."

President Wilson invited Charles E. Hughes to associate himself with the Attorney General in the investigation of the Borglum aircraft charges undertaken by the Department of Justice at the directon of the President, and Mr. Hughes accepted the invitation. In a letter to Mr. Hughes the President said he felt "that these charges should be thoroughly investigated and with as little delay as possible, in order that the guilty, if there be any such, may be promptly and vigorously prosecuted, and that the reputations of those whose actions have been attacked may be protected in case the charges are groundless."

President's Letter to Martin.

Although the President had told Senators that he did not object to an inquiry by the Military Affairs Committee into the aircraft program, he did not allude to aircraft in his letter to Mr. Martin, but directed his opposition to the whole scope of the Chamberlain resolution. The letter follows:

The White House, May 14, 1918.

My Dear Senator:

I am sincerely obliged to you for calling my attention to Senate Resolution 241, which in effect proposes to constitute the Military Affairs Committee of the Senate a committee on the conduct of the war.

I deem it my duty to say that I should regard the passage of this resolution as a direct vote of want of confidence in the Administration. The purpose which it undoubtedly expresses has been expressed again and again in various forms during the present session and has always seemed to originate in a rooted distrust of those who are at present in charge of the executive functions of the Government. Those executive functions are very clearly understood. They have been defined both by the Constitution and by long experience, and no one can doubt where the responsibility for them lies or what the methods are by which those who are responsible can be held to their duty.

Such activities on the part of a particular committee of the Senate as this resolution would look forward to would constitute nothing less than an attempt to take over the conduct of the war, or at the least so superintend and direct and participate in the executive conduct of it as to interfere in the most serious way with the action of the constituted Executive.

I protest most earnestly against the adoption of any such action and shall hope that every Senator who intends to support the present Administration in the conduct of the war will vote against it. These are serious times, and it is absolutely necessary that

Foe Drops Bombs Near Paris, but Fails to Reach Capital

PARIS, Thursday, May 16.—Enemy aircraft dropped bombs on the outlying suburbs of Paris late last night. None of the enemy was able to penetrate the defenses of the city proper.

This official statement was issued: "The lookout posts having reported enemy aircraft making for Paris, an alarm was sounded at 10:12 P. M. Anti-aircraft batteries opened fire and airplanes took the air. No enemy machine reached Paris, but several bombs were dropped on the more distant suburbs. 'All clear' was given at 11:55."

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY, May 15.—This was a day of glory for Captain D. M. K. Peterson, American aviator. He was among a group of American fliers decorated with the Croix de Guerre this afternoon, and when he received it from the hands of a French General he wore the suit in which he had brought down two German airplanes single-handed a short time before. The cross, of course, was awarded for another exploit.

Captain Peterson was above the German lines just at noon when he saw two German avions approaching in the direction of the American forces. Being alone, he went to an altitude of 5,000 meters and waited for the Germans traveling below. The day was perfect, the sun was shining brightly, and the atmosphere was clear, but the Germans did not see Peterson.

When the German fliers had passed him the American dived vertically 500 meters at the hindmost one. When almost on him he started his machine gun going and in a moment the German was going groundward in flames. Captain Peterson had fired sixty bullets.

As he checked his flight he saw that the other German had looped and was after him, coming straight and fast. He looped upward through a stream of German bullets and got on top,

During a quick turn, Peterson darted after his opponent, when the German sprang a new trick in aerial warfare. He turned loose a smoke box, which acted like those that

BRIGADING PLAN EXPANDED

Pershing Is to Command Divisions Where Our Men Predominate

INCREASED FIGHTING FORCE

System Will Augment Our Army on the Front and Provide Training Facilities.

ITALIANS STRONG IN WEST

Provide Reinforcements There and Have Improved Their Defenses at Home.

WASHINGTON, May 15.—General Pershing probably soon will be commanding French and British troops as the process of brigading American units with their allies on the western front goes forward.

As if exemplifying the unity of command and action into which the United States and its co-belligerents have entered, it became known here today that whenever American troops predominate in the brigaded divisions as the process goes on, these divisions, under present plans, will be turned over to General Pershing's command.

This plan would accomplish several things which the military authorities consulting on it regard as very desirable. It would rapidly increase the size of the American fighting command on the battleline, it would contribute tremendously to the spirit of unity and concerted effort, and at the same time, instead of holding large numbers of American troops behind the lines while training, would surround them with seasoned veterans and under actual battle conditions school them to be rebrigaded later with fresh American troops coming to France.

In this way the efficiency of the British and French forces is expected to be increased and the work of building up a great, fully trained, and completely equipped fighting force in France is expected to be hastened.

Italian Front Under Foch.

In addition to this, as illustrative of the unity of command under which Generalissimo Foch directs all the allied armies, it was stated officially here today that Foch commanded the Italian troops in France and Italy. There had been no question that he commanded the Italian troops in France, and it had been supposed that, considering the Italian front as part of the western battle line under a decision reached at the Versailles conference, the Generalissimo's authority extended there.

For the first time, however, it was stated unreservedly that General Foch's supreme command extended to Italy.

It was stated, also, that Italy, besides now sending troops to France in numbers equal to those being sent from the United States, now had on her fighting line a larger army, more perfectly equipped, than she had before the great Austrian drive. This may be explanatory of the apparent equanimity with which the allied lead-

Allies Can Hold Back German Hosts If the American Forces Keep Coming

By CHARLES H. GRASTY.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, May 15.—Everybody realizes that the Germans will put everything they have got into the impending attack on the western front, and may spring new things in the way of guns, gases, and tanks, but on the eve of the new battle there are no evidences of alarm or suppressed excitement.

I met today an officer who goes three times a week to General Foch's headquarters, and asked him about the prospects. He was smilingly confident.

When questioned about the French losses since March 21, he said that they hadn't been heavy. That is considered as the crucial point. If the French Army remains at its strength, and if the flow of American troops direct to the front continues without interruption, the expert opinion is that the Allies will hold the Germans, and holding them will mean victory, for time fights with the Allies by reason of America's coming.

A colleague, who has just arrived from Switzerland, says that German internal conditions have not been bettered by the eastern conquests. On the military side they are still banking on a successful offensive, but are much less cocksure.

He thinks that the Germans are counting less on a definite military victory than on forcing England and France to peace terms by bringing home to them the possible loss of Paris and the Channel ports.

With all their military strength and skill the Germans are having troubles which compel them to seek an early decision. The pinch, which is great in Germany, is almost unbearable in Austria-Hungary.

While the weaker ally yields to the stronger, suspicion and distrust exist between Emperor William and Emperor Charles. There is not an identity of interest between them.

Victory will mean one thing for William and quite another for Charles. For the latter there is no pride in the war. He inherited it along with the crown, and his aversion for it and the opposition of his influential environment are now publicly known.

"We Must Be Patient," the Kaiser Tells Germans, But "Our Task in the West Will Be Accomplished"

AMSTERDAM, May 15.—Emperor William a few days ago, addressing the Town Council of Aachen, (Aix-la-Chapelle,) said, according to a Berlin dispatch:

"I am glad to be able to salute you, gentlemen. In the west I inspected half of devastated France. There only one obtains the right impression of the awful state that has been spared the Fatherland. Whoever should grow faint-hearted ought to come to the front and see the devastation. Then he would cease to lament his fate, and be satisfied with his lot and bear patiently the hardships and privations of war's horrors.

"The offensive goes well ahead. Already 600,000 English have been put hors de combat, and 1,600 guns have been captured. Everywhere the French must help.

"Our opponents have had a bad time. They deserved nothing else. Our task in the west will be accomplished, but we must be patient. We cannot settle in a day armies of millions.

"We shall attain our aim. Difficult tasks are before us, but to deal with these we have efficient workers.

"We have gone ahead in the Crimea also. The first trains with foodstuffs have arrived at Berlin from Ukraine, improving the food supply. Sebastopol has been captured and a big, richly laden fleet there. We shall revive the Black Sea traffic.

"The position, therefore, is good. I am delighted with the patriotism prevailing in Aachen on the empire's frontier. The spirit of the troops is excellent. There are many Rhinelanders and many Aacheners among them.

"I believe it is now time to abolish all that is foreign. We must cease to talk French. Let us, rather, talk low German."

HARDEN FEARS FOR AUSTRIA

Must Conciliate America to Get Post-War Loan, He Suggests—Slavs Resentful.

AMSTERDAM, May 15.—Although the official announcement regarding the deliberations of monarchs and Ministers at the German Army Headquarters is naturally received by the German jingo press with tremendous joy as an important step toward the realization of the Central Europe dreams, and although that rejoicing is shared to some extent by the democratic parties, there are some very emphatic notes of doubt heard in the land. The Weser Zeitung, which is nothing if not widely imperialist, thinks, for example, that it is rather too soon to rejoice, adding:

"We have learned in the last four years that only reality rules in diplomacy and that the words of the polite language of the courts decide neither friendship nor enmity, peace nor war."

It refers in disgust to the hostile influences around the Empress Zita and appears to think that distracted Austria, as it is today, is no very fitting or brilliant second for mighty Germany.

Sees No Popular Assent.

Vorwärts says that all such arrangements are burdened by an unknown factor—the final general peace. It objects to alliances which shut out any other nation, and thinks hard and fast arrangements deemed suitable now may, as eternity is long, soon prove fetters.

An alliance, it goes on, "can only have an assured foundation if it rests on the willing consent of the people. Of such a basis we see little sign at the present moment in Austria. Germany today in Austria-Hungary, thanks to the Pan German propaganda, is heartily unpopular, not only with the Slav majority, but also with a considerable portion of the German-Magyar minority."

The paper hopes that Central European princelings will not be strewn over the Orient, for "we cannot convince ourselves that any of the 'liberated peoples' has cast longing eyes on any of the twenty-two Middle European dynasties. We do not believe that any of the many royal and ducal plans are to be realized out of the right of self-determination. It is much more probable that the monarchies erected on volcanic ground will become hearths of new internal conflicts, and that the people again will have to pay for them in blood."

Harden Says the Nations Diverge.

The extremely outspoken views of Maximilian Harden on Austrian conditions in the latest number of Die Zukunft are appropriate here. He argues that Germany's and Austria's vital interests are divergent, and scoffs at the "brilliantly organized

GIFT OF POLAND TO BIND AUSTRIA

Kaiser Thus Obtained Assent to Long-Term Agreement, Berlin Paper Says.

RULERS SELECT FOUR KINGS

New Monarchs for Conquests—Mitteleuropa Basis Sought—Teuton Liberals Protest.

LONDON, May 15.—Germany, in the course of the recent conference of Emperors William and Charles, agreed to the solution of the Polish question desired by Austria, on condition that Austria-Hungary conclude a fifteen years' convention with Germany, according to a Vienna dispatch to the Berlin Lokal-Anzeiger, received in Amsterdam. Complete union between Austria-Hungary and Poland may shortly be expected, the message adds.

German newspapers say, according to an Exchange Telegraph dispatch from Copenhagen, that the Emperors selected monarchs for Lithuania, Courland, Esthonia, and Poland.

A Vienna dispatch to the Munich Neueste Nachrichten says that the new Austro-German alliance is fixed for a period of twenty years, includes a military convention, and provides for the closest economic and customs relations.

An official dispatch from Berlin received in Amsterdam today says that now that the main lines for the cementing of the alliance between Germany and Austria have been fixed, the political, military, and economic negotiations will doubtless begin shortly. It is obvious, adds the dispatch, that the political and military arrangements can be carried through faster than the economic, which will probably take several months to complete.

The phrase in the official report of the Emperors' conference regarding the consolidation and deepening of the alliance, says the Berlin Tageblatt, permits the assumption that the aim of the convention is a close military and political union, and a complete blending of military resources.

Rulers Exchange Felicitations.

Emperor Charles has sent the following telegram to Emperor William:

"At the moment of leaving the blessed ground of the German Empire on my way home I feel impelled again to greet you warmly and to express my heartiest thanks not only for the very gracious but also for the truly friendly reception which you gave me yesterday. I am highly satisfied with our harmonious conference. From my heart and in true friendship I say may we soon meet again."

Emperor William replied:

"Many thanks for your friendly telegram. I am exceedingly glad you are so satisfied with your visit here. It is a great joy to me also to have seen you and to have established again in our detailed discussions our entire accord regarding the aims which guide us. Their realization will bring great blessings on our empires.

"I hope soon to be in a position to take advantage of your kind invitation. Hearty greetings to Zita and yourself.

"In true friendship. WILLIAM."

Both King Ludwig of Bavaria and King Frederick August of Saxony, according to a Zurich dispatch, seem to have been participants in the Great Headquarters conference of the Emperors, although apparently neither was invited to be present. This is indicated by a statement in the Munich Neueste Nachrichten, which says:

"The hour is grave, and Bavaria cannot leave Prussia to be the whole arbiter of German destinies. King Ludwig therefore decided to proceed to headquarters. The departure of the King of Saxony to take part in the negotia-

RENEW ACTIVITY NEAR YPRES

German Assaults Are Thought to Presage a Big New Attack

HOSTILE GUNS MORE ACTIVE

BRITISH RAID NEAR ROBECQ

Repulse Incursions North of Lens—French Advance Lines in Hangard Region.

WITH THE BRITISH ARMY IN FRANCE, May 15, (Associated Press.)—Hard fighting continued today in the neighborhood of Hill 44, north of Kemmel, which was stormed and retaken late yesterday by French troops. This much disputed elevation has changed hands many times recently, but the French were still holding the Germans off at 2 o'clock this afternoon.

Thus this little rise of ground from the waterlogged Flemish plain about it had suddenly come to occupy an important place in the annals of the fighting in this section of the front, although thus far it has never even been dignified with a name other than that contained in the figures indicating its height.

Its value lies in the fact that it dominates considerable territory, and for this reason it has been a thorn in the flesh of the ambitious Germans. It is believed that they want it to facilitate their next attack in this region, which bids fair to come before long.

A renewal of the German offensive on a big scale has so far not materialized. There has been an increase in the hostile artillery fire at numerous points from the northern to the southern end of the battlefront, and a break in the present lull may be expected at any time.

German Guns Active Over Wide Area.

LONDON, May 15.—German artillery has been active at various points from the Kemmel region to the areas southwest of Morlancourt on the north bank of the Somme. There has been a continuation today of local fighting north of Kemmel Village as a result of which the French troops in that sector have advanced their lines.

Last night British forces repulsed a raid north of Lens and made a successful incursion into the German lines northeast of Robecq.

Field Marshal Haig's report from British Headquarters in France tonight says:

> There was local fighting, in which the French troops captured several prisoners and successfully advanced their line early in the morning in the sector north of Kemmel Village.
> Elsewhere there was nothing beyond artillery activity on both sides on the battlefront.

Following is the text of the day bulletin:

> A raid attempted by the enemy last night north of Lens was repulsed. We carried out another successful raid northeast of Robecq (Flanders.)
> The hostile artillery was active during the night in the valleys of the Somme and Ancre, north of Bethune, and in the Forest of Nieppe sector. This morning the enemy's artillery activity increased southwest of Morlancourt and north of Kemmel.

The official statement on aerial operations issued tonight says:

> In the air fighting Tuesday six hostile machines were brought down, and one was driven down out of control. One was shot down by anti-aircraft gunfire, and one by infantry fire. Two of our machines are missing.
> On Wednesday a successful raid was made on railway station sidings at Thionville. Twenty-four heavy bombs were dropped. Bursts were observed on the railway sheds and track, and the furnaces of the Carlshutte factory, alongside the railway, were hit four times. All our machines returned safely in spite of the heavy anti-aircraft gunfire.

FRENCH GAIN NEAR HAILLES.

Capture a Wood and Hold It Against Strong Counterattacks.

PARIS, May 15.—In an attack on German positions south of Hailles (southeast of Amiens) French troops yesterday captured a wood west of the Avre River, and today held it in spite of a strong counterattack in which the Germans suffered very serious losses. Seventy prisoners were taken, including an officer.

North of the Avre there was great artillery activity today on the part of both combatants.

> During the night there was a violent bombardment in the region north of Montdidier and between Montdidier and Noyon.
> Late yesterday French troops made a vigorous attack on German positions south of Hailles and captured a wood west of the Avre, notwithstanding determined resistance by the enemy. This morning a strong German counterattack was delivered. After a spirited engagement our troops remained in entire possession of the new positions. They inflicted very serious losses losses on the Germans. The number of prisoners taken is seventy, including an officer.
> Another enemy effort south of Rollot, (southeast of Montdidier,) which was made after a heavy bombardment, met with a complete check.
> North of the Chemin des Dames the French repulsed a raiding enterprise directed against our small posts in the region of La Bovelle.
> There is nothing to report elsewhere on the front.

The bulletin issued tonight by the French War Office says:

> There was great activity on the part of both artilleries in the region north of the Avre. A raid attempted by the enemy against our trenches southeast of Juvincourt was without result.
> Two German airplanes were brought down on May 12, and two others on May 14. On the night of May 14 one of our groups bombed the railway station at Chatelet-sur-Retourne, (Ardennes,) on which 7,000 kilos of projectiles were dropped. The same night German aviators bombed the neighborhood of Dunkirk, but the damage was unimportant, and there were no casualties.

BERLIN REPORTS SUCCESSES.

Says French Suffered "Sanguinary Losses" at Kemmel.

BERLIN, May 15, (via London.)—The official communication from General Headquarters today reads:

> North of Kemmel attacks were completely successful and resulted in the bringing in of 120 prisoners. We made an attack when troops were being relieved and it cost the French sanguinary losses. The artillery duel in the Kemmel region remains intense. Early in the morning, in connection with the French thrusts, fresh infantry engagements developed there.
> Between the Lys and La Bassée Canal, on the Scarpe and near Bucquoy, the enemy artillery was lively, especially during the night.
> We made a short thrust between the Ancre and the Somme and penetrated the British lines on the Bray-Corbie road and held the territory gained against twice-repeated and strong counterattacks.
> Lively artillery activity continued for the support of the infantry. Near Villers-Bretonneux, on both sides of the Luce and the Avre, firing engagements have repeatedly revived. On the western bank of the Avre the enemy attacked our lines near Castel. He was repulsed with heavy losses.
> Our airmen yesterday shot down five enemy balloons. We have dropped numerous bombs on Calais and Dunkirk as well as the munition dépots in the rear and railway establishments of the enemy.

The official announcement from General Headquarters this evening says:

> An enemy attack this morning north of Kemmel, which was limited to penetration at one point of our foremost lines, was repulsed.

to have still maintained his hold. This Malvy, who resigned on Aug. 31, when the papers began to connect his name with the Bonnet Rouge and Duval, is to be tried by a Parliamentary court. Then there is the case of Senator Humbert, formerly part proprietor of the Journal, and the cases of other alleged "defeatist" papers, their proprietors, and editors.

Duval, who has just been sentenced to death, was the manager of the Bonnet Rouge. Until he was arrested on July 3 he conducted in his paper a campaign openly attacking the Allies of France and defending German spies. In the course of the trial, which began on April 29, he was proved to have had treasonable relations with German financial agents in Switzerland. What made these transactions easy was the fact that M. Leymarie, another defendant, was the director of the secret police which, in war time, is attached to the Ministry of the Interior, and Malvy held that portfolio. Duval was once caught coming from Switzerland by the military police with a check for $30,000. M. Leymarie obtained his release and the restoration of the check on orders, it is believed, from M. Malvy.

As to the other five defendants just convicted, Marion, Landau, and Goldsky were editors of the Bonnet Rouge, who carried out the orders received from the editor in chief, Almereyda, who, arrested in August, was either murdered or committed suicide in his cell. These three, undismayed by the arrest of Duval and the death of Almereyda, founded a paper called the Republican Trench which carried the "defeatist" propaganda to the soldiers at the front. Associated with them were Jonola and Vercasson, who also figured as defendants at the trial just closed.

The War Situation

BY THE MILITARY EXPERT OF THE NEW YORK TIMES

The question has arisen, in regard to the delay in the pending German attack, to whose advantage does this delay work out? Up to a certain point it was unquestionably to the advantage of the Allies. It will be remembered that when the fighting was at its height the Germans at the point of contact had a great numerical superiority by virtue of their concentration on the task at hand. Their artillery was also similarly concentrated, and great supplies of shells had been gathered together for the attack. The Allies, on the other hand, were in a way decentralized. They were spread out over the entire line, and held until the location of the attack had developed beyond doubt. Only then was it justifiable to weaken any section in order that another might be strengthened. The artillery was similarly situated. The concentration of men and guns in sufficient numbers to meet an attack which had been in preparation for months was a time-consuming operation. It was, however, something which had to be done, and done rapidly, without any refinements of plan such as would mark a similar movement carried out more or less at leisure.

To effect this concentration in the face of continuous and unremitting attacks was extremely difficult. The work could be most effectively interferred with by artillery fire; and the number of roads by which transport could be moved were very limited in comparison with the great volume involved. All this meant inevitable delay before the Allies could meet the Germans in proportionate strength. At this period of the battle every day that passed which did not bring disaster between sun and sun was of immeasurable value to the Allies. Delay at such a time was of the greatest moment. The longer the Germans waited the more ready the Allies would be to meet the assault that sooner or later was to come.

But with equal positiveness there was of necessity a limit to the time which must pass before the Allies were ready to meet the next German effort. Only so much time was needed to perfect their concentrations and to reinforce their lines at the weak spots. When this time had elapsed there ceased to be any advantage in the German delay. Such advantage, indeed, as there was, if there was really any, passed to Germany. To prepare for such an attack as that which was begun on the 21st of March is a long-winded affair. All preparations must be made with the greatest secrecy, and also with every detail carefully worked out and every duty assigned. It was more difficult to prepare for the second. Many divisions which had been used in the first attack had been literally cut to pieces; these had to be sent to the rear to be refitted and re-organized. There were also many shifts in divisions, those which had seen the hardest fighting being sent to the more quiet sectors, while those which had been practically en repos being sent up to the fighting zone to take their place in the battle. A new accumulation of supplies of artillery and ammunition had to be made, and this had to be done with a very imperfect transportation system—a system which had been cut to pieces, first by the retiring German Army a year ago, and again by the retreating British. New roads had to be built, also, so that when once the attack did begin again, a steady stream of supplies could be fed up to the front without interruption.

This the long delay has permitted Germany to accomplish. The situation is entirely different from Verdun, and the strategy also will be different. The probabilities are that the major engagements will not develop into struggles for local objectives, the attacks being delivered at very short intervals of not more than a few days at most. This was what was done first at Verdun and then on the Somme in 1916. It was this feature which marked the second phase of the great battles which were fought in both these sectors. In the first German attack of this year there was apparently no definitely limited objective. The whole idea was to get through. And when the second attack comes we shall undoubtedly see again the German effort directed toward the accomplishment of the same purpose. Such preparation takes time. It is a question of the delivery of a small number of extremely heavy blows rather than a number of smaller ones, and is entirely characteristic of the German tactics in the attack. The intervals, then, between attacks must of necessity be of longer duration. If the Allies could have forced the German attacks to continue—and they certainly have done all that could be done to exasperate the German command to this point—Germany would have frittered away much more of her strength than she has yet done and would have been correspondingly weaker when the heavy attack finally occurred.

Therefore, when what might be called the saturation point of the lines of the Allies had been reached; that is, when they had reached the limit of their defensive preparations, the advantage of the delay passed from them to their enemies. But this is the only advantage Germany holds. That of terrain rests with the Allies; that of numbers similarly rests with us; Germany can no longer surprise us. The game must be now a mere matter of casualties and endurance.

MAURICE'S TRIBUTE TO GENERAL FOCH

British General Depicts French Commander in Chief as a Man of Action.

EXPLAINS NEW FUNCTIONS

Copyright, 1918, by The New York Times Company.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, May 15.—The first article by Major Gen. Sir Frederick Maurice as military correspondent of The Daily Chronicle will appear in tomorrow's issue of that paper as follows:

"The Allies have at last agreed to a Generalissimo in France. The difficulties which loomed large in the way of this step have disappeared in the stress of battle. Yet they were and are very real difficulties. They have been stated frequently. But if General Foch is to receive the support which he requires to enable him to bear the great burden which rests on his shoulders it is as well that they should be restated and understood.

"While the Allies were attacking they could choose their own time and place for battle. They had in fact the initiative, and with that were at least immune from disaster. If their efforts were less completely successful than they might have been with greater co-ordination, no real crisis was produced to make necessities triumph over inconveniences.

Failure in Defense Dangerous.

"It is one of the great advantages of an offense that unless the enemy is able and ready to turn to an attack at the right moment failure may be expensive but is rarely disastrous. Failure in defense, on the other hand, usually brings with it at once most unpleasant consequences. So it came about that the Allies were able to rub along more or less successfully without a unified command until the collapse of Russia brought the great mass of the German Army to the west, and with it very real dangers to be met.

"Attempts at compromise were tried and the Versailles Executive Board was set up, but command by committee failed, as it always had, and always will fail. A military committee is no different in its psychology from committees of the business and the political world. It means discussion, delay, and compromise when decision, promptness, and determination are vital.

"In the critical days of the end of March the need for these latter became so urgent that we Allies accomplished in haste what with more foresight and with better effect we might have established at leisure, and appointed a supreme commander.

"Now the Commander in Chief of a homogeneous national army exercises his authority under established and well-recognized conditions of discipline. If he is dissatisfied with a subordinate he has the power to dismiss him. But where the Generalissimo is of another nation this cannot hold. We cannot conceive of Foch dismissing Haig or Plumer or Rawlinson. He has, therefore, to rely on his personality and the soundness of his judgment and not on rule or precedent to make his authority felt.

Greater Difficulties Still.

"And there are greater difficulties even than this. The possibility of failure has to be faced. In war our Generals are responsible to the Cabinet, who in turn are responsible to Parliament and the people for the conduct of the war. The Parliament and the people have no authority over Foch. In time of stress tempers are irritable, nerves are strained, and there is a natural desire to call someone to account. We cannot call to account an Allied General whom we have agreed to place in command.

"Then again it is easy and tempting to suggest, particularly in circumstances such as the present, that a foreign General is prone to ask too much of our troops. We see our huge casualty lists and read that our armies are bearing the brunt of the fighting, and it is natural to ask, 'Why do not the French do more?'

"Of Foch's strategy I shall have a word to say later, but I ask my readers to remember that the German blow was designed to fall upon us, that the French reserves were at first to the south of the battlefield and, therefore, naturally came up last, and that Foch's task is, while giving us such support as is necessary, to watch the enemy's reserves and to nurse his own.

"Foch assumed his functions in very critical days. The battle was at its height. The enemy threatened to sever the French and British armies and the menace to Amiens was very real. He was faced with the greatest concentration which the Germans had yet made in this war, and had in the midst of the struggle to collect a staff and organize and grip the machinery he required for control. So far we know the result. The enemy has been checked. The allied armies remain in direct touch and Amiens is still in our hands.

"Such have been the man's difficulties and achievements. We must in judging him remember exactly what we have done, and rightly done, weighing the advantages of unity against the breach of constitutional precedent and loss of national control.

Foch's Record as a Leader.

"Now, what of the man himself? No foreign commander is better known to the British Army. He fought beside us on the Marne. He commanded in the north in the bloody fighting on the Yser while we were engaged in the grim struggle of the first battle of Ypres. As the expansion of our army enabled us to hold Flanders alone he passed to the south, where in 1915 he was on our right confronting Vimy Ridge. There he began his attacks in May, working his way forward up the slopes, while we, crippled by the second battle of Ypres, could help him only by demonstrations at Festubert. Then later in the year came our turn to give him better help at Loos, where we extended the left of Foch's army which made the definite but unsuccessful attempt to gain the ridge. It was not understood at the time in England how much Lord French's and Foch's plans were intertwined.

"Next, in 1916, we find Foch again on our right on the Somme, pressing to Peronne. Then after an interval he becomes Chief of the French Staff in Paris. He had had a nasty motor accident. Office life in the great city obviously did not suit him and he appeared to be ageing, until the crisis of last March called him again into the field. Since the great German attack began I have met him three times, and each time I found him younger, more vigorous, and more confident; for, though he first made his name as a student of war and was such a Chief of the French Staff College that to have been under him there gives a special cachet to his old pupils in the French Army, and though his military writings were recognized as among the most inspiring and pregnant with thought of any published before the war, yet it is as a man of action that Foch shines.

"With his short, sturdy, alert figure, vivacious gestures, and twinkling eyes he looks what his staff affectionately term him, 'un chef.' His methods are peculiar to himself. He believes in a small staff absolutely under his control, and lives very simply and without any military ostentation whatever. He has no belief in what he calls the protocol and we red tape. In an emergency he scatters all stereotyped methods to the winds and uses any and every means which will help to gain his end.

"In France he is before all the hero of the Marne. In England lately it has often been asked what has become of Foch's great counterattacks. The man who sent from the Marne the message, 'The enemy is attacking my flanks. My rear is threatened. I am attacking in front!' may be trusted to remain on the defensive not one hour longer than prudent generalship demands."

DISPATCH TO OTTAWA WAS SIGNED BY LONG

Borden Says Erroneous Reports About Our Army Came from Colonial Secretary.

OTTAWA, May 15.—In a statement made before the House of Commons today, explaining the erroneous announcement that American troops in France were to be held until they became a "complete, powerful, self-supporting army," Premier Robert Borden said that the dispatch containing the announcement was signed by the British Secretary of State for the Colonies, the Right Hon. Walter Long. The subsequent correction of the announcement also came from the same source, he said.

Explaining why the dispatch had been given out as coming from the British War Cabinet, he said that a request had been made that the war summaries be sent to the Canadian Government under the authority of the War Cabinet and that he did not know whether the summary in question was sent by the cabinet, but that he was content to accept the statement of Lord Reading that the War Cabinet was not responsible for it.

About the middle of January, Sir Robert said, the suggestion was made to the Secretary of State for the Colonies that it would be desirable to have a weekly summary of the war situation which might be published. Secret reports had been received for some time, and the view set forth in them was entirely confined to members of the Administration, in some cases to the Prime Minister alone. A reply was received stating that the matter would be taken into consideration. About the end of March the Government was informed that a weekly dispatch would be sent in the early future. The dispatches began to come about the end of March or a little later, and when received they were handed out for publication, if marked as news items for publication. It was suggested that the news summary was not so valuable as it might be, for the reason that for the most part it set forth matters already published.

"On Saturday last," Sir Robert continued, "a news dispatch of this character was received in the ordinary course from the Governor General, signed, as all these dispatches are signed, by the Secretary of State for the Colonies, the Right Hon. Walter Long. It was handed out to the press and published in the ordinary course. Yesterday a further dispatch, correcting it, was received in the same manner, from the same source, and signed in the same way. That also has been given to the press. In communicating with the British Government in January we asked that these dispatches might be sent out to us under the authority of the War Cabinet. I do not know, of course, whether this particular dispatch was sent out by the War Cabinet, and I am content to accept the statement of Lord Reading in that behalf. He perhaps has more information on the subject than I have.

"What I desire to make clear to the House and the country is that that particular dispatch was received in the ordinary course under the arrangement reached and purporting to be sent by the Secretary of State for the Colonies. It was received in the ordinary was from the Governor General, and the dispatch which corrected it was received in the same manner, through the same source, and signed in the same way. My purpose in making this statement is to indicate to this House and to this country that if there has been any mistake or misapprehension with regard to the matter it has not occurred at Ottawa. It has occurred somewhere else."

LIVELY GUN DUELS IN ITALIAN MOUNTAINS

Rome Also Reports Active Artillery Engagements Along the Piave Front.

ROME, May 15.—The War Office communication issued today says:

> There have been lively artillery duels and patrol activity along the mountain front. Italian batteries have dispersed enemy troops on the Col Capreifef road and in the Alano Basin. There has been active artillery fighting along the Piave and in the Spresiano region.
> Italian airplanes have dropped four tons of bombs on aviation grounds in the Piave Valley.

ITALIAN HEADQUARTERS IN NORTHERN ITALY, May 15, (Associated Press.)—Enemy groups continue their attempts to approach Monte Corno and reopen the line of advance through the Val Arsa, but are repeatedly repelled by Italian batteries.

The details of the capture of the mountain by the Italians show that the fighting, although carried out by small groups, was very bloody.

A battalion of Austrian Jäger troops advanced in three columns. One succeeded in gaining a foothold in the Battasti Cañon, but a bayonet charge cleared the cañon and firmly re-established the Italian position.

The officer commanding the Arditi directed the operation until the crest of Monte Corno was taken.

While a Royal Brigade was drawn up this morning for review, on receiving the Medal of Valor, a fleet of Austrian airplanes made an audacious appearance, flying over the field. The brigade maintained perfect steadiness, and the ceremony continued while the intruders wheeled overhead, until they were driven off without having done any damage.

Baylies Downs His Ninth Airplane.

PARIS, May 15.—Sergeant Frank L. Baylies of New Bedford, Mass, a member of the French flying force, has brought down another German airplane. His score is now nine enemy machines since Feb. 19.

The NOISELESS TYPEWRITER
Two Business Men and a Girl
THEY were reading the Noiseless booklet, and they came across the photograph of the typewriter on page four.
"That's funny," said the younger of the two men. "I had an idea that the Noiseless must be some kind of a freak machine, or something. Why, that's a better looking machine than we have here in this office."
The girl nodded. "True, but don't you imagine it must be rather slow or something? It hardly seems possible that it can really be noiseless. What do you think, Mr. Smith?"
Mr. Smith was busy translating thoughts into action. "I don't know any more about the Noiseless than you do," he said, "but it certainly is worth investigating. What wouldn't we give for a quiet office!"
That's the right spirit. "See what it's like, anyway." Ten minutes trial will answer all your questions about its work—its speed—its touch—its new noiseless principle of pressure printing.

AIRCRAFT PROGRAM NOW MOVING ALONG

What Ailed It and What Is Being Done to Remedy Its Failure.

IMPROVING LIBERTY MOTOR

Meanwhile It Will Be Used Only in the Work It Is Ready For.

6 OTHER TYPES BEING MADE

By FREDERICK UPHAM ADAMS.

FIRST ARTICLE.

It is now possible to obtain a fairly clear perspective of the aircraft situation, and in this article and in others which will follow I shall attempt to make clear the reasons why we have failed to keep our oversanguine and almost boastful aviation promises to our allies, and also to point out the now obvious ways in which we may retrieve our prestige by the creation of a large and effective air fleet.

There is no longer anything to be gained by cherishing the delusion that the Liberty motor is the mechanical panacea which will win for the United States and for international democracy the mastery of the air. It is neither a monumental failure nor a decided success. It is still in the experimental stage, with scores and probably hundreds of suggested changes and hoped-for improvements yet to be incorporated and tested.

A limited number of Liberty motors have been completed according to former drawings and specifications, and these have been tested with more or less success, and a few of them shipped abroad, but it is the simple truth to state that none of the Liberty motors thus far completed and tested is deemed by the Aircraft Production Board and the Signal Corps as fit for most of the exacting requirements which must be met when our airmen cross the battle lines and meet the enemy aviators in deadly combat.

The reader need not fear that this lamentable statement will give information, aid, or comfort to the German foe. There is ample proof that the German aviation experts have been able to keep in close and accurate touch with all we have been doing and have been attempting to do with aircraft production. I am reliably informed, in fact, that German airplane manufacturers have already incorporated certain of the features of our Liberty motor in the Mercedes type, which they more commonly use, and that German planes have been brought down back of our lines in which improved details of Liberty motor construction were incorporated in their engines.

It is ten months or more since we began the slow evolution of the Liberty motor, and since the German spy and intelligence service in the United States is distressingly efficient, there is every reason to believe that any of our improvements in motor construction have been in the hands of German designers long enough ago to have permitted their use in engines now attacking us and our allies.

There is nothing unusual or uncanny about this. We invented the submarine, the airplane, perfected the rapid-fire gun, created the first specimens of heavy artillery, gave to the world the basic idea of the "tank"—these five weapons constituting the leading agencies with which the war will be won or lost—and Germany adopted all of them and went ahead with their wholesale production with all possible speed, while we did practically nothing with these creations of our American inventors and scientists until war was actually on us. It was, therefore, almost inevitable that our Liberty motor would be used against us before we could take the offensive with it.

Liberty Motor Deficiencies.

Disinterested experts inform me that the existing defects of the Liberty motor are such that the present model of it can be used only where high speeds are not vitally essential. This means that it can be used only for work in which there is slight chance that it will be attacked by swifter enemy planes. This includes its use in most types of hydroplanes, when such relatively slow fliers are used in scouting for submarines in waters so far removed from German submarine bases that they will not encounter the lighter and faster enemy planes. Thousands of such hydroplanes are being constructed for the American and other allied navies, and here is one of the places where the Liberty motor is available.

It may also be used for advanced training purposes to a certain extent, and there are other duties which it can perform, but it is a generally conceded fact in expert and official circles that the existing design of the Liberty motor precludes its general use for land fighting purposes.

This does not imply that proposed or possible changes in design may not so remedy the defects of the Liberty motor that it may equal or surpass its rivals. But this is not the time to await the fruition of the dreams of the inventor, designer, or experimenter. The Liberty motor is good enough for certain purposes. Build it in quantity for those purposes. In the meantime let the inventors, designers, and experimenters do their best to correct the defects of the Liberty motor which now limit it to the more humble duties for which it is fitted, and if successful, build the improved models in quantity later.

I am able to state with absolute certainty that such will be the policy enforced in the future. One is not permitted to quote high Washington officials by name, and I obey this injunction, but may be permitted to state that an unnamed official of unquestioned authority and ability informed me that there was pending "an absolute divorce between experiment and production in the aircraft program." More welcome news could not be announced. We have been afflicted with a Saturnalia of experimenting and a Barmecidia of production.

Our Eggs Put in One Basket.

Those who have been dismayed and distressed over the breakdown of our aviation program demand to know why those in charge of it pinned all their hopes on the success of the Liberty motor instead of supplementing its production with the largest output of the foreign types of motors possible to construct in the United States. I doubt if any justifiable excuse can be made for the adoption of such a policy. It must have been founded on the egotistical conclusion that one or a number of American automobile engine experts could surely and speedily perfect a design that would so far surpass any and all of the available foreign types that a consideration of their mechanical merits could be ignored.

It must also have been founded on the hazardous conclusion that a number of American manufacturers, experienced only in the standardized production of automobile engines, could surely and speedily master the fabrication of the wonderfully delicate and complicated aviation motors able to compete with types on which thousands of German and other foreign aircraft experts had expended years of study, and for which they had conducted tens of thousands of experiments before they were in a position to manufacture in quantity an aviation motor of proved and practical merit.

Here was the initial, colossal, and absolutely inexcusable blunder. The man who put all of his eggs in one basket and then attempted to walk a tight rope over a valley during a hurricane in order to bring relief to his starving family—whom he might easily have reached by making a slight detour—was a cautious and ultra-conservative individual compared with those who committed the aircraft fate of the United States to designers and manufacturers with slight or no experience in one of the most difficult and complicated of arts, who relied on their luck or intuition, and who scorned to take advantage of what the rest of the aircraft world had evolved after the vast expenditure of time, money and genius. Some explain what thus has happened on the ground of monumental egoism. Others prefer the excuse of monumental stupidity. I am unable to formulate a theory which will account for it.

Getting More Types Now.

However, the sure indications are that the reorganized aircraft bodies in Washington will now do what should have been done more than a year ago, viz.: Obtain quantity production of aviation motors regardless of type and country of design or manufacture, provided they are fit for battle duty and for all of the ends the Liberty motor was mistakenly proclaimed able to meet. It may be stated positively that the policy of John T. Ryan, the new head of the Aircraft Production Board, will be to take aviation motors where he can find them, and to encourage and stimulate by all fair means the quantity production in the United States or elsewhere of any domestic or foreign type of motor which will help win the war.

From now on the Liberty motor will have to stand on its own merits. It will be used where it can be used to advantage, and our aviation program will no longer be halted by awaiting its further evolution and possible eventual perfection.

It is probable that there are a number of American types of aviation motors which have been developed and tested to a point where they can speedily be put into quantity production. One of the most lamentable results of the officially announced perfection of the Liberty motor was to discourage the normal incentive of American inventors and capital to go ahead with the creation of rival motors, some one of which would put this nation to the fore in this vitally important war art. Such men had no heart to enter in competition with the officially adopted and triumphantly vaunted Liberty motor. That barrier to inventive ingenuity and mechanical skill may now be considered as removed.

In the meantime, as I shall later explain more fully, we are fortunate in being able to obtain, and, in fact, are already obtaining, a large and steadily increasing supply of foreign types of motors of the highest excellence and which are now being manufactured in quantity, in whole or in part, right here in the United States. Thus we already have at our command types of aviation motors which will help fill the void.

Six More Kinds Being Made.

Those who have assumed that we were entirely dependent on the Liberty motor will be surprised and encouraged to know that there is the highest authority for the statement that the United States Government is now receiving six types of aviation motors exclusive of the Liberty. So far as I can learn, only two of these six additional types are being delivered in quantity, viz., the Curtiss and the Hispano-Suiza, but it is pleasing to know that four others are actually in production if even in small quantities. They are said to have successfully passed the designing and experimental stage, and it may be presumed that the day is near when they can be delivered in numbers sufficient to count.

The Curtiss "O. X." engine is designed for the Curtiss plane, which is intended not for war duty but more particularly for what is known as primary training purposes. These are of relatively low power and speed, but are admirable for the initial training use which gives the aviator novice relative control and confidence. A much faster plane is required for "advanced training," and it now seems certain that the existing type of Liberty motor will not wholly serve this vital need, an unexpected and most unfortunate development, but one which may be overcome by the employment of the Hispano-Suiza and other motors provided they can be built in sufficient quantities.

The Hispano-Suiza (Spanish-Swiss) motor is of the model most generally used in France, where seventeen large manufacturing plants are working night and day in their construction. The Wright-Martin Aircraft Corporation began their production in the United States under contracts with the French Government early in 1916, more than a year before we declared war against Germany. It has completed for France 450 of these motors, and is now delivering to the United States motors of 150 horse power at the rate of 500 a month, which I consider the most encouraging bit of news yet announced concerning our aviation program.

This corporation has a contract with the United States for the production of 3,000 motors of 300 horse power each, and will fabricate them in a huge plant which it has purchased in Long Island City. Both the 150 and 300 horse power types are motors for fighting purposes, including pursuit, scouting, combat, battle, bombing, and all of the duties which can be met only by engines and planes which can face the German foe on equal or better terms.

We are also producing in this country most of the parts of the famous English engine, the Rolls-Royce, and there is reason to believe that arrangements could be made with the British Government or the manufacturers for the complete building and assembling of this motor in the United States. We are now getting none of this product.

There is also being manufactured in this country the Bugatti motor. The Duesenburg Corporation is filling a large order of these Bugatti motors for the French Government, and I am informed that deliveries have been made or can be made in quantities to the United States.

Concerning the positive identity and manufacturing position of the other corporations declared to be delivering motors I have no accurate information, but the facts just stated are highly encouraging in proof that our success in aircraft war work is not confined to the performance of the Liberty motor, and that we can send abroad a large and steadily increasing supply of fighting planes regardless of the complications which seem to surround our overadvertised attempt to win the war with a motor which has existed too much only on paper and in ever-changing specifications.

QUIDDE DENIES PROPOSALS.

Says He Made No Peace Offers to Professor Herron.

AMSTERDAM, May 15.—Professor Quidde of Munich, in a statement to Berlin newspapers, supplements the denial recently made by the semi-official North German Gazette that he had been officially commissioned in Germany to make the peace offers which the London Daily Mail recently reported him to have extended to Professor Herron, an American living in Geneva, for transmission to President Wilson.

Professor Quidde, in this statement, denies that he made any peace proposals to Professor Herron for transmission to President Wilson or any one else.

Intimate Details of Liberty Motor Revealed In Official Statement by War Department

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 15.—The War Department today issued its first authorized statement regarding details of construction of the Liberty motor. It discloses that the Liberty motor was a combination of many motors. The statement reads:

"The designs of the parts of the Liberty engine were based on the following:

"Cylinder.—The designers of the cylinders for the Liberty engine followed the practice used in the German Mercedes, English Rolls Royce, French Lorraine Dietrich, and Italian Isotta Fraschini before the war and during the war. The cylinders are made of steel inner shells, surrounded by pressed steel water jackets. The Packard Company by long experiment had developed a method of applying these steel water jackets. The valve cages are drop forgings welded into the cylinder head. The principal departure from European practice is in the location of the holding-down flange, which is several inches above the mouth of the cylinder, and the unique method of manufacture evolved by the Ford Company. The output is now approximately seventeen hundred cylinder forgings per day.

"Cam Shaft and Valve Mechanism Above Cylinder Heads.—The design of the above is based on the Mercedes, but was improved for automatic lubrication, without wasting oil, by the Packard Motor Car Company.

"Cam Shaft Drive.—The cam shaft drive was copied almost entirely from the Hall-Scott motor; in fact, several of the gears used in the first sample engines were supplied by the Hall-Scott Motor Car Company. This type of drive is used by Mercedes, Hispano-Suiza, and others.

Angle of Forty-five Degrees.

"Angle Between Cylinders.—In the Liberty the included angle between the cylinders is forty-five degrees; in all other existing twelve-cylinder engines it is sixty degrees. This feature is new with the Liberty engine, and was adopted for the purpose of bringing each row of cylinders nearer the vertical and closer together, so as to save width and head resistance. By the narrow angle greater strength is given to the crank case and vibration is reduced.

"Electric Generator and Ignition.—A Delco ignition system is used. It was especially designed for the Liberty engine, to save weight and to meet the special conditions due to firing twelve cylinders, with an included angle of forty-five degrees.

"Pistons.—The pistons of the Liberty engine are of Hall-Scott design.

"Connecting Rods.—Forked or straddle type connecting rods, first used on the French De Dion car and on the Cadillac motor car in this country, are used.

"Crank Shaft.—Crank shaft design followed the standard twelve-cylinder practice, except as to oiling. Crank case follows standard practice. The forty-five degree angle and the flange location on the cylinders made possible a very strong box section.

"Lubrication.—The first system of lubrication followed the German practice of using one pump to keep the crank case empty, delivering into an outside reservoir, and another pump to force oil under pressure to the main crank-shaft bearings. This lubrication system also followed the German practice in allowing the overflow in the main bearings to travel out the face of the crank cheeks to a scupper, which collected this excess for crank-pin lubrication. This is very economical in the use of oil and is still the standard German practice.

"The present system is similar to the first practice, except that the oil, while under pressure, is not only fed to main bearings, but through holes inside of crank cheeks to crank pins, instead of feeding these crank pins through scuppers. The difference between the two oiling systems consists of carrying oil for the crank pins through a hole inside the crank cheek, instead of up the outside face of the crank cheek.

"Propeller Hub.—The Hall-Scott propeller hub design was adapted to the power of the Liberty engine.

"Carbureter.—A Carbureter was developed by the Zenith company for the Liberty engine.

"Bore and Stroke.—The bore and stroke of the Liberty engine is 5x7 inches, the same as the Hall-Scott A-5 and A-7 engines, and as in the Hall-Scott twelve-cylinder engine.

Development of the Engine.

"Remarks.—The idea of developing Liberty engines of four, six, eight, and twelve cylinders with the above characteristics was first thought of about May 25, 1917. The idea was developed in conference with representatives of the British and French missions May 28 to June 1, and was submitted in the form of sketches at a joint meeting of the Aircraft (Production) Board and the Joint Army and Navy Technical Board June 4. The first sample was an eight-cylinder model, delivered to the Bureau of Standards July 3, 1917. The eight-cylinder model, however, was never put into production, as advices from France indicated that demands for increased power would make the eight-cylinder model obsolete before it could be produced.

"Work was then concentrated on the twelve-cylinder engine, and one of the experimental engines passed the fifty-hour test Aug. 25, 1917.

"After the preliminary drawings were made engineers from the leading engine builders were brought to the Bureau of Standards, where they inspected the new designs and made suggestions, most of which were incorporated in the final design. At the same time expert production men were making suggestions that would facilitate production.

"The Liberty twelve-cylinder engine passed the fifty-hour test, showing, as the official report of Aug. 25, 1917, records, 'that the fundamental construction is such that very satisfactory service, with a long life and high order of efficiency, will be given by this power plant, and that the design has passed from the experimental stage into the field of proven engines.'

"An engine committee was organized informally, consisting of engineers and production managers of the Packard, Ford, Cadillac, Lincoln, Marmon, and Trego companies. This committee met at frequent intervals, and it is to this group of men that the final development of the Liberty engine is largely due."

WILSON ASKS FOR VOTE OF CONFIDENCE

Cordially and sincerely yours,

WOODROW WILSON.

Hon. Thomas Martin, United States Senate.

Action of Senate Committee.

The outspoken opposition of the President to the Chamberlain resolution put an entirely new complexion upon the aircraft situation as it had been developing in the Senate. While Senators Thompson of Kansas, and Jones of New Mexico, Democratic members of the Audit Committee, had been willing, before the President's letter reached the Senate, to vote to report the resolution, with modifications so as to eliminate a broad investigation into the conduct of the war, they at once shifted, putting themselves on record as against reporting it. But the Senators were counterchecked by Senators Smoot of Utah and France of Maryland, Republicans. These, with Mr. McKellar, Democrat, at a conference of the committee during the morning, voted to report the resolution with "conduct of the war" eliminated, but with a proviso that the inquiry, besides going into aircraft, should embrace ordnance production and the Quartermaster General's Department.

Senators Thompson and Jones tried to persuade their confreres on the Audit Committee against reporting the Chamberlain resolution, whether amended or not, arguing that the Senate ought to defer to the wish of the President. The three Senators on the other side argued that President Wilson's objection to an inquiry into the conduct of the war was met with the elimination of that from the resolution, and that an insistent demand had sprung up in the Senate for an inquiry into aircraft and other features of the war activity.

Senator Thompson insisted that the President had indicated in his letter to Senator Martin that he felt that the passage of the Chamberlain resolution, or one similar to it, would show lack of confidence in the Administration. This failed to move the three Senators, who maintained that it was the duty of Congress to conduct investigations. This one was needed, they argued, to "clear the air."

The Resolution as Amended.

Against the opposition of Senators Thompson and Jones, the committee voted to report the Chamberlain resolution, amended by Senator Smoot, to read as follows:

> Resolved, that the Committee on Military Affairs, or any subcommittee thereof, be and is hereby authorized and directed to inquire into and report to the Senate the progress of aircraft and ordnance production in the United States, or into the status of the Quartermaster General's supplies or expenditures in any of those branches of the War Department; that said committee, or any subcommittee thereof, may sit during the sessions or during any recess of the Senate; to require by subpoena or otherwise the attendance of witnesses and the production of books, documents and papers; to take the testimony of witnesses under oath, either orally or by deposition; to obtain documents, papers and other information from the several departments of the Government or any bureau thereof; to employ stenographic help, at a cost not to exceed $1 per printed page, to report such testimony as may be necessary; to employ such agents or assistants as may be necessary; and that all expenses, including traveling expenses, contracted hereunder, shall be paid from the contigent fund of the Senate, not exceeding the sum of $10,000; provided that nothing in this resolution shall be held to authorize the Military Affairs Committee to take over or in any manner direct or superintend the executive branch of the Government in the conduct of the war.

The amended resolution differs from the original in striking out the phrase, "or into any other matters relating to the conduct of the war by or through the War Department," and the insertion of the proviso for investigating ordnance and "the status of the Quartermaster General's supplies or expenditures in any of these branches of the War Department." Otherwise the phraseology is identical with that of the resolution as offered by Senator Chamberlain, except that $10,000 is stipulated for expenses.

Will Make a Minority Report.

After the vote of the Audit Committee Senators Thompson and Jones announced that they would submit a minority report opposing the Chamberlain resolution in any form.

Explaining his attitude tonight, Senator Thompson said the Military Affairs Committee already had ample authority to conduct any investigation of the War Department and that further delegation of power by the Senate would be superfluous.

"I intend to abide by what the President asks," said Senator Thompson. "He feels that no more authority is needed for the Military Affairs Committee, and he has put himself plainly in opposition to the resolution offered by Senator Chamberlain. There is no equivocation about it. I intend doing what I can to defeat the resolution in the Senate."

Asked if the President had not told him at the White House last evening that he did not object to the aircraft investigation, Senator Thompson replied that that was true.

"He has not written in his letter to Senator Martin that he is opposed to an aircraft inquiry," said Senator Thompson. "He simply says he is against the Chamberlain resolution or any other like it. He does not question the right of the Military Affairs Committee to go ahead with the inquiry it began last Winter. He merely says he would regard the passing of the Chamberlain resolution as indicating want of confidence in the Administration. That is enough for me."

While the committee was in session Senator Thompson, its Chairman, sent for Senator Chamberlain, Chairman of the Military Affairs Committee. Mr. Chamberlain soon appeared. Mr. Thompson told him the committee wanted him to explain the scope of his resolution. Senator Chamberlain started to reply, when Senator Jones broke in, suggesting that a stenographer be called to take down what the Oregon Senator had to say.

This angered Senator Chamberlain. Turning to Senator Jones he demanded:

"What do you mean by that? Is that the way you treat Chairmen of Senate committees here?"

"We merely want to get what you say down in the record," explained Senator Jones.

"Well, whatever I have to say for the record I'll say on the floor of the Senate," retorted Senator Chamberlain.

The stenographer was not sent for.

Senator Thompson asked Senator Chamberlain to explain the underlying reason for an inquiry into aircraft and other war production at this time.

"If you want to know the reason for it, you'll have to go back to the reports of the Military Affairs Committee's hearings last Winter," snapped Senator Chamberlain. "It's all clear enough."

Statement by Senator Chamberlain.

The Oregon Senator was not detained. Later in the day Senator Chamberlain put forth a statement in which he went into the reason for offering his resolution, as follows:

"It was not the purpose of the Military Affairs Committee or any member of it, when Senate Rostlution 241 was prepared and introduced, to interfere in the least with the constitutional powers and prerogatives of the President in the conduct and management of the war. Charges and countercharges have been made from time to time in reference to the loyalty, the efficiency, and the methods of some of those who have had immediate charge of aircraft production. Notwithstanding the fact that a report on this subject has been presented to the Senate by the Military Affairs Committee, these charges will not down. As a matter of fact, they have increased in frequency since that report was filed, and by the fact that other reports along the same lines have been made upon this same subject.

"To avoid seeming injustice, I want to say that no charges have been made reflecting either upon General Squier or Admiral Taylor of the Aircraft Production Board, but some of those responsible for aircraft production for the army have been charged with gross extravagance, and there is little if anything to show, so far as production is concerned, for the immense sums of money that have been spent in the production of aircraft.

"Charges and countercharges have been made with reference to the manufacture of ordnance, delays have been suggested which might have been cured, and it has been charged, too, that there has been extravagance in this department and that the production of ordnance might be speeded up by an inquiry which would let the people know the status thereof.

"In some other branches of the service the conditions are the same; and yet it is but fair to say that conditions seem to be improving in these several branches of the service, and it is hoped that the time will soon come when quantity production will become an accomplished fact and the needs of the army for the successful prosecution of the war met.

No Purpose to Interfere.

"The purpose of the resolution in question was to broaden the power of the committee to ascertain the facts with reference to these subjects which I have mentioned, including, of course, the Quartermaster's Department and the question of the cross-license agreement entered into with reference to the production of aircraft, and it was not the purpose of any member of the committee to interfere with the Administration in the conduct of the war in any way whatever, but to ascertain how the appropriations were being expended and what the progress of manufacture and delivery was along the line indicated.

"The President has no more ardent supporters in the United States than the Senators comprising the Military Affairs Committee of the Senate; in all they have done, their single purpose has been to aid, and not to hinder, and I think the country pretty generally understands that the results of their efforts have been to aid rather than to hinder.

"During the civil war the joint committee of the Senate and House was an entirely different committee from the Military Affairs Committee of the Senate, and its purpose was broader and its work extended over a very much broader field. That committee inquired into victories and defeats of the army, the character, and quality of the personnel thereof, and a multitude of subjects which this committee has never had any idea of inquiring into; nor does the resolution propose any such inquiry, nor that the committee shall in any way interfere with the military control of the army. The Military Affairs Committee has no such purpose as this in view, and some, at least, of the members of the committee thought it was but accepting the invitation of the President in his letter to Senator Thomas some days ago when he proposed a further investigation into the subjects under consideration. In that letter it will be remembered the President said:

> You were kind enough to consult me the other day about the wholesale charges in regard to the production of aircraft which have been lodged by Mr. Gutzon Borglum. I take the liberty of writing you this letter in order to say more formally what I said to you then informally, namely, that every instrumentality at the disposal of the Department of Justice will be used to investigate and pursue charges of dishonesty, or malversion of any kind, if the allegations made by Mr. Borglum are considered worthy of serious consideration, and I sincerely hope that the matter will be treated as one for searching official investigation by the constituted authorities of the Government.

"The Military Affairs Committee is a co-ordinate branch of the Government, a part of the constituted authoity thereof, and is one of the facilities that propose to carry out the request of the President as contained in that letter, for an investigation, to the utmost of its ability and in perfectly good faith.

"I regret exceedingly that the President feels that a vote for this resolution or for the resolution in a modified form as it may be modified by the committee and by the Senate would be looked upon by him as an act of disloyalty to him."

Baker Welcomes Complete Inquiry.

Senator Thomas of Colorado, a member of the Military Affairs Committee, made public today a letter he had received from Secretary of War Baker in which the aid of the War Department was offered in any investigation the Military Affairs Committee might make. The letter, dated last Saturday, read:

War Department,
Washington, May 11, 1918.

My Dear Senator: I have received your letter of May 10, enclosing a copy of Senate Resolution 241, introduced by Senator Chamberlain, providing for the investigation by the Military Affairs Committee of the Senate of the progress of aircraft production and into any other matters relating to the conduct of the war by or through the War Department. I do not know how far additional powers are needed by the Military Affairs Committee of the Senate, and clearly the War Department could have no wish adverse to the most complete inquiry by the Senate Military Affairs Committee. I point out, however, that every facility which the War Department has is freely at the disposal of the Senate Military Affairs Committee, whether any additional authority is conferred by resolution or not. Respectfully yours,

NEWTON D. BAKER,
Secretary of War.

Hon. William H. Thompson, United States Senate.

"The Secretary of War does not seem opposed to the contemplated investigation," said Senator Thomas. "I do not believe, from a talk I had with the President yesterday, that Mr. Wilson is opposed to an aircraft or ordnance investigation. My understanding, from what he said, is that he favors having any such inquiry confined to the War Department. I think the Military Affairs Committee will go ahead."

The amended Chamberlain resolution will be reported to the Senate probably tomorrow. Judging from opinion expressed in the lobby today, it will be adopted. The sentiment in the Senate for a reopening of the Military Affairs Committee's investigation is pronounced. Democratic and Republican leaders alike predicted tonight that not only would the inquiry be authorized, but that the Military Affairs Committee undoubtedly would have all the funds it wanted. While in the Chamberlain resolution as amended $10,000 is allowed for expenses, it was explained that this limit was fixed only because that was the amount available in the contingent fund. If more is needed, the Senate will have to vote it later on.

HUGHES APPOINTED AS INVESTIGATOR

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 15.—On President Wilson's invitation, Charles E. Hughes, ex-Governor of New York and ex-Justice of the United States Supreme Court, who was Mr. Wilson's opponent for President in 1916, will act with Attorney General Gregory in investigating the charges of graft, inefficiency, and pro-German tendencies directed against the military aircraft administration by Gutzon Borglum, the sculptor. Announcement of the designation of Mr. Hughes was formally made this afternoon.

It is believed here that no recent act of President Wilson will bring more praise than this recognition of his late political opponent. By the appointment of Mr. Hughes the President has taken the ground from under the feet of those disposed to criticise the fact that he had placed the investigation of the Borglum charges in the hands of one of his Cabinet, who had turned over the detailed work of the inquiry to an official aid, Assistant Attorney General William L. Frierson, the junior member of the Attorney General's immediate staff.

With Mr. Hughes as investigator, backed by his high reputation as a jurist and legal examiner, and the additional fact that he is a political opponent of the President, whose administration he did not hesitate to criticise severely in the 1916 national campaign, there is hardly any likelihood that even the most active partisan antagonists of the President will find ground for complaint that the investigation will not be conducted with complete regard for getting at the facts and making a report that will show neither fear nor favor.

It is being suggested that the designation of Mr. Hughes will minimize the importance of the inquiry which the Senate Committee on Military Affairs has undertaken into the aircraft production program. Mr. Hughes will conduct a legal investigation under the nominal direction of the Attorney General with a view to ascertaining whether the Borglum charges justify criminal proceedings.

The Invitation and the Reply.

President Wilson's letter to Mr. Hughes, which was furnished to the press by the Committee on Public Information with the statement that its issuance was authorized by the President, reads:

May 13, 1918.

My Dear Judge Hughes:

You have doubtless noticed that very serious charges of dishonesty have been made in connection with the production of aircraft.

Because of the capital importance of this branch of the military service, I feel that these charges should be thoroughly investigated and with as little delay as possible, in order that the guilty, if there be any such, may be promptly and vigorously prosecuted and that the reputations of those whose actions have been attacked may be protected, in case the charges are groundless.

I requested the Department of Justice to use every instrumentality at its disposal to investigate these charges, and, with the approval of the Attorney General, I am writing to beg that you will act with him in making this investigation. I feel that this is a matter of the very greatest importance, and I sincerely hope that you will feel that it is possible to contribute your very valuable services in studying and passing upon the questions involved.

Cordially and sincerely yours,
WOODROW WILSON.

Hon. Charles E. Hughes, 9 Broadway, New York City.

Mr. Hughes's response, the publication of which was also authorized by President Wilson, follows:

New York, May 15, 1918.

The President, the White House.

My Dear Mr. President:

I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of May 13. Appreciating fully the gravity of the matter, I shall be glad to co-operate with the Attorney General in making a prompt and thorough investigation of the charges of dishonesty in connection with aircraft production. You may be assured that nothing will give me greater pleasure than to render any assistance within my power. I assume that the Attorney General will advise me of his wishes for a conference with a view to the making of definite and adequate plans for the investigation, and I shall endeavor to arrange my affairs so that these plans may be carried out with as little delay as possible.

I remain, with great respect,
Very sincerely yours,
CHARLES E. HUGHES.

Brandegee Rebuffs Borglum.

In the Senate today Senator Brandegee of Connecticut presented a telegram from Mr. Borglum asking Mr. Brandegee to place before the Senate Mr. Borglum's denial of the charges made by Kenyon Mix of the Dodge Manufacturing Company to the effect that while Mr. Borglum was engaged in making an inquiry into his own charges by authority of President Wilson he was negotiating with the Dodge Company with a view to starting an airplane production concern which would have the advantage of information obtained by Mr. Borglum from the Government in his capacity of investigator.

Senator Brandegee informed the Senate that he declined to present Mr. Borglum's statement and would return it to him. In a statement issued in Washington last week, Mr. Borglum had said that Senator Brandegee would place before the Senate on Tuesday or Wednesday evidence to refute the testimony of Mr. Mix and Henry Harrison Suplee, the consulting engineer of the Dodge Company.

Stamford, Conn., May 14, 1918.

Senator Frank B. Brandegee:

I shall have delivered to you between two and three tomorrow (Wednesday) my denial of Mix's slanderous charges presented by Senator Thomas. Please place this reply before the Senate and oblige, yours faithfully,

GUTZON BORGLUM.

Mr. Brandegee was brief in his explanation of why he would not serve Mr. Borglum.

"I think Mr. Borglum labors under a misapprehension as to my function in this matter," he said. "I do not know what Mr. Borglum's charges are or what his affidavits are. I do not know anything about the evidence that he may have. He says he is going to send me some papers. I do not feel that it is my duty to lay before the Senate a whole lot of affidavits and assertions and charges. Therefore, if these documents are received by me through messenger or otherwise, I shall return them to Mr. Borglum and tell him that he had better take them to the Military Affairs Committee, if the Senate shall authorize that committee to make an investigation."

LIMIT PRESIDENT'S POWER.

Mrs. Wilson's "No," He Says Clearly Marks Its Boundary.

WASHINGTON, May 15.—There are some arbitrary limitations on even the wartime powers of President Wilson. At the flying field here today, watching the departure of the first airplane mail carrier to New York, the President posed for motion pictures. After once passing through the ordeal, he was asked to pose once more with Mrs. Wilson. The President conferred with his wife and then replied:

"Mrs. Wilson says 'No,' and you know, boys, my authority stops there."

FIRST AIR MAIL IN WASHINGTON

his impressions of the front, one addressed to the President and the other to Postmaster General Burleson.

Among the mail carried by Lieutenant Webb was the first letter postmarked for air delivery. It was from Governor Whitman assuring President Wilson of this State's support for the coming Red Cross drive.

There were also letters from Postmaster Patten to President Wilson and Postmaster General Burleson, congratulating them upon the beginning of the air mail service, and a letter to Secretary of the Navy Daniels, in which the officers and the men of the Pelham Bay Training Camp gave him a "hearty invitation" to attend the opening performance of an entertainment, "Biff Bang," to be given by the enlisted men of the camp at the Century Theatre.

Expects Atlantic to be Crossed This Year.

Discussing the significance of the departure of Lieutenant Webb, President Hawley of the Aero Club said in part:

"This day will go down in history as marking the advent of a new epoch because this New York-Philadelphia-Washington aerial mail line is the forerunner of a network of aerial mail lines which will cover the entire world and will be a dominant factor in the reconstruction that will follow the war. Progress in aeronautics in the last eighteen years has been enormous. The marvelous flights of the giant Caproni and Handley Page air cruisers give an idea of what we may expect in the coming twelve months. The flight of 1,000 miles without stopping made recently by a squadron of Caproni triplanes, and the flight of a Handley Page biplane from London to the Dardanelles, 2,000 miles, with several stops but no mechanical trouble, carrying five passengers and spare parts, complete camping equipment, provisions, and bombs, are but some of the hundreds of such performances. The tendency is toward large machines, larger and larger. I feel certain that before the year is over we shall see airplanes equipped with more than 2,000 horse power, which will be capable of flying across the Atlantic."

Byron Newton in his address at Belmont Park predicted that the establishment of a regular passenger airplane route was not far distant.

"The aerial mail service," he said, "ought to be called the cloudland mail."

Postmaster Patten declared that the "moment was historical" in that the first flight of the aerial mail service marked a new epoch in the transmission of intelligence.

After the departure of Lieutenant Webb for Philadelphia most of the spectators who had assembled to see him off lingered to welcome the arrival of the first air mail for New York. At 3:30 P. M. Lieutenant Culver's plane came into view from the south, and a convoy of seven airplanes soared into the sky from Mineola to meet him, forming a wide circle around the arriving courier, darting and diving like birds at play.

Within seven minutes after his first appearance Lieut. Culver made a perfect landing, hauled two mail pouches out of his machine, and turned them over to a waiting postal clerk. The clerk threw them into a Post Office automobile and sped off to the special train which was waiting at the Queens Station of the Long Island Railroad. The mail arrived at the Post Office at Thirty-third Street and Eighth Avenue at 4:12 o'clock, and was being distributed to the stations at 4:18. The air route mail from Philadelphia beat railroad time by about an hour and fifteen minutes.

Lieutenant Culver flew in a direct line from Philadelphia to Belmont Park. He declared that his trip was uneventful, and that he had encountered no difficult air conditions.

According to the Post Office officials the air route will be in operation every day, except Sundays and when weather conditions make flying dangerous. The schedule provides for the departure of one plane daily from Washington and New York at 11:30 in the morning. With the perfected relay at Philadelphia it should not take more than three hours for mail from Washington to reach New York. The fastest railway service between the two cities consumes about five hours.

To "plane post" a letter will cost 24 cents an ounce, including special delivery. At present the new 24-cent stamp for airplane mail can be obtained only at the Post Office, at Eighth Avenue and Thirty-third Street, but it will soon be placed on sale at all substations. Ordinary stamps, however, will serve if the letter or package is marked "For Airplane Service."

For the present it is the intention of the Post Office Department to accept only first-class mail for transmission. Small parcels, however, whose dimensions do not exceed thirty inches, combined length and girth, will also be carried. Inasmuch as the 24-cent stamp includes special delivery after the letter arrives in the city to which it is addressed, the air mail service costs only 11 cents more than a special delivery letter by train.

The War Department has furnished twelve large training planes for use in the new service and aviators have been detailed from the regular service. The planes are built along the lines of the regulation bombing machine and are "one seaters," as a maximum of space is desired for storing mail. It is estimated that an airplane carrying 300 pounds of mail will bring a revenue of $1,152 for each trip. When the planes carrying 675 pounds of mail are ready the revenue from each trip, if a capacity load is carried, will be $2,592.

On days when the weather forbids flight the mail sacks will be forwarded by rail and distributed by special delivery. Otto Praeger, Second Assistant Postmaster General, has expressed the belief that sufficient experience will be gained during the Summer to make it possible to maintain the service through the Winter. As the present routes are developed, it is the aim of the department to extend the service to other parts of the country, the route from New York to Boston being the next most likely avenue of air service.

PRESIDENT SEES START OF AIR POSTAL SERVICE

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 15.—The first regular air mail service in the world was inaugurated today between Washington, Philadelphia and New York.

Three of the four airplanes utilized delivered safely and on time the mail intrusted to their care. One of the planes, the one which left the Polo Grounds in Washington this morning in the presence of President and Mrs. Wilson, Postmaster General Burleson and other high officials was forced to land in Maryland after it had made a brilliant start.

This machine was piloted by Lieutenant George L. Boyle. He left Washington at 11:50 o'clock, and less than twenty minutes later he had landed at Waldorf, Md. Philadelphia was notified, and the machine into which the mail carried by Lieutenant Boyle's machine was to have been transferred at Philadelphia left for New York in charge of Lieutenant Paul Culver.

The two aviators with the first consignment of air mail from New York to Washington completed their job successfully. Lieutenant Torrey H. Webb, who started from New York this morning, transferred his mail to a second machine which Lieutenant James C. Edgerton successfully piloted to Washington, arriving at the Polo Grounds here at 2:50 this afternoon.

Lieutenant Boyle left the Polo Grounds this morning seventeen minutes behind schedule time. As he entered the airplane bouquets of flowers, the gifts of President and Mrs. Wilson and of Postmaster General and Mrs. Burleson, were handed to him by the Postmaster General. There were four sacks of mail in the machine, three for New York and one for Philadelphia, weighing in all 150 pounds. The delay in departure was chiefly due to a wait for gasoline.

Lieutenant Edgerton, who piloted the machine from Philadelphia to Washington, landed at the Polo Field at 2:50 o'clock this afternoon. He was twenty minutes behind his schedule and brought 5,000 letters from New York, as well as a number from Philadelphia. Shortly after 3 o'clock letters brought by this plane were delivered to President Wilson at the White House and to Postmaster General Burleson.

Among the letters received by Postmaster General Burleson was one from John Wanamaker, who served as Postmaster General during the Harrison Administration. The letter, which was mailed in Philadelphia, follows:

Private Office, John Wanamaker,
Philadelphia, Penn., May 14, 1918.

Hon. Albert S. Burleson, Postmaster General of the United States.

My Dear Sir: It will not seem intrusive for the oldest Postmaster General to offer his congratulations to the Postmaster General of the United States, in whose administration the great war mail service emergency has been so well organized and conducted, and to whom has come the greater and ever to be memorable privilege of inaugurating an airplane mail service.

As the head of the postal system for four years I labored industriously to take the first steps in the parcel post and the postal savings, to accomplish the greatest forward step of all—the Government ownership and control of the telegraph and telephone—in which I failed mainly on political grounds.

I very earnestly hope that you will add to your honors and usefulness in gaining for the people of the United States a governmental guardianship of their personal correspondence by wire, which can only be attained by ownership, which would result in undoubted economies and much reduced rates to a hundred millions of people.

I have the honor to remain your obedient servant,

JOHN WANAMAKER.

Of the letters received by Postmaster General Burleson, the first one that reached him was from W. C. Burton, Postmaster of Brooklyn, N. Y. It reads:

Office of the Postmaster,
Brooklyn, N. Y., May 15, 1918.

Hon. A. S. Burleson, Postmaster General, Washington, D. C.

My Dear General Burleson: I desire to extend my hearty congratulations to you upon the inauguration of the aerial mail service between New York, Philadelphia and Washington.

It is one more achievement of the most enlightened and progressive postal administration ever enjoyed by this or any other country. I wish for this new service unbounded success and rapid extension.

With best wishes for your health and long continuance in the great office, which you have administered with farsighted vision and great advantage to the American people, with much regard,

Yours sincerely,

WALTER C. BURTON.

297 Madison Avenue.
New York, May 15, 1918.

Hon. Albert S. Burleson, Postmaster General, Washington, D. C.

My Dear Mr. Burleson: The Aero Club of America sends you a message of greeting by the first aero post leaving New York for Washington.

We sincerely hope and confidently believe that the aerial mail route inaugurated between New York, Philadelphia, and Washington, which carries this message to you, is the forerunner of a network of aero mail lines which will cover the entire world, and will be a dominant factor in the reconstruction that will follow the war.

The rapid development of flying over the land will soon be followed by extended flights over the sea, and we will soon have large aeroplanes crossing the Atlantic, which will lead to the establishing of transatlantic aerial mail lines as well as the delivery of airplanes from the United States to our allies by air.

We extend our most hearty congratulations upon the inaugurating of aero mail service, thus adding the facilities of aerial navigation to another great department of the Government. The Aero Club of America has fostered the development of aeronautics for thirteen years, and has urged and supported the carrying of mail by airplanes since 1911.

Yours very sincerely and cordially,

ALAN R. HAWLEY,
President Aero Club of America.

Still another of the letters read:

Office of the Postmaster,
New York, N. Y., May 14, 1918.

Hon. A. S. Burleson, Postmaster General, Washington, D. C.

Permit me to offer you my sincere congratulations upon the inauguration of the airplane mail service, which will stand as a permanent record of a fine achievement in your administration and is an enduring memorial of progress in the department in expediting mail transportation.

Very truly yours,

T. E. PATTEN,
Postmaster.

Second Assistant Postmaster General Praeger, speaking of the inauguration of the airplane mail flights today, said:

"Three of the airplanes in the New York-Washington aerial mail route successfully completed their work, with the result that letters mailed up to 11 A. M. in New York and up to noon in Philadelphia were delivered by 4:15 P. M. in Washington, and made railroad connections for nearly every State in the Union up to eight hours in advance of the quickest service that could have been given by railroad.

"This service will be operated day after day excepting Sundays, and when all the reserve airplanes have been placed and the aviators have become familiar with the route and program of flying, the service must increase in efficiency, speed, and dependability. Especially will there be a marked reduction in time of flight between the three cities when the larger machines with the higher power engines are in operation.

"As in all pioneer work dealing with unknown and uncertain factors, there will be occasional accidents and temporary interruptions, but every preparation has been made for such emergency in the way of extra landing fields, special automobile facilities at every point between New York and Washington, and the stationing of reserve airplanes, with a view to reducing unavoidable delays to a minimum.

"The Signal Corps of the army and the Post Office Department will each do its full share of the work, and it only remains for the public to give us co-operation toward making this new and difficult project a success."

The following official order regarding the new air mail service was promulgated tonight:

"Airplane mail service between Washington, Philadelphia, and New York was established May 15, 1918—the rate of postage is 24 cents per ounce or fraction thereof, including special delivery service.

"Mail by airplane from New York arriving at Philadelphia not later than 1:30 P. M. will connect with earlier trains than those conforming to train schedules for Atlantic City and Cape May, N. J.; Chester, Reading, and Pottsville, Penn.; Wilmington, Del., and Port Deposit, Md.

"Mail by airplane arriving at Washington by 3:30 P. M. would make connections with the Baltimore & Ohio train leaving Washington at 4 P. M. for Cumberland, Grafton, Wheeling, Pittsburgh, Cincinnati, and St. Louis. It would also make connection with the Southern Railroad train leaving Washington at 4:15 P. M. for Charlottesville, Lynchburg, and Danville, Va.; Greensboro, Salisbury, and Charlotte, N. C.; Atlanta, Ga.; Birmingham, Ala., and intermediate points.

"Mail by airplane from Washington will connect at Philadelphia with earlier trains for Trenton, Atlantic City, and Cape May, N. J.; East Stroudsburg, Chester, Reading, Pottsville, and Bethlehem, Penn., and Wilmington, Del., and intervening points.

"Mail by airplane from Washington and Philadelphia arriving at New York before 3:30 P. M. will make connections for Bridgeport and New Haven, Conn.; Springfield and Boston, Mass.; Albany, Syracuse, Rochester, and Buffalo, N. Y.; Cleveland and Toledo, Ohio; Elkhart, Ind., and Chicago and intervening points.

"The fastest time between Washington and New York by train is five hours; by airplane two and a half to three hours.

"Mail can be sent by airplane from New York to any city which has mail connection with Philadelphia or Washington, from Washington to any city which can be reached by mail connection from Philadelphia or New York, and from Philadelphia to any city which can be reached through mail connections at New York or Washington.

"OTTO PRAEGER,
"Second Assistant Postmaster General."

Times Office, —
New York, Dec 4, 1835

Dear Sir

We take the liberty to enclose announcements from the Courier & Enquirer and Journal of Commerce, of this city, of an intention on the part of those establishments to have reporters at Washington, and to run an express by which to give the proceedings of Congress a day in advance of the Times and other morning papers

It is not probable that the Courier and Journal will have to bear the expence themselves. The hope is, no doubt, that those papers will eagerly be sought for by all classes on account of the late information they will thus obtain, and that an opportunity will be afforded to promulgate doctrines, under the form of Congressional news, that will have a favourable bearing in relation to the success of their favourite candidates at the Presidential Election for the next term.

The Courier, it is known, has already declared itself in favour of Mr Webster. It is backed (as is the Journal) by most of the mercantile and paper money power in the city, and its principal Editor is reckless of expence so long as he obtains his ends. The political feeling of the Journal is also well to its subscribers and democratic contemporaries, as can be found elsewhere, so that an opportunity will be afforded them to read and decide for themselves.

Respectfully soliciting a line, Sir, relative to your views on the contract about being entered into, and the time it is intended to have the mail arrive in New York, I remain, with much respect,

Your very obdt Svt

FAST MAIL IN POLITICS IN WEBSTER CAMPAIGN

New-York Times of That Day Sought Pony Service to Serve Aims of Democrats.

Among the letters sent by the first Washington to New York air mail service yesterday was one written by Postmaster General A. S. Burleson to the publisher of THE NEW YORK TIMES, inclosing a letter written in 1835 by the proprietors of "The New-York Times" of that day, which disappeared long before the present NEW YORK TIMES was founded, urging quicker mail service between this city and the capital. Mr. Burleson's letter, held up at Philadelphia, failed to reach this city last night. Duplicates of it and its inclosure, sent in advance by train, got in safely, however. Postmaster General Burleson's letter follows:

Washington, May 15.

Mr. Adolph S. Ochs,
Publisher and President THE NEW YORK TIMES, New York, N. Y.

My Dear Mr. Ochs: As early as 1835 THE NEW YORK TIMES showed its interest in the speedy delivery of mail between Washington and New York. The editor of THE TIMES then wrote to Amos Kendall, Postmaster General, calling attention to the establishment of the "Pony Express" by a combination of newspapers, as a private enterprise, to facilitate the delivery of newspaper dispatches between Washington and New York, and suggesting that this service should be performed by the Post Office Department.

I am inclosing a copy of the letter, which you may value as a souvenir of both a time long past and the first trip of the Airplane Mail Service.

As this letter is purely personal to THE TIMES in its character it will not be made public by the department, but you are, of course, at liberty to make any use of it you may desire.

Sincerely yours,

A. S. BURLESON.

Following the receipt of the copy of Mr. Burleson's letter it was pointed out that he erred in inferring that THE NEW YORK TIMES of today and The New-York Times which eighty-three years ago urged better mail service were the same newspaper. Though the title is the same, except for the hyphen, the newspaper which addressed the Postmaster General of 1835 had gone completely out of existence years before the present NEW YORK TIMES issued its first number on the morning of Sept. 18, 1851.

The newspaper to which Postmaster General Burleson referred was a four-page sheet published daily and semi-weekly at 10 Wall Street by W. Holland, E. Sanford, and E. W. Davies, whose names are signed to the letter which Mr. Burleson inclosed. There were seven columns to each page of this New-York Times and the reading matter was set in exceedingly small type. The newspaper was founded by Mr. Holland and his colleagues in 1833, succeeding The New York Standard. Diligent research failed to establish the identity of the newspaper's editor or the date upon which it ceased publication.

The full text of the communication, reproduced partially in fac-simile elsewhere on this page, which the proprietors of the old New-York Times addressed to Postmaster General Kendall, and which Mr. Burleson forwarded, is as follows:

(Private.)
Times Office,
New York, Dec. 4, 1835.

Hon. Amos Kendall, Postmaster General.

Dear Sir: We take the liberty to enclose announcements from The Courier and Enquirer and Journal of Commerce, of this city, of an intention on the part of those establishments to have reporters at Washington, and to run an express by which to give the proceedings of Congress a day in advance of The Times and other morning papers.

It is not probable that The Courier and Journal will have to bear the expense themselves. The hope is, no doubt, that these papers will eagerly be sought for by all classes on account of the late information which they will thus obtain, and that an opportunity will be afforded to promulgate doctrines, under the form of Congressional news, that will have a favourable bearing in relation to the success of their favourite candidates at the President Election for the next term.

The Courier, it is known, has already declared itself in favor of Mr. Webster. It is backed (as is The Journal) by most of the mercantile and paper money power in the city, and its principal Editor is reckless of expence, so long as he obtains his ends. The political feeling of The Journal is also well known by its repeated declarations, particularly in a violent and uncalled-for editorial philippic against our excellent and patriotic Vice President immediately previous to the gubernatorial election in this State last year, when they said they would view the election of Mr. Van Buren as the greatest calamity, &c.—but it is unnecessary to repeat their language. Their feeling in relation to the candidate for Vice President is also well known, and their backers and supporters will use every exertion to defeat the clearly expressed will of the republican portion of the land.

Knowing that the resources of THE TIMES would not warrant an expenditure equal to the establishment of a rival express, and being desirous of furnishing our democratic friends with news as early as any other paper, I called on Mr. Webb and asked if he would allow us to participate in the express on our paying a proportion of the expence. He unhesitatingly declined. I then called on Mr. Bates, our active Assistant Postmaster, who informed me that you were about making a new contract for carrying the mail between Washington and New York, and that perhaps you contemplated hastening it so as to gain something on the present time. This would enable the public at large to possess the earliest information on National affairs, by which means particular individuals could not present their own undisputed views to the community and promulgate sentiments which, if not adverse to fact, were intended to create a bias favourable to their own immediate views.

If the proceedings of Congress, sir, could be received in New York by midnight it would be in season for the next morning's papers. The Editor of the Courier has been south, and, no doubt, has made arrangements to supply copies of his report, (by the aid of a manifold writer) to the Whig Editors of Baltimore and Philadelphia. The papers North and East would necessarily receive the Courier and Journal by the morning mails. The Whig papers would repeat their report and remarks, while the Democratic ones would either have to wait for the regular mail or spread the Whig intelligence thus given them, either of which, no doubt, would have an unfavorable influence on the public. If there should be a bane, Sir, thus spread, should it not be accompanied by an antidote. The TIMES is desirous of giving as late news to its subscribers and democratic contemporaries as can be found elsewhere, so that an opportunity will be afforded them to read and decide for themselves.

Respectfully soliciting a line, Sir, relative to your views on the contract about being entered into, and the time it is intended to have the mail arrive in New York, I remain, with much respect,

Your very obdt svt,
EDGAR W. DAVIES,
For Self and Colleagues, W. Holland and E. Sanford, N. Y. Times.

PHILADELPHIA'S QUICK WORK

New York Mail Sent on Its Way to Washington in Six Minutes.

PHILADELPHIA, May 15.—Air mail service between Washington, Philadelphia, and New York was successfully established today, so far as this city's part in the venture was concerned. A crowd of nearly a thousand persons saw Lieutenant Torrey H. Webb of California, an army aviator, land at Bustleton, in the northeastern part of the city, with mail from New York. Six minutes later Lieutenant J. C. Edgerton departed for Washington with the New York mail and a big batch from the Philadelphia Post Office.

When it became known that the airplane carrying mail from Washington had landed in Maryland, Lieutenant H. P. Culver was ordered to proceed at once to New York with Philadelphia mail. He departed at 2:15 o'clock.

When the airplane from New York arrived its mail for Philadelphia was quickly loaded upon a motor truck and started for North Philadelphia to be distributed. No time was lost shifting mail from New York for Washington to Lieutenant Edgerton's machine, and he had hardly time to say "Thank you" to a delegation of citizens who presented him with a wrist watch.

Lieutenant Webb, who also received a wrist watch to commemorate the occasion, said he found the atmosphere at the higher altitudes "a little bit cold." He crossed New York at a height of 8,000 feet and flew over New Jersey at at average of 4,500.

Postmaster John Thornton of this city headed the delegation of citizens who saw the inauguration of the service. Mr. Thornton mailed letters to Postmaster General Burleson and the Postmasters at New York and Washington.

TO ADVANCE AIR SERVICE.

Institute Organized with Major William Thaw as President.

The Aero Club of America announced last night that it had been informed from Washington of the organization of the Air Service Institute of the United States, which is to be conducted on the lines of the United States Naval Institute, for advancing the professional and scientific knowledge of military and naval aeronautics. Major William Thaw, dean of American aviators in France, has been selected President and Major Raoul Lufbery, an American ace, Vice President.

Following the practice of the United States Naval Institute, the Air Service Institute will offer prizes annually for the best essays on aeronautic subjects.

The institute has temporary offices in the Union Trust Building in Washington. It will also have offices in France, England, and Italy.

BORGLUM SUBMITS CASE TO BRANDEGEE

Says Dealings with Mix Antedated Work for President—Sends Two Affidavits.

WASHINGTON, May 15.—Gutzon Borglum sent to Senator Brandegee of Connecticut tonight a part of the evidence he desires placed in the Senate record in answer to the charge that he sought to form a private airplane corporation to take Government contracts while he was investigating aircraft production at the invitation of President Wilson. It was in the form of a long letter reiterating and amplifying his denial of the charge, accompanied by affidavits from Hugo C. Gibson, an employe of the British War Mission at New York, and Benjamin Harris.

Mr. Gibson, named as associated with the sculptor in the proposed private corporation, swore in his affidavit that in December Borglum intended to engage with him in a commercial enterprise, but that, after receiving authority from the President to make an investigation, Borglum withdrew, and they had no further negotiations.

Mr. Harris, said to have been selected to represent Borglum in the proposed corporation, denied that Borglum ever had asked him to become interested in an aeronautic company, either on his own behalf or as a representative.

In his letter the sculptor said he had just been informed that Gibson had been suspended from connection with the British mission at the request of the War Department, although he was a highly valuable and necessary expert. He also declared every effort was being made to prevent him from getting affidavits, that several of his witnesses had been summarily "shipped away from Washington" and that others were pleading with him not to involve them for business reasons.

After discussing in great detail the telegrams put into the Senate record with the statement of Kenyon W. Mix, Jr., of the Dodge Manufacturing Company, accusing him of negotiating with Mix for the organization of the airplane company, Borglum said:

"I shall give no more time now to this red herring they have dragged across the trail of investigation and add only this—that all the telegrams Mix offers, together with my letters furnished by the Secretary of War and General Squiers, antedate my work as investigator and indicate knowledge and enthusiasm in touch with the subject. I claim all with pride, and challenge any one not bent on slander and deception, after possessing all of these documents, some for nine months, to read honestly into them any of the charges made, except with malice born out of the need of the hour."

Mauser Interests Profiteered in a Philadelphia Concern, Reichstag Member Charges.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

AMSTERDAM, May 15.—A member of the Reichstag, Dr. Suedekum, adds another interesting story to the many which of late have let in the light on the profiteering of German munition firms.

He has given notice of a motion in which he asserts that Privy Councilor Arnhold, President of the Board of Directors of the Deutsche Waffen und Munitions Fabriken, makers of the Mauser rifle and a gigantic munition concern, lately declared that the firm, shortly before America entered the war, had sold its interests in a certain large munition factory in Philadelphia.

Those interests, he added, were capitalistic and technical, and the German company's patents, &c., had been made over by license to an American firm. By this sale the German concern made a profit of 9,500,000 marks.

In his motion Dr. Suedekum asks the German Chancellor what he has done to prevent a state of affairs by which during the war Germany's enemies are provided with arms and munitions by the capitalistic and technical co-operation of German firms.

AMSTERDAM, May 15.—Germany is calling in her nickel coinage, the metal of which is needed for projectiles, and is substituting zinc for minting coins of this class.

Authority has just been given for the minting of 10,000,000 marks' worth of zinc 10 pfennig pieces.

Summon La Follette's ex-Partner.

WASHINGTON, May 15.—The Senate Elections Committee, considering La Follette's much-discussed St. Paul speech, today took up the protest of Gilbert M. Roe of New York, La Follette's former law partner, that it was without jurisdiction in the proceeding and summoned Roe to appear Tuesday.

PUBLISHERS FIND CANADA IS FAVORED

Hint That Magazines Here May Migrate Follows Meeting of Their Representatives.

TO STUDY POSTAL LAWS

Zone Regulations, the Publishers' Spokesman Says, Give Preferential Postage Rates to Rivals in Canada.

The possibility that the new postal zone law might make it profitable for American magazine publishers to issue their periodicals from Canadian soil was suggested yesterday by Charles Johnson Post, Director of the Publishers Advisory Board, following a meeting held at the offices of the board at 200 Fifth Avenue, at which representatives of the associations of publishers of medical, religious, agricultural, and business magazines, as well as publications of general interest, and heads of the allied printing trades and the Authors League were present.

The meeting appointed a committee to study the Canadian postal laws in connection with the postal treaty between the United States and Canada, which does not bring Canadian periodicals under the effect of the new zoning regulations which were put into the revenue law.

"Under the zoning provisions which take effect July 1," said Mr. Post, "a magazine published in Canada will be handled by the United States Post Office and delivered to American subscribers throughout the West at a lower cost for postage than if the same magazine were published in any of the great cities of the East.

"In other words, this law passed by an American Congress gives preferential rates in a great part of the United States to Canadian publishers. It has a tendency, therefore, to destroy American publications or to compel them to study the possibilities of Canadian postage and publication in the light of our postal treaties wth that country.

"The postal zone law will add from 100 to 900 per cent. to the present postage on American periodicals. The higher rates of postage apply to Western subscribers and Western readers. Subscribers west of Colorado will have to pay for many of our leading magazines from 7 to 9 cents a copy in postage, while the postage rates on many of the most important business publication will be from 10 to 40 cents postage a copy. These same publications, if published in Canada, however, will be delivered by United States Post Office to the same reader and under the same conditions at from 4 to 16 cents a copy.

"This postal zone law was not a revenue law and was so stated explicitly by Congressman Claude Kitchin of North Carolina, Chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, who was its originator and who put it on the statute books under the implied threat that unless it was adopted the passage of the War Revenue act would be delayed."

It was upon the presentation of these facts that a committee of the publishers was appointed. The committee will make a preliminary report to a meeting of the Publishers' Advisory Board, to be held next week. Among those present yesterday representing the various publishing interests were: A. C. G. Hammesfahr, Vice President of Collier's, representing the Periodical Publishers' Association; M. C. Robbins, President of the Associated Business Papers, Inc.; Jesse H. Neal, Secretary of the Associated Business Papers, Inc.; Dr. H. Edwin Lewis, American Association of Medical Publications; George E. Cook, President of the Association of Religious Press; A. S. Walmsley, Secretary of the Association of Religious Press; Thomas A. Barrett of the Agricultural Publishers' Association; John Adams Thayer, Secretary of the Periodical Publishers Association; Allen H. Richardson, President of the Periodical Publishers' Association; Rex Beach, President of the Authors' League of America; Eric Schuler, Secretary of the Authors' League of America; Peter J. Brady, President of the Allied Printing Trades Council of Greater New York, and Charles Johnson Post, Director of the Publishers' Advisory Board.

KILLED ATTEMPTING RESCUE

Col. Clive Gave His Life to Save a Wounded Brother Officer.

LONDON, May 4, (Correspondence of The Associated Press.)—Colonel Percy Archer Clive, member of the House of Commons for the South Division of Herefordshire, gave his life on the western front a few days ago in a gallant attempt to rescue a wounded officer.

Colonel Clive, at the head of his battalion of the Lancashire Fusiliers, had just straightened out the line by a successful counterattack when it was reported to him that the Colonel of the regiment on his left was lying severely wounded between the battlelines.

Colonel Clive went out immediately alone to aid the wounded Colonel and was killed by a German sniper. Subsequently the wounded Colonel was brought in by stretcher bearers.

TELLS OF CAPTURE OF BLACK SEA FLEET

German Correspondent Says Few Ships at Sebastopol Were in Serviceable Condition.

45 NOTABLES SHOT BY REDS

General Korniloff and His Force Reported to Have Joined General Dutoff's at Orenburg.

AMSTERDAM, May 14.—The Berliner Tageblatt's Special Commissioner to the Ukraine, Leonard Adelt, in a telegram dated at Odessa, May 12, gives the following particulars concerning the capture of the Russian Black Sea fleet:

"When the Germans entered Sebastopol the Sailors' Executive Commission placed the fleet at the disposal of the Ukrainian Peoples' Republic. It was found afterward, however, that the bunkers of the ships were empty and that a majority of the vessels had been so neglected that only the battleship Volga and the cruisers Pamyat Merkuria were in serviceable condition.

"The remainder of the fleet consisted of the battleship Rostislav, the cruiser Potemkine, and a number of torpedo boats and submarines and twenty transports. The protected motor boat flotilla already had been seized at Odessa, as had been the new war vessels lying on the slips. The latter consisted of a dreadnought of 23,000 tons of the 1911 class, two protected cruisers of 7,600 tons each, and two unprotected cruisers.

"At Sebastopol the Bolsheviki shot forty-five notables, including Rear Admirals Sachs and Lvoff, and four Captains and two Colonels. The Bolsheviki had demanded 20,000,000 rubles from the City of Odessa and 10,000,000 rubles from Sebastopol, but the wholesale execution of the leading citizens of these two places were prevented by the timely arrival of the German troops."

Herr Adelt says that General Korniloff has gone to Orenburg to join forces with the Cossack Hetman Dutoff. Korniloff, he adds, is supposed to have a force of 22,000 men, but the number varies daily, as his men, like the Bolsheviki, come and go as they please.

It is noteworthy, the correspondent concludes, that the official name of the Ukraine now is "The Ukrainian State," instead of the Ukrainian Peoples' Republic.

A dispatch from London on May 12 showed that all of the Black Sea Fleet was not taken at Sebastopol. It said that the Russian Ambassador at Berlin had been instructed to notify Germany that part of the fleet, which had left Sebastopol and was at Novorovsysk, had no intention of attacking the German ships in that port, which was the pretext given by the Germans for the threatened capture of the place.

LITTLE PLANTING DONE IN RUSSIA

Less Than Half of the Land Usually Tilled Will Be Cultivated This Year.

SAMARA, Russia, May 2.—(Associated Press.)—Much of the fertile land of European Russia will go uncultivated this year. Less than half the land, which has in times past produced large quantities of grain and other crops, now remaining in control of the Soviet Government will be tilled, owing to the shortage of seed, horses, and implements and the unsettled conditions brought about by the land division.

Peasants nave hidden their seed and resisted the food committees. Many districts, consequently, have seed potatoes, wheat, barley, and oats, but the peasants are not willing to plant all the acreage possible, fearing the future disposition of the land and the control of the harvested crop. The hostility of the farmers toward city workers generally is shown by their unwillingness to surrender grain to the food committees and their hesitation to plant extensively lest their crops be requisitioned.

The wheat planting season ends this week in Central Russia, and in most of the districts less than half the grain land has been plowed. The exodus of city dwellers into the grain sections has been so large that breadstuffs are extremely scarce, even in grain centres like Samara, where bread sells for 2 rubles per pound. The price gradually rises approaching Moscow, and at some towns in the grain States children gather at the incoming trains and beg bread from the passengers.

Several provinces have issued their own money, but the peasants and merchants refuse to accept it, unless forced to do so by armed guards. Even the provincial cities are issuing their own money and are legalizing the circulation of officially indorsed checks on State banks, but the peasants do not willingly accept such mediums of exchange.

Samara Province has thousands of German colonists owning from sixty to eighty acres each, who have forcibly resisted the land committees and retain their property. These colonists are Russian citizens, and have been in Russia for several generations. The amount of land allotted to individual peasants varies in different sections, according to the density of the population, the nature of the land, and the size of the families. Two and a half to five acres is the average allotment in the grain-growing districts.

ROSTOV RECAPTURED BY RUSSIAN FORCES

Germans Driven Out of Important Base After Occupying It for One Day.

MOSCOW, May 10, (Associated Press.)—Rostov-on-Don, the largest city in the Don Cossack territory, was recaptured today by the Russian Soviet troops, who drove out the Germans. The Germans, who had held Rostov for only a day, are retreating.

The armistice on the Kursk front has been extended to the Voronezh and Don districts. Martial law has been declared and the Soviet troops have been ordered to disarm the bands invading Russian territory despite the armistice.

AMSTERDAM, May 15.—The Vossische Zeitung of Berlin announces today that war has had to be proclaimed at Ekaterinoslav, Odessa and Poltava as a strong countercurrent to the order of things was observable. There are several groups of Great Russian forces in the Don region, the newspaper says.

PLANS FREE UKRAINE.

New Government Denies It Disregards Rights of Peasants.

AMSTERDAM, May 15.—The new Ukrainian Government declares in outlining its program, a dispatch from Kiev reports, that it aims at the establishment of a free, independent, and powerful Ukraine. The main task of the Government, which is characterized as provisional, is to restore order and administer State affairs until the convocation of Parliament.

The Government announces that strong measures will be taken against agitators. It denies that it is serving the interests of large landowners and disregarding those of the peasants.

SEMENOFF ROUTS REDS.

Cossack Chief in Siberia Captures Karimskaya Railroad Junction.

HARBIN, May 11.—The Karimskaya Railway Junction has been captured by General Semenoff, the anti-Bolshevist leader.

Military railroad engineers have been despatched to restore the railway in the rear of the retreating Bolsheviki.

The people in which districts of Siberia are dying of starvation owing to the lack of transportation of foodstuffs.

Caucasus Seeks Peace with Turkey.

MOSCOW, May 10, (Associated Press.)—The Caucasus Government has proposed peace negotiations, Foreign Minister Tchitcherin is informed by the Turkish Government. Turkey, acting with Germany, has insisted that the Caucasus Government send its delegates to Batoum.

FIVE U-BOATS SUNK IN A SINGLE WEEK

Two Large Ones Among Them—Average Weekly Sinkings Show Great Increase.

LONDON, May 15.—The Evening Standard says that in a recent week no fewer than five German submarines are definitely known to have been sunk. These included two large U-boats.

The average weekly sinkings, the paper adds, are not so high as that, but the rate shows a great improvement over that of six months ago.

Asked in the House of Commons today by Robert P. Houston for information "as to our successful operations in capturing enemy submarines around the coast during the last three weeks," Thomas J. Macnamara, Financial Secretary of the Admiralty, made this reply:

"On the whole, the general trend of the submarine warfare has progressed quite satisfactorily since the 1st of January.

"News from neutral countries and the increased boastfulness and public disclaimers of the enemy are proof of our recent success; but the Admiralty is adverse to stating results, good or bad, of a short period.

"The total number of British steamers attacked by submarines which escaped uninjured from Jan. 1 to April 30 was 172."

The British Admiralty restrictions on navigation in the northern part of the North Sea, in consequence of the laying of a great mine field for the purpose of foiling submarines, became operative today, and hereafter all shipping in that era must comply with stringent regulations, or ignore them at their own peril.

After dark no ship will be allowed within the prescribed area, which lies between the coasts of Norway and Scotland, and any vessel finding itself there half an hour after sunset must anchor in accordance with the admiralty's direction.

The vast barrier, which seems to have been over-estimated in extent in earlier reports, is now said to cover approximately 22,000 square miles.

Many details obviously cannot be divulged, and some of those printed appear to be based on assumptions by non-official experts; but it is generally accepted that the barrier is designed to fence in as far as possible U-boats and other enemy craft in the northern end of the North Sea in the same manner as the barrier across the Straits of Dover already effectively blocks their access to the Channel. It is remarked that if the barrier is to exclude submarines, the mines must have been laid at an unusual depth to cover the limit of the average submarine's diving capacity.

GERMAN NET LOSSES 5,000,000 TO JAN. 31

4,456,961 in Killed and Prisoners Alone, Plus Deaths from Illness, at Sea and in Colonies.

Karl Bleibtreu, the German military statistician, writing in Das Neue Europa of April 22, gives the German losses from Aug. 2, 1914, to Jan. 31, 1918, as 4,456,961 men. His figures deal exclusively with those killed in action or taken prisoners. They are official from Aug. 2, 1914, till July 31, 1917, and are then estimated to Jan. 31, 1918. His figures and comment read:

August	172,500	November	93,000
September	214,500	December	50,200
October	139,600
Total			669,800

1915.

Jan. and Feb.	66,000	August	105,400
March	(?) 61	Sept. and Oct.	119,450
April	42,500	November	57,500
May	112,500	December	57,750
June and July	152,300
Total			713,461

1916.

January	18,100	July	86,650
February	17,800	August	148,000
March	51,300	September	119,800
April	72,650	October	125,000
May	64,000	November	87,100
June	54,850	December	56,000
Total			901,250

1917.

January	48,000	April	59,000
February	39,000	May, June, and July	134,850
March	39,600
Total, (7 months)			320,450

These figures give, on the western front, from Aug. 2, 1914, to July 31, 1917, an aggregate of 2,604,961 casualties.

EASTERN FRONT.

1915	699,600	1917	261,250

This gives a total from Aug. 2, 1914, to July 31, 1917, of 1,484,550, and for the two fronts combined of 4,089,511.

From Aug. 1, 1917, to Jan. 31, 1918, Herr Bleibtreu estimates the total losses on both fronts at 367,450, making in all 4,456,961 men.

In adding those who died from illness or wounds, the losses resulting from the colonial and maritime fighting, as well as in the noncombatant and auxiliary services, not comprised in the preceding enumeration, the grand total considerably exceeds 5,000,000.

TWO MINISTERS RESIGN IN ITALY

ROME, May 15.—General Dallolio, Minister of Munitions, and Signor Bianchi, Minister of Transport, have resigned.

Senator Giovanni Villa has been appointed Minister of Transport, while the Minister of War will take charge temporarily of the Ministry of Munitions.

LUXURY TAX A SUCCESS.

It Yields France $3,000,000 in First Month of Enforcement.

PARIS, May 15.—The new 10 per cent. tax on luxuries produced nearly 15,000,000 francs in the first month during which it was in force.

The Ministry of Finance expresses satisfaction over this outcome, as it was achieved despite the fact that many persons anticipated payments for goods in order to avoid the tax, while many others postponed payments, hoping that the tax would be repealed, as there has been considerable agitation against it. As an additional handicap upon receipts, the month included the Easter holidays, when business was dull.

Lend $3,000,000 More to Serbia.

WASHINGTON, May 15.—Serbia received another credit of $3,000,000 from the Treasury today, making her total indebtedness to the United States $9,000,000 and the total of all the allies $5,766,850,000.

50,000 SOLDIERS IN CHORUS.

Mme. Schumann-Heink Leads Singing of National Hymn at Camp Dix.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMP DIX, WRIGHTSTOWN, N. J., May 15.—Fifty thousand soldiers who are awaiting transportation to France tonight joined Mme. Schumann-Heink in the singing of the national anthem and "The Battle Hymn of the Republic" in the amphitheatre of the Y. M. C. A. stadium here. The singing was heard in every barracks in the camp by sentries left on guard there, and a mile away officers and soldiers heard the roll of the 50,000 voices and stood at attention until the chorus was finished. Many other airs, some of them the anthems of the Allies, and others old American favorites, were sung by Mme. Schumann-Heink. W. Stanley Hawkins, the song master at the camp, said he had no doubt that the Kaiser heard the singing above the noise of the guns.

CONCRETE SHIP A SUCCESS

The Faith Will Begin at Once to Take on Cargo.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 15.—The 7,500-ton concrete steamer Faith, the first of its kind and tonnage constructed in this country, had a successful trial trip today at sea off San Francisco. A wireless message sent from the steamer by W. Leslie Comyn, President of the San Francisco Shipbuilding Company, said:

"The Faith is proving herself the equal, if not the superior, of any steel ship of similar size and equal power."

The Faith will begin at once loading a cargo of salt for a North Pacific Coast port, and will return with coal.

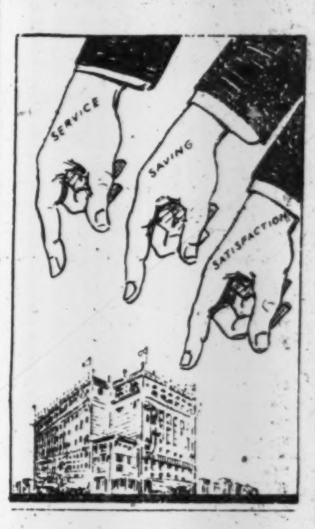
We Sell Dependable Merchandise at Prices Lower Than Any Other Store, but for Cash Only.



Three Testimonials:

SAVING

Commander Booth of the Salvation Army approached the superintendent of our main floor, not so very long ago, with the unsolicited information about the prices of our merchandise as compared with those of several of the larger stores in the city with whom the Salvation Army dealt, to the effect that in this store the commander could, notwithstanding a 10% discount given by these other houses, make a bigger saving. We give discount to NO ONE.

SERVICE

Would it interest you to know that only this past week a well known woman who has just turned over her country home to the Government for war purposes, wishing to furnish it accordingly, asked us to extend to her the discount privilege as a special patriotic contribution on our part?

We refused her request to her entire satisfaction on the sensible grounds that it would be an empty honor to set aside a fundamental principle of our establishment and sell to the Government at a special discount under prices already lower than those of our competitors. And She Made Her Purchases Here.

SATISFACTION

A woman bought a mahogany electric table lamp. Somehow the wires inside it became crossed and the fire which resulted cost her considerable. She could not remember where she bought the lamp, but recollected seeing like ones in this store. The store received her complaint, but we were obliged to ask for the evidence (the iron tube which runs through all Our Lamps in compliance with the insurance laws), which must have been saved from the fire.

Nothing in Her Lamp remained but Ashes.

In fact, we soon realized that the burned lamp had not been supplied with the iron tube.

The woman told us that she had accounts at two other stores, and to make our position sound we sent to these stores and bought lamps similar to the one burned.

We cut them open along with one of our own, at our own expense. Then the woman took her complaint to one of the two other stores.

THE POINT:

If it's a case of getting satisfation you will always find it in this store.

SLUMBER UNDER FIRE BECOMES A HABIT

SUMMONED TO DO HIS BIT

By FLOYD P. GIBBONS.

[Copyright, 1918, by The Chicago Tribune Company.]

[SIXTH ARTICLE.]

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMIES UNDER GENERAL FOCH IN FRANCE, May 15.—Returning to the battalion headquarters at night by a route apparently as popular to the German artillery as the one used in the forenoon, we found the telephone switchboards in full operation in a sub-cellar and headquarters mess established in a clean kitchen above ground. The food was served in the kitchen, and we noticed that one door had suffered some damage which had caused it to be boarded up, and that the plaster of the ceiling of the room was full of fresh holes and rents in a dozen places. At every shock to the earth a little stream of oats would trickle through the holes from the attic above. These, falling down an officer's neck in the midst of a meal, would have no effect other than causing him to call for his helmet to ward off the cereal rain.

We learned more about the sinister meaning of that broken door and the holes in the ceiling when it became necessary later in the evening to move mess to a safer location. The kitchen was located just thirty yards back of a certain crossroad, and an unhealthy number of German shells that missed the intersection caused too much interruption in our cook's work. We found that this mess room was vacant by reason of the fact that it had become too unpleasant for the French officers, who had relinquished it the day before. We followed suit and were not surprised when an infantry battalion mess followed us into the kitchen, and just one day later, to the hour, followed us out of it.

Lying on the floor in a chalk cellar that night and listening to the sounds of arriving shells on nearby cross roads and battery positions, we estimated how long it would be before this little village would be completely leveled to the ground. Already the gables were disappearing from houses, sturdy chimneys were toppling and stone walls were showing jagged gaps. One whole wall of the village school had crumbled before one blast, so that now the wooden desks and benches of the pupils and their books and paper were exposed to view from the street. On the blackboard was a penmanship model which read: "Let no day pass without having saved something."

It is strange that sleep comes in surroundings not unlike the interior of a boiler factory, but it does. I heard of no man who slept in the cellars beneath our village that night being disturbed by the pounding of shells and the jar of the ground, both of which were ever present to the dormant senses. Strange still was the fact that at midnight, when the shelling almost ceased for a small interval, amost every man in the command was aroused by the sudden silence. When the shelling was resumed, sleep returned.

"When I get back home on the farm outside Chicago," said one officer, "I don't believe I will be able to sleep unless I get August to stand under my window and shake the undershoot all night."

It is remarkable how a tired human under such conditions can turn off the switch on an energetic imagination and resign himself completely to fate. In those cellars that night every man knew that one direct hit by a 210 German shell on his particular cellar would mean "taps" for everybody in the cave. Such a possibility demands considerable action in the slowest moving minds. Mentalities and morale of varying caliber cogitate upon this matter at varying lengths, but I doubt if there is much difference in the conclusion arrived at. This soliloquy produces one vital decision: that if one particular shell is to come into your particular abode, there is nothing you can do to keep it out.

It must have been 3 o'clock in the morning when a sputtering motorcycle came to a stop in the shelter of our cellar door, and the gas guard standing there exchanged words with some one. It ended in the sound of hobnails on the stone steps as a dispatch rider descended, lighting his way down the gray shaft with an electric pocket lamp.

"What is it?" inquired the Major, awakening and rolling over on his side.

"Just came from regimental headquarters," said the messenger. "I'm carrying orders on to the next town. The Adjutant gave me this letter to deliver to you, sir. The Adjutant's compliments, sir, and apologies for waking you; but he said the mail had just arrived and the envelope looked important, and he thought you might like to get it right away."

"H-mm!" said the Major, weighing the official looking envelope in one hand and observing both the American stamps in one corner and the numerous addresses by which the missive had been forwarded. He tore off the end and extracted a sheet which he unfolded and read while the messenger waited at his request. I was prepared to hear a promotion order from Washington, and made ready to offer congratulations. The Major smiled and tossed the paper over to me, at the same time reaching for notebook and fountain pen.

"Hold the light for me," he said to the messenger as he sat on the edge of the bed and began writing. "This is urgent, and I will make answer now. You will mail it at regimental headquarters."

The stationery bore the heading of an alumni association of a well-known Eastern university. The contents ran as follows:

> Dear Sir: What are you doing for your country? What are you doing to help win the war? While our brave boys are in France facing the Kaiser's shells and gas, the Alumni Association has directed me as secretary to call upon all old boys of the University and invite them to do their bit for Uncle Sam. We ask your subscription to a fund which we are raising to send cigarettes to the young students of the university who are serving with the colors and who are so nobly maintaining the traditions of our Alma Mater. Please fill out the inclosed blank, stating your profession and present occupation.
> Fraternally yours,
> ——— ———, Secretary.

The Major was watching me with a smile as I concluded:

"Here's my answer," he said, reading from a note book leaf:

> Your letter reached me tonight in a warm little village in France. With regard to my present profession will inform you that I am an expert in ammunition trafficking and am at present occupied in exporting large quantities of shells to Germany over the air route. Please find inclosed check for 50 francs for cigarettes for the youngsters, who, as you say, are so nobly upholding the sacred traditions of our school. After all, we old boys should do something to help along the cause.
> Yours to beat the Kaiser,
>
> ——— ———,
> Major —, Field Artillery, U. S. A., on the Front in France.

"I guess that ought to hold them," said the Major as he folded the letter and addressed an envelope. It rather seemed to me it would, but before I could finish the remark the Major was back asleep in his blankets.

OUR AIRMEN DOWN THREE MACHINES

steamships carry against the U-boats, and put himself behind a thick cloud.

Peterson passed him and looped again, with his machine gun going. He got ahead of the German, who swerved quickly, but Peterson's stream of bullets literally severed one of the wings of the German machine, and it fell with the severed wing fluttering after. Peterson had brought down both German fliers in five minutes.

Within the hour Captain Kenneth Marr had brought down a German biplane machine.

The impressive decoration ceremony took place on the American field and the honors were conferred by a French army instead of by a French corps.

The ceremony brought the first news of the fate of Captain Norman Hall, who was missing after a fight four days ago. He and Lieutenant Charles Chapman Read were reported as dead on the field of honor and the cross was awarded to them. Others Americans to be awarded the Croix de Guerre with palms were Lieutenant Eddie Rickenbacher and Lieutenant James Meissner. Both of them recently brought down German machines under exceptional circumstances.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, May 15, (Associated Press.)—Captain David Peterson of Honesdale, Penn., who brought down two enemy aviators today was one of five men who were decorated. The others were Captain Norman Hall, Lieutenant Charles Chapman, who is missing; Lieutenant Edward V. Rickenbacher, the former automobile racer, and Lieutenant James Meissner.

Major Robert B. Paddock of the Signal Corps has been recommended for the War Cross. Recently under terrific shell fire he made an inspection of the wire communications, which was not expected of him because of his rank. He discovered the wire cut by the enemy and repaired it, being wounded in the leg while doing so. He is a native of Wyoming.

Sergeant W. B. Connell of Pittsburgh, Penn., and Sergeant H. R. Webb of Monroe, Utah, members of the Signal Corps, have won the War Cross for conspicuous bravery in repairing wires under a heavy shell and gas attack. Both are now in the hospital.

One of the American reconnoissance airplanes late yesterday afternoon from an altitude of about 400 yards fired upon German trenches, in which there were a number of the enemy, with a machine gun.

The indications today pointed to the possibility that the American biplane, which suddenly dropped out of the clouds yesterday, killing the two men in it, was shot down by an enemy machine, for it was established that the engine of the biplane was running at full speed when it struck the ground.

A heavy barrage was laid down by the Germans on American positions northwest of Toul this morning, but no infantry attack developed. The Americans in the line were ready for the enemy at all times during the firing.

There was a general movement behind the German lines today, perhaps owing to heavy casualties inflicted by the American artillery. The air activities were above normal, the weather being ideal.

TELLS OF UPTON MURDERS.

Negro Soldier Now Awaiting Trial in Military Prison.

After he had signed a confession that he killed Private Michael Maloney of the Second Outgoing Casuals and Mrs. J. Harrity of 39 Fourth Street, a visitor to Camp Upton on May 5, while he was on guard duty at the camp, Private Layton James, a negro member of the 367th Infantry, was taken from the Third Branch Detective Bureau last night to a military prison to await trial by court-martial. Army officers took James away manacled and under a heavy guard.

James told officers that he was on guard duty near the edge of the woods when he saw Maloney and Mrs. Harrity walking there. When he saw Maloney leave for a few minutes he started to talk to Mrs. Harrity. Maloney had his hand on his pistol holster when he returned, James said, and the sentry began firing in the belief that Maloney intended to shoot. James said that he was forced to kill Mrs. Harrity as she was kneeling over the body of Maloney, because he knew that she would tell about the crime.

James said he then ran through the woods and got back into the camp by another road. His inquiries about the cause of the commotion prevented the fastening of suspicion upon him immediately, and he was assigned to stand guard over the bodies while a search of the wood was made by other soldiers.

Although the authorities say that James can hardly read or write, and was a laborer in a shipyard at Newport News when he was drafted last October, he is devoutly religious, and placed his hand on his Bible when he swore to the confession of the details of the murder. He was held for examination after another negro, accused of the crime, said that he had seen James run through the woods.

AMERICANS MADE UP BANNER CAREY UNIT

CHIEF WAS COMMANDEERED

Passing in Auto, He Was Called In After Leader Collapsed—Outwitted the Germans.

LONDON, May 14, (Associated Press.)—The banner company of "Carey's Detachment" which, under Brig. Gen. Sandeman Carey, held an important gap in the Fifth British Army in the first week of the German offensive, was made up of 300 American railway engineers. Like all the others of the famous "nondescripts," which included Canadian and British supposedly noncombatant units, the Americans were volunteers.

The American engineers won quite a reputation for the manner in which they handled machine guns, a weapon entirely new to the road and railway builders.

A disastrous-looking gap appeared in the Fifth Army south of Hamel in the later stages of the opening battle. The Germans had crossed the Somme at Hamel and had a clear path for a sweep southwestward.

No troops were available to throw into the opening. A certain Brigadier General was commissioned by Major Gen. Gough, commander of the Fifth Army, to gather up every man he could find and to "hold the gap at any cost." The General called upon the American and Canadian engineers, cooks, chauffeurs, road workmen, anybody he could find; gave them guns, pistols, any available weapon, and rushed them into the gap in trucks, on horseback, or on mule-drawn limbers.

Confiscated Machine Guns.

A large number of machine guns from a machine gun school near by were confiscated. Only a few men, however, knew how to operate the weapons, and they had to be worked by amateurs with one "instructor" for every ten or twelve guns. The Americans did especially well in handling this arm.

For two days the detachment held the mile and a half gap. At the end of the second day the commander, having gone forty-eight hours without sleep, collapsed. The situation of the detachment looked desperate.

While all were wondering what would happen next, a dusty automobile came bounding along the road from the north. It contained Brig. Gen. Carey, who had been home on leave and who was trying to find his headquarters.

The General was commandeered by the detachment and he was found to be just the commander needed. He is an old South African soldier of the dare-devil type. He is famous among his men for the scrapes and escapades of his schoolboy life as well as for his daring exploits in South Africa.

Carey took the detachment in hand and led it in a series of attacks and counterattacks which left no time for sleeping and little for eating. He gave neither his men nor the enemy a rest, attacking first on the north, then in the centre, then on the south—harassing the enemy unceasingly with the idea of convincing the Germans that a large force opposed them.

Whenever the Germans tried to feel him out with an attack at one point, Carey parried with a thrust somewhere else, even if it took his last available man, and threw the Germans on the defensive.

Hungry for Punishment.

The spirit of Carey's troops was wonderful. The work they did was almost supernatural. It would have been impossible with any body of men not physical giants, but the Americans and Canadians gloated in it. They crammed every hour of the day full of fighting. It was a constantly changing battle, kaleidoscopic, free-for-all, catch-as-catch-can. The Germans gained ground. Carey and his men were back at them, hungry for more punishment.

It was fortunate that Carey's supply of ammunition was well-nigh inexhaustible, for he had a big ammunition dump right behind him. There was also a good backing of field artillery and the 75s supported him loyally, firing mostly with open sights.

Had the Germans been able to bring entirely fresh troops against it the detachment might not have been able to hold out for six days as it did. The detachment took its place in the line just at the moment when the Germans had used up all their reserves and the enemy did not have any fresh divisions to throw against them.

At the end of the sixth day, dog-tired and battle-worn, but still full of fight, the detachment was relieved by a fresh battalion which had come up from the rear.

PERSHING TO LEAD MIXED DIVISION

ers face recurrent reports of a new drive on the Italian front.

The information that the brigaded allied divisions in the west probably will be placed under the command of General Pershing when the numbers of American troops contained in them predominate, was taken to mean that the same principle would operate when the predominating numbers were French or British.

As giving the view of the allied military experts on this plan, a high officer in the service of one of the powers at war with Germany today gave these opinions to The Associated Press:

"From the news received and from the knowledge of conditions as they were when I recently left France, I cannot believe that the situation is so completely in hand as to warrant any slackening off in the rushing over of American troops.

"Even should this supposition be correct, it would be a great military error to work on such a thesis. There has been no more insidious propaganda than that which tends to seduce popular opinion in the Entente countries into a false sense of security. What is being written today about the Germans having used up all their reserves and having staked their all on victory or defeat has been written almost literally, almost word for word, at every crisis since the beginning of the war. The results have often been to delay preparation and to procrastinate in the carrying out of measures, which eventually were forced to be adopted.

"An incident such as the Ottawa incident is one that might be seized with avidity by the enemy to cause the slowing up in the flow of American troops and to cause argument and feeling about a matter upon which there seems to be perfect accord.

"I cannot see that the statement as published in Ottawa in any way alters the plans for building up a big independent American army as popularly understood here. It seems to me that it is absolutely essential that the officers and noncommissioned officers now en route for France should be given war experience in order that they may form the nucleus upon which the great American army will be built which is to take the field, we hope, as an independent unit in the Spring.

"This arrangement would appear to satisfy both sides of the argument, if the case admits any argument, because not only would the American Army be expedited as an independent unit as shown above, but the supply of the American reinforcements at the present moment would be bound to take some of the burden off the shoulders of the British and French, to say the least of it, and might possibly save a situation should it arrive.

"In war there is nothing certain, and a large number of American troops actually over in France and ready to fight within the next few months would seem to me to be worth five times the number which would go to make up an army of the future, as seems to be the desire of those responsible for the Ottawa statement. Of one thing I feel convinced, that the prestige among the nations of the world gained by America's spontaneous offering of her troops to France and England in the first days of the crisis will be one of the greatest things known to history, and is of far more spiritual importance now than fifty victories next year.

"One idealistic thought like Lincoln's at Gettysburg is worth twenty-five Waterloos. Thoughts and speeches in themselves do not win wars, but had there been no speeches there would have been no Waterloos. It would be interesting to know what General Foch thinks upon the subject, as it would appear to us that that is the only thing that counts at this time.

"The French, British, and Americans are out to win the war as quickly as possible, and it does not matter one little bit who does it as long as it is done, and the time cannot be far distant when, possibly, French and British troops may be brigaded under American commanders."

LIEUT. CONN, WOUNDED, WAS ARCHITECT HERE

Second Lieutenant Robbins L. Conn, who is reported slightly wounded in yesterday's list from General Pershing, is a son of Mrs. Martha Scudder Conn of 70 West Forty-sixth Street, New York. He was an architect and was accepted for the first officers' training camp at Plattsburg. Lieutenant Conn, his mother said, was graduated from the Beaux Arts in this city, being the honor man in a class of more than 700. He is a veteran of the Seventh Regiment.

Private Peter J. Bohan, reported wounded in action, is a member of the 165th Infantry of the Rainbow Division, the command of which the old 69th Regiment is the backbone. He has a twin brother, Thomas, also in the 165th. The brothers came to this country three years ago from Ireland and enlisted in the Sixty-ninth when that regiment was ordered to the Mexican border in 1916. Peter was a bookkeeper at the Hotel Biltmore when he enlisted for the war with Germany. He and his brother lived with their uncle, Joseph Keller, a builder, at 1,444 Seventy-fifth Street, Brooklyn.

Corporal Patrick Farrell, reported killed, was also of the 165th Infantry. He was a member of Company G and enlisted in the old 69th a few days after Congress declared war. He was 30 years old and had been employed by the American Can Company.

Corporal Bernard Loughlin, slightly wounded, is said to be in the Rainbow Division. His home is in Plainfield, N. J., and he enlisted in New York in the first week of the war. He is 19 years old.

General Pershing, in his telegraph list of those killed in action on May 8, gave the name of Private Patrick L. Morahan, Company H, 165th Infantry. Morahan was one of a large number of bellboys employed in the Biltmore and Manhattan Hotels who were called into the service.

Private John Duhig, reported dead of disease, lived at 423 West Fifty-sixth Street. He was an old 69th man, and went to France with the Rainbow. His parents live in Ireland.

Private Stanford M. Grant, who died of disease, was 20 years old, and enlisted in November in Company G, 15th Infantry. Before that he was employed as an elevator operator in the Pittsburgh Glass Company's plant at Third Avenue and Pacific Street, Brooklyn.

Announcement Regarding Red Cross Week
May 20th to 27th

The Second Red Cross War Fund Committee of Greater New York appeals to the citizens for contributions to the Red Cross under the following plans:

1. TEAMS CAMPAIGN—31 teams, with ten members each, have been formed in Manhattan. Each team has been given the names of 800 persons upon whom they will call for contributions. Similar teams have been formed in other boroughs. Pledges may be made payable during a period of four months, July 1st, August 1st, September 1st and October 1st.
Headquarters:—Woolworth Building. Telephone Barclay 8400.

2. CORPORATIONS CAMPAIGN — Committees in various trades in all boroughs will appeal for contributions from corporations in their respective trades, each trade reporting through the Corporation Committee of its borough.
Headquarters:—1 Madison Avenue. Telephone Gramercy 6636.

3. HOUSE TO HOUSE CAMPAIGN—25,000 workers in Greater New York will conduct a house to house canvass, including offices and small stores, seeking contributions of $1 to $100 to the Red Cross War Fund. Contributions may be in cash or in pledges covering four months.
Headquarters:—1 Madison Avenue. Telephone Gramercy 6152.

4. INDUSTRIAL CAMPAIGN—Committees in various trades in all boroughs will present an opportunity to the employees in factories and places of business employing more than 50 persons to make weekly or monthly contributions to the Red Cross War Fund for a period of one year, all contributions payable through the employer.
Headquarters:—120 Broadway. Telephone Rector 7600.

5. PROFIT SHARING DAYS. CAMPAIGN—Trade committees have been organized so as to afford all retail stores of the city an opportunity to contribute 10% of their gross sales on a certain day during Red Cross Week to the War Fund. The campaign in Brooklyn is known as Retailers' Division, and it is asking for a percentage of sales for the entire week.

TAUSCHER SHOWED RIFLES HIDDEN HERE

WOULD AID THE REBELS

Plan Was, He Testifies, for the Weapons to Fall Into Hands of the Revolutionists.

The hearing which Attorney General Lewis is conducting, at the request of the Federal Government, in order to establish the truth of the report, current at various times since the outbreak of the European war, that Germans have a vast amount of small arms and ammunition hidden in this country, was continued at 51 Chambers Street yesterday. That many rifles, most of them of the Mauser type, were owned or under control of Germans, or persons in sympathy with their cause, is the belief of many Federal officials who in the last three years have been engaged in a fruitless search to find these weapons.

Testifying at yesterday's hearing, Ivan Narodny, a Russian, who said his sympathies were with the revolutionary element in Russia, swore that he had conferred with Hans Tauscher, the former agent of the Krupps, and also with Freiheer von Gersdorff, regarding the rifles, and had been assured by both that they did exist and that it was possible to supply them to the revolutionary element to make war on the Czar, but that they could not be sold to the Russian Government to use against the Germans. Narodny said that some of the rifles which, he added, were stored in New Jersey were shown to him.

Willard G. Stanton, the first witness called yesterday, said that he had been told about three different lots of rifles—one of 100,000, another of 267,000, and the third of 200,000. He was unable to close any contracts, he added, for the purchase of these guns. The rifles were not shown to him by the alleged agents of the owners.

William P. Horne of Mount Vernon followed Mr. Stanton on the stand. He said that in the late Fall or early Winter of 1916 he met Mr. Edwards of the National City Bank, who was at that time, according to Narodny, representing somebody with cartridges to sell. Later he met a Mr. Harris and a Mexican of the name of Urquidi, the latter said to be a close adviser of Francisco Villa, and with them went to the Hotel Netherland and conferred with Joseph H. Hoadley.

"Mr. Hoadley assured us," Mr. Horne testified, "that he could deliver the guns if a bona fide responsible purchaser was found. Later we were informed that 280,000 guns were stored in this vicinity. Mr. Harris informed me that the guns were within a few hours of New York City."

Narodny Describes Negotiations.

Ivan Narodny, the witness who brought in the names of Tauscher, Mme. Gadski-Tauscher, his wife, and Freiherr von Gersdorff was the next witness called by the Attorney General. He said that he had heard of the rifles and had cabled to A. Bodisco, then a Municipal Director of Petrograd, concerning the matter; and Bodisco, after a conference with the then Russian Minister of War, had cabled back that Russia needed and wanted them if they were to be had. After telling of his introduction to Gustav Luessing, who is said to have posed as the representative of the owners of the rifles, Narodny continued:

"I was introduced in the Fall of 1914 to Captain Hans Tauscher, the German munitions expert, and the husband of Mme. Gadski, the opera singer. I had previously met Mme. Gadski, and it was Mme. Gadski who told me that her husband, Captain Tauscher, wished to meet me. So I was introduced to Tauscher, and after a short conversation Tauscher broached the subject of the guns. Captain Tauscher asked me if Russia needed guns, and I replied that I could not personally answer the question, but that I had a friend, an Attaché of the Russian Embassy, who could answer the question, and that I would communicate with that friend. The friend I referred to was Captain Vasseliev, then the Naval Attaché of Russia in this country.

"I thought it rather strange that Tauscher wanted to sell these guns to Russia, and so I asked him if he thought it was exactly the proper thing for him, an enemy of Russia, to try and sell the guns to a country with which Germany was at war.

"At any rate, I communicated with Captain Vasseliev, and he replied that before considering the matter he would have to know what kind of guns they were, who owned them, and so on. Subsequent to this I again met Captain Tauscher and told him that I thought Russia was interested in the proposition. He then informed me that he did not know whether they could be sold to Russia or not, but he assured me that the guns were in existence. In order to convince me that the guns did exist, he said he would show me some of them.

"Tauscher said that a German officer named Hansen or Muck, I have forgotten which, would take me to a place where some of the guns were stored. A date for the inspection was arranged, and on the day in question Tauscher and I and the German officer dined at the Ritz or the St. Regis, I am not certain which, but I think it was the St. Regis, for Mme. Gadski lived there at that time.

"After dinner we went in an automobile to New Jersey, the machine belonging to Tauscher. We drove for about an hour and a half or two hours and arrived at a place where I was permitted to inspect several of the guns. I was told that the number stored in that place was about 100,000.

"I reported back to Vasseliev that I had seen some of the guns and after a time he notified me that I was persona non grata as a representative of the then Russian Government and added that anyway if Russia bought the guns they would probably be sunk on the way to Russia."

Narodny said that in a conversation with Tauscher he learned that the German, who was then the Krupp agent in the United States, had rifles in this country which were intended for Mexico and Central America. Tauscher, he added, told him that some of the guns were for Huerta.

"Was there anything said about a shipment of these rifles to Vera Cruz?" Deputy Attorney General Becker asked.

"Yes, there was, but I forget the number of rifles said to have been shipped."

"What kind of guns did you see in New Jersey?"

Germany Would Arm Rebels.

"Who is Freiherr von Gersdorff?"

"He is a German. I went to the same German university with him. Gersdorff on one occasion showed me a letter from the German Crown Prince. With regard to the rifles said to be stored here, Gersdorff said that he thought it entirely possible to deliver the guns to revolutionists, who were bent on the overthrow of the Russian autocracy. He suggested that it might be well to arrange a conference in Sweden between representative German Socialists and representatives of the Russian revolutionists. In case an uprising was started he said Germany would give the Russian rebels the rifles for nothing. He said that if the revolution was successful it would then be possible to negotiate a separate peace between Russia and Germnay. I told him that would make me a traitor and it was out of the question."

"Tauscher was not willing to sell these rifles to the Russian Government to be used against Germany, was he?"

"No, he was not. He was willing ostensibly to sell them to Russia, the understanding being that the revolutionists would get them. It was said that they would be sunk rather than permit them to fall into the hands of the Imperial Government."

Narodny said he was also assured by a Countess von Sievers, whom he described as a Russian noblewoman, that the rifles were here. The Countess, he added, was a personal friend of Mme. Gadski. Gustav Luessing told him, Narodny said, that the rifles were owned by German-Americans.

"Did you ever say that you had been informed that Herman A. Metz knew anything about these guns?" Mr. Becker asked.

"No. I remember that Gersdorff mentioned Mr. Metz's name once, but in what connection I do not remember. I asked Luessing if Mr. Metz knew anything about them, and he replied that he might and he might not."

Joseph H. Noadley, when examined, said that he knew nothing about the rifles, and that anybody who testified otherwise was in error.

Gustav Luessing was called to the stand near the close of the day's hearing. He has been in this country thirty-seven years, and has been mentioned by numerous witnesses as the man who was supposed to represent the owners of the 1,000 Mausers. He denied that he had ever seen the rifles. His examination was brief.

"You have tried to sell these rifles within the last few weeks, have you not?" asked Mr. Becker.

"I have not," he replied, somewhat angrily.

"You will be our first witness a week from today. You will probably be on the stand some time," replied Mr. Becker, as he announced the adjournment.

SHABUOTH BEGINS TODAY.

Religious Ceremonies at Sunset in All Synagogues and Temples.

At sunset this evening the celebration of the Jewish Feast of Shabuoth, the Hebrew Pentecost, will begin with the religious ceremonies appropriate to the occasion at all the orthodox synagogues and the reform temples throughout the world, wherever there is a Jewish community. This festival is also known as the Feast of Weeks, as it is celebrated seven weeks, or really fifty days, after the Passover festival.

GIFT OF POLAND TO BIND AUSTRIA

tions—a participation which was not desired in Berlin circles—was due to the same cause."

Commenting upon the political and military importance of the meeting, the Berlin Lokal-Anzeiger says:

"The meeting of the two Emperors at which, as the head of the second largest German Federal State, the King of Bavaria was present, was a world political event of first-rate importance, which in view of the tremendous military strain in the west is particularly calculated to enable us to look forward hopefully, and confidently to further successes for the German sword."

Dispatches received in Zurich from Vienna say that while the German parties in Austria express great satisfaction over the renewal of the alliance with Germany, the Czechs and the South Slavs have declared their intention to offer most determined opposition to the Parliamentary delegations.

Vienna newspapers, according to an Austrian dispatch, welcome the announcement that the Emperors decided upon a deepening of the alliance between the two countries.

"The renewal of the alliance," says the Neues Wiener Tageblatt, "satisfies the political intelligence of Austrians, while at the same time it is the heart's desire of us Germans in Austria."

The newspaper adds that only an alliance with a strong Austria can have a value for Germans in Austria, and that the reconstruction of the alliance with Germany will, therefore, have to be followed sooner or later by the internal reconstruction of Austria. This will serve both for defense and the long-desired peace, internally as well as externally.

The Reichspost says that news that the fundamental guiding lines for a reconstruction of the alliance have already been fixed is encouraging and full of promise. The Neue Freie Presse says that as a result of the experience of the past "four painful years" the alliance probably will be made general, "as desired by old Emperor William."

AIM AT MITTELEUROPA IN TEUTON AGREEMENT

Stricter Military Obligations Are Said to be Imposed for Twenty-five Years.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 15.—According to an official French telegram received here today, an effort was made at the conference between Emperors William and Charles to establish a basis for the realization of the so-called Mitteleuropa plan. The dispatch follows:

"According to a telegram from Zurich, the Berlin newspapers indicate that the agreement made at the conference between the Emperors appears to have concerned three points:

"1. The duration of the alliance was fixed for twenty-five years.

"2. Germany and Austria are to sign a military convention imposing upon each much stricter military obligations than did the preceding treaty.

"3. The economic relations will be regulated so as to realize the plan of Mitteleuropa.

"It moreover deals with an agreement purely in theory and principle whose practical realization will necessitate further negotiations still. It is enough, on the other hand, to read the Austrian semi-official note published upon the subject of the interview to realize that at Vienna they desire at the same time to lull the mistrust of the Entente and the suspicions of the non-Germans of the dual monarchy while dwelling upon the defensive character of the agreement and declaring with a certian hypocrisy that this cannot be in opposition to the ideas of the sovereignty of nations.

"It is the same old manoeuvre. To appreciate the worth of such statements one only has to observe that in the same note it is affirmed that the Central Empires were attacked. This gross lie shows the character of this document."

A Zurich dispatch received here reads:

"The Neue Züriche Zeitung has received from Vienna the following information upon the interview of the two Emperors:

"'No formal agreement was signed this time because the moment did not seem opportune. Nevertheless, the direction and basis of a new treaty of alliance were definitely fixed, and it only remains to frame the different clauses as well as to establish the precise form of the continuation of the present alliance and of its extension.'"

A Paris telegram quotes L'Homme Libre as saying in connection with the conference:

"We are told that after the recent German conquest the situation of Europe will be changed completely. They exaggerate. The foundations of Mitteleurope are not so solid as is pretended, and if the union of the Germans of Germany and Austria is established it will clear the situation, for it will inevitably bring with it the rupture of the Austrian equilibrium and the revolt, more or less soon, of the Czech and Jugo-Slav nations. While waiting for the verification of this hypothesis, we shall learn more this time without further ambiguity where the enemies of peace are to be found, and if Germany has just played her last card, as is probable, that does not mean that this makes her the winner of the game."

An official dispatch from Moscow received today stated that a telegram had been received there from Kiev to the effect that the Germans and Austrians had established spheres of influence for the exploitation of the rivers in the Ukraine. A part of the Dnieper was assigned to the Germans and another part of that river as well as part of the Bug River was assigned to the Austrians.

DISSENT IN BOTH EMPIRES.

Liberals and Socialists Alarmed—London Papers Scoff.

LONDON, May 15.—German and Austrian Liberal and Socialist newspapers, says an Exchange Telegraph dispatch from Copenhagen, are dissatisfied greatly with the far-reaching decision that has been made at German Great Headquarters without the sanction of the Parliaments.

At the meeting of the Emperors, the London Daily Chronicle says, apparently a step was taken toward formally defining and recognizing the subservient relations of the Dual Monarchy toward the German Empire.

"An independent Austria-Hungary," the newspaper adds, "is impossible, chiefly because not one of its constituent nationalities wants it. The Austro-German and Magyar dominant minorities ruling over Slav majorities do not want an independent monarchy, but a monarchy dependent on Germany, which can help them maintain their unnatural position.

"Meanwhile we do well to realize that all attempts, whether in enemy camps or in our own, to trade on the idea of Austria-Hungary as a separate power are profoundly deceptive. 'Austro-Hungarian independence' is a phrase which has only one value, namely, camouflage for German sovereignty over Central Europe."

TRYING TO DIVIDE SLAVS.

Austrian Effort Rebuffed in Bosnia—Starvation in Provinces.

LONDON, May 15.—The Jugoslav movement and its growing political activity have perturbed greatly the bureaucrats in Vienna, according to information received in Serbian quarters here. As a result, they are doing every thing possible to sow discord in the ranks of the Jugoslavs.

For this purpose a new political group has been formed in Bosnia under the leadership of Dr. Pilar, an exponent of Austrian imperialism. The aims of this group are the formation of a Croatian State within the borders of the Austrian Empire, an idea irreconcilable with the ideals of the Croatian, Slovenian, and Serbian peoples, whose only desire is to be united in a free and independent Jugoslav State.

With reference to this new intrigue of the Austrian Government and its failure, the Glasloboda of Agram says:

"Dr. Pilar invited some thirty-eight of his supporters to a meeting to discuss matters in connection with the formation of a new political party, but to his great disappointment even those men who he thought would share his opinions condemned his action bitterly, calling his leadership and conduct treacherous and unpatriotic. Dr. Pilar was sharply reproached for abandoning the town of Rieka-Fiume to the Magyars and for ignoring the Slovenians and their interests.

"'Go away from us. Your place is not among us, and we do not want to have the Prussians and Magyars as overlords in our State,' they declared."

The Glasloboda also gives a graphic picture of the terrible economic situation in Bosnia and Herzegovina, saying that only two provinces in the empire have suffered more than these.

"Those two provinces," it says, "are Galicia and Bukowina, which were the cockpits of great conflicts between the Austrian and Russian armies. Nevertheless, the situation in Bosnia and Herzegovina is horrible.

"Entire districts of eastern Bosnia and the whole of the eastern part of Herzegovina are today depopulated and devastated regions which look as if a terrible typhoon had visited them with its devilish destruction. A great number of inhabitants were deported and have since died in internment camps. Those who remained were massacred by Austrian soldiers. In other districts the population is dying of starvation."

TILLMAN BEHIND PRESIDENT

"To Hell with All German Sympathizers," Senator Exclaims.

COLUMBIA, S. C., May 15.—"To hell with all German sympathizers and thank God for Woodrow Wilson!" exclaimed Senator Tillman, concluding an address before the State Democratic Convention here today.

The Senator declared he wanted the people of the State to know where he stood on the one issue before them—the war issue.

"As your Senator now and as Chairman of the great Naval Affairs Committee of the Senate, I am proud to say to you that when the test came those of us connected with the navy could truthfully tell our people, 'All is well with the fleet,'" he said.

DOUBT IN GERMANY ON MONARCHS' DEAL

folly" of such a scheme as Mitteleuropa. It may bring gold, fame, honor, and so on, he says, but Austria wants meat, copper, wool, and all kinds of raw materials. As prices will be high, she will need money. Already she is burdened as a debtor to Germany alone with a yearly interest amounting to over £700,000,000.

Where will the needful money come from? Harden asks. Not from battlefields or victories, but chiefly from America, and he thinks it conceivable that Austria should long for a peace which will secure for her the friendship of the United States. He adds:

"The dual monarchy is not married to her neighbor. She needs freedom to make agreements with powers which are our enemies but not hers. She needs more than any other people the friendship of America. Austria is not a German State and can never be one, Austria and Hungary know that they have essentially other interests, another spiritual and ideal outlook."

Slav Resentment Deepens.

Austria-Hungary must, in Harden's opinion, be "a bond of States in which each people has liberty of speech and every State free government." He concludes that in Austria the cleavage was never deeper than now between the Germans, sullen in their inherited desire for power, and the impatient, forward-striving Slavs. "Never was resentment so bitter as today," he adds.

Reports from Vienna show that the news of the "strengthened and extended alliance" is not received with the slightest approval by the Slavs and Czechs, who, a Frankfurter Zeitung dispatch declares, will fight it with all their strength. The Poles are said to be rather pleased, as they think it means an early Polish settlement on the lines of union with Austria, but it is doubtful if that pleasure is general.

AUSTRIANS CALL WAR "CRAZY."

Belief That Ruler Is Seeking Peace Sustains the People.

AMSTERDAM, May 15.—The Tijd prints the following significant and much-censored letter from its Vienna correspondent:

"The reason why all classes of the population have regretted Count Czernin's departure (from the Foreign Office) is that in him they saw the herald of peace, and the people want peace above all. This is not surprising, because the misery is extreme. (This part censored.) The people will probably hold out through the next difficult months until the Ukraine grain arrives in sufficient quantities. But it is natural that everybody yearns for peace—(censored.) Hundreds of times daily one hears the lament, 'How long is this crazy destruction to last?'

"Only the conviction that the Emperor honestly desires peace and has given evidence of this in recent incidents keep the people going."

CLEAR FIELD FOR J. H. LEWIS

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAG, IllO., May 15.—Following conferences between Illinois Democratic chieftains and national leaders of the party in Washington, an agreement has been reached whereby Senator James Hamilton Lewis probably will be unopposed for the Democratic nomination for United States Senator in this State next Fall. The Roger C. Sullivan wing of the Democratic party in Chicago is the only disturbing factor, and between now and the primaries it is deemed probable that the Sullivans will be won over to the support of Lewis.

Ex-Mayor Carter H. Harrison, one of those participating in the conference at Washington, said today he was firmly of the belief that Senator Lewis would be unopposed for the nomination.

On the Republican side there are three candidates for the Senatorial nomination, ex-Governor Charles S. Deneen, Mayor William Hale Thompson and Congressman-at-large Medill McCormick. The indications are that McCormick will get the nomination.

TO BLOCK GERMANS IN PLOT FOR SHIPS

Government Adopts Program to Prevent Foe from Getting Vessels After War.

BILL INTRODUCED IN HOUSE

Gives Shipping Board Power to Pass Upon Requests from Foreign Interests.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 15.—A comprehensive program to defeat attempts by German agents to obtain an interest in shipping now being constructed in American yards, and to place contracts for ships which would gain preference over other orders after the war, has been adopted and a thorough investigation started which it is believed will unearth all efforts at intrigue of this nature, which are backed by the Central Powers.

It has been suspected that German capital, in various disguises, has been endeavoring to obtain a foothold in the shipbuilding situation, as in many other industries of the nation. Under the plan adopted, every safeguard will be provided against such an emergency, and indisputable evidence must be submitted to show that German interests are not involved in proposed dealings relating to America's shipping program.

Congress, the Shipping Board, the War Trade Board, and the Alien Property Custodian are all involved in the fight to see that in this direction as well as in all industrial and commercial relations the Central Powers shall be discarded as undesirable. It is reported that the most subtle and questionable attempts have been made by German interests to re-establish themselves and prepare for the future at the expense of the United States and the allied nations.

Broad Program Adopted.

The move now under way to fight the German agents is, in effect, a part of the broader program which has gradually been put into force to strip Germany of financial holdings in America and end any hope it may have had of being able surreptitiously to retain its holdings here and, if possible, add to them, so that it could emerge from the war in a position to take a commanding place in international commercial relations.

The scope of the plans as they affect shipping was made known today when the House Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries, of which Representative John W. Alexander is Chairman, reported favorably a bill giving the Shipping Board unusual powers to prevent foreign interests in any way from obtaining financial holdings in the shipyards or vessels constructed, except with the unqualified permission of the board. The Representative asked that this bill, and another affecting rates, be placed on the calendar as war legislation.

Mr. Alexander explained that the legislation was designed to prevent German capital from obtaining a foothold, and indicated that offers and requests had been made through brokers, some of which had aroused the suspicion that the agents of the Central Powers were at work.

Hundreds of requests, it is said, have come through brokers and others for the right to place contracts for the construction of shipping in American yards as soon as the American war program is completed, whether that point is reached before the war ends or soon after.

While it is admitted that the large majority of these offers, many of which are made in behalf of financial interests of foreign nations, are legitimate and open to the most searching investigation, there is no intention on the part of the Administration to give the German intrigues the slightest loophole for furthering their interests.

Yards under jurisdiction of the Emergency Fleet Corporation—and they include practically every yard of importance in the country—will not be permitted to consider the acceptance of other than Government contracts, at least until it is known that all of America's needs are provided for and that offers which have been made by brokers bear no pro-German taint.

This policy is not aimed at any neutral or allied nation, and applications by these countries for permission to let contracts for ships to be constructed later will receive every consideration.

In carrying forward the program the officials have at their disposal the mass of invaluable information concerning enemy connection with financial interests of all kinds, in this nation and in foreign countries, which has been gathered by the War Trade Board, the Alien Property Custodian, and the allied nations.

It has been announced that the department of the Alien Property Custodian, which has been ridding many of America's industrial interests of the German menace, is prepared to seize any property, shipyard or ship, where it is shown that German agents have succeeded in obtaining an interest, and to take steps to purge the property involved of its undesirable connections.

The Government, through the Shipping Board, now has complete control of and must pass upon all ship contracts before they may be accepted by shipyards, and this power of supervision will be used to the full where occasion is found. The Trading with the Enemy act provides ample power to deal with persons or corporations which attempt to transact business with enemy interests, and heavy penalties are named.

The more important of the bills which have been reported by the House Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries gives full authority to the Shipping Board to pass upon requests coming from foreign interests with the object of preventing German capital from obtaining, even indirectly, any grip on the shipping interests through the holding of mortgages, stocks, or bonds. Ships built in American yards under the terms of the legislation will not be leased to any corporation influenced by German interests.

Power for Shipping Board.

The Shipping Board is vested with the power of making the decisions involved in order to defeat the efforts of Germany and assure a control of all shipping constructed here by interests in which the Central Powers have no holdings or authority. The legislation is applicable for a reasonable period after the war.

A careful watch on all efforts on the part of Germany to act in the guise of a neutral agency—and these attempts have been made despite the best efforts of neutral Governments to discredit them—is being maintained and a thorough organization is being built up, through the co-operation of all of the Government departments dealing with such matters, by which it is predicted Germany's hold on any of the shipping interests, as well as on other industries, will be broken.

The recent agreements made by the War Trade Board with the allied Governments to fight German efforts to play a part in commercial relations among these nations by having exports and imports involving the United States carefully viséed and purged before production and shipment are permitted, is, believed by officials to have gone far to defeat many of the plans which the Germans had prepared.

RESUME WORK FOR ARMY.

Cloth Spongers to Explain Demands to Arbitration Board.

Edward Fillmore, President of the Textile Finishers' Association, announced after a conference at the Manhattan Club yesterday that 350 striking cloth spongers and examiners, working on Government contracts for uniforms, had agreed to return to work pending arbitration of their demands by a Federal arbitration board.

The men, who went on strike last Saturday for an increase of $6 a week, returned to work on the condition that they sholud receive an increase of $2 a week at once, and that an immediate hearing be held before a Federal arbitration board. Major Rosensohn of the industrial division of the Quartermaster's Department, who came from Washington at the request of Secretary Baker, and Major Charles E. Jones of the Quartermaster's Department in this city attended the conference as Government representatives.

TRY QUAKER TEACHER FOR VIEWS ON WAR

GAVE TO WAR CHARITIES

The case of Mary S. McDowell, a teacher of Latin in the Manual Training High School, Brooklyn, on charges of conduct unbecoming a teacher, was tried yesterday by a committee of the Board of Education consisting of Frank D. Wilsey, George J. Ryan, Joseph Yeata and Mrs. Annie M. Murray. Miss McDowell is a Quaker, and the charges grew out of her religious objections to taking any part in the various war measures. She was represented by Austen G. Fox and John P. Broomell, who were engaged by the Religious Society of Friends to defend her. The society in January last passed a remonstrance against the action of the educational authorities in preferring charges against her, and decided that as it was a purely religious question they would stand by her. It is their intention, if the Board of Education should decide to dismiss her, to carry the case to the State Commissioner of Education, and in the event of his sustaining the board to take the matter up to the United States Supreme Court.

When the trial began, Mr. Fox asked if the committee would render its decision for the entire board, and was assured by Corporation Counsel Charles McIntyre that this would be so. Mr. Fox then moved that the charge against Miss McDowell should be dismissed on the ground that it was purely a religious matter. Chairman Wilsey denied the motion.

Mr. Fox said that his client was a birthright member of the New York Monthly Meeting of the Religious Society of Friends commonly known as Quakers, that her father and mother were also birthright members of it, that most of her ancestors for generations had been members of it, and that these ancestors for more than 100 years had been citizens of the United States. One of the cardinal principles of the society was the conviction that all war was immoral and unchristian.

He declared that statements made by Miss McDowell in reply to the interrogations of the Board of Superintendents on Jan. 10, 1918, were in accord with the religious belief and principles of the Society of Friends relative to the subject of war, and that the statements directly expressed the religious belief of Miss McDowell herself.

Mr. McIntyre offered in evidence Miss McDowell's answers to the Superintendents as to her attitude with regard to the war in which she said that she was opposed to it because of her religious convictions; that she did not believe in bearing arms, and that she thought there was another way of meeting the difficulty.

Mr. Fox then called Miss McDowell to the witness chair. He asked her if she had distributed War Thrift Stamps or circulars in the school. She answered that she had done so.

He presented to her a number of checks and she identified them as made out by her for the Armenian sufferers, Red Cross work and other charitable objects.

Miss McDowell said that her salary as teacher amounted to a little more than $203 a month. Mr. McIntyre asked her when she had joined the Red Cross Society, and she said that it was about the time of her suspension from school duty. He wanted to know whether she had refused to teach civics in the school when requested to do so by her Principal. She denied this. She said that she taught Latin, English and patriotism.

Principal Snyder testified that he had requested Miss McDowell to teach citizenship to her pupils and that she had asked that some one else should do so.

Lawyer Obtains No Confirmation from the Washington Authorities.

Frederick W. Marquand, a lawyer at 165 Broadway, expressed yesterday his conviction that Miss Minnie E. Dewar, whose death in France was announced by her father on Monday, was not dead, and that the report of her death had been due to a misunderstanding. Mr. Marquand is a friend of Miss Dewar, and, speaking in behalf of the girl's mother, Mrs. Janet Dewar of 581 North Eighth Street, Newark, said:

"I have received answers from the Bureau of Navigation, the Navy Department, and the Adjutant General's Department to the effect that none of those agencies has a record of Miss Dewar's death. In addition I have cabled, and the War Department has done the same, to France asking information, but as yet have not received a reply. I am positive, however, that inasmuch as Washington has not confirmed the report, Miss Dewar is not dead."

The first news of the killing of the nurse was obtained from her father, John Dewar of 581 Washington Avenue. When reporters visited him on Monday night it was understood that he had received a cable dispatch telling of his daughter's death. Yesterday Mr. Dewar said that it "was all a mistake." A friend in Brooklyn, he said, had received the dispatch and told him about it. He added that the friend in Brooklyn had since told him the report probably was a mistake. He would not disclose the Brooklyn man's name.

COHEN KILLED FOR DEBT.

New Evidence in Murder Case Reaches the District Attorney.

New evidence that has reached the District Attorney in the murder of Harry Cohen, known also as "Harry the Yot," a gambler, who was shot to death in the corridor of the apartment house at 7 West Ninety-second Street, removes the suspicion that the man was slain to prevent him from giving information against gamblers. The motives for the murder, it now appears, were an unpaid gambling loan of $500, borrowed by Cohen, and a personal quarrel concerning a woman, whose name is known to the District Attorney.

This new evidence brings in the names of two other suspects, and indicates that Morris Rothenberg, who has been held in the Tombs for some time on the charge of firing the shot that killed Cohen, had no actual part in the crime. One of the suspects, under arrest at Cleveland on a charge of burglary, has been interviewed by a member of Judge Swann's staff, and his statement, together with other evidence, will be presented to the Grand Jury today.

UPHOLD PRESIDENT WILSON.

Catholic Legion Pledges Its Support to Administration.

Resolutions pledging the support of the Catholic Benevolent Legion to President Wilson in his conduct of the war and urging the support of the army and navy were passed yesterday at the annual meeting of the Supreme Council in Brooklyn. The resolutions assert confidence in ultimate victory and in the disinterestedness of the Administration's war aims and continue:

"These boys serving the colors have the right to expect that the American people will stand behind them even to the last dollar of treasure that this nation owns." Richard Tippett of Baltimore, newly-elected President, signed the resolutions for transmission to the President.

TEUTONS SCHEMING TO WEAKEN ITALY

HOLT TO GO ON MISSION

Measures Taken Here to Counteract False Information—Want Our Toops Sent.

Information which has come to the Federal Government within the last twenty-four hours as to the extent and character of German propaganda in Italy against America for the purpose of undermining Italian morale preparatory to a military or peace drive so astounded a meeting of the Executive Committee of the Italy-America Society, held yesterday afternoon in the Lawyers' Club, that immediate steps were taken to meet the emergency, which, according to speakers, is comparable to a military crisis.

The source of the information and some of the most important steps which are to be taken to meet the situation cannot be revealed owing to military exigencies. It was announced, however, that the following action was taken:

1. Hamilton Holt, who is now in London, was directed by cable to proceed immediately to Italy and co-operate with the staff of the Committee on Public Information and with the Italy-America Society to meet the insidious Teuton scheme.

2. The committee favored sending immediately American troops to Italy, preferably Italian-speaking citizens of this country, to march from Sicily to Rome and thence to the battlefront.

3. The appointment of a special economic mission was authorized to take up the task of cementing the friendship of the two countries and to formulate plans for meeting certain economic emergencies due to the war.

4. As a feature of the celebration of Italy-America day on May 24, a nation-wide effort will be made to cause citizens of this country of Italian birth to write to their relatives and friends in Italy describing the war preparations of this country and giving a true picture of the loyalty of the larger portion of the foreign-born population here and the whole-hearted and sympathetic attitude of Americans generally toward Italy and her people. The plan is to make each of these letters practically the beginning of a chain letter, suggesting that upon their receipt in Italy they be immediately transmitted to other friends, with the suggestion that they be still further passed on.

Germans Allege Disloyalty Here.

It was revealed that the State Department has received important reports on the elaborateness of German propaganda in Italy directed against this country. Before the disaster of Caporetto, where the fraternizing of German troops with Italian troops succeeded in breaking down the Italian morale so that the Teutonic forces broke through the Italian lines and caused the sacrifice of an army, German propaganda in Italy was directed against Great Britain. Strenuous efforts were made to drive a wedge between Italy and England by the systematic sowing of suspicion of her ally in the minds of Italians.

This effort on the part of secret German agents and disloyal elements in Italy is directed with renewed emphasis against the United States. The Italian people are being told that America will never get troops in any considerable number to Europe, because the army which is being raised here will be absolutely needed in this country to keep down the foreign born population, which is alleged to be on the verge of revolt.

They are also being told that Italian-born citizens of this county are on the verge of revolt against being forced into the American Army.

Another story is that America was forced into the war by the moneyed interests which had grown fat on profits from the manufacture of munitions and, having lent money to the Allies, forced an unwilling people to fight to protect their interests.

Still another tale is that these interests have no real desire to win the war, but that their purpose is to secure a mortgage on an impoverished Europe and thus monopolize her trade after the war, reaping huge profits from the loans that must be made.

These stories are dressed up with imaginative details, such as that the declaration of war was preceded by a secret visit to the White House by the head of one of the largest banking houses in this country.

Hughes Presides at Meeting.

Charles E. Hughes, President of the Italy-America Society, presided at the meeting, which was called for the purpose of planning final details for the concert and mass meeting to be held at the Metropolitan Opera House on the evening of May 24th, as a climax to New York City's celebration of Italy-America Day.

Others present were William Fellowes Morgan, George F. Baker, Jr., Lindsay Russell, Capt. F. M. Guardabassi, Richard Washburn Child, Dr. Felice Ferrero, Dr. Antonio Stella, J. G. White, Charles B. Alexander, John Foord, Abram I. Elkus and Karl V. S. Howland.

Following the presentation of the alarming reports from Italy, Mr. Russell suggested that the society urge with all possible emphasis the immediate dispatch of American troops to Italy to give the lie direct to one of the most sedulously circulated German fictions.

This suggestion was cordially seconded by Dr. Ferrero, head of the Italian information service in this country. Dr. Ferrero said that no action that could be taken by the authorities here would have a more instantaneous effect on the morale of the Italian people than the march of American troops through that country, and if the march could take the course of Garibaldi's famous advance across Italy the enterprise would still further appeal to the Italian imagination.

There Are Just a Few Who Make Collections Costly

MOST TELEPHONE SUBSCRIBERS pay their bills promptly and the labor expended in collecting the majority of telephone accounts is therefore reasonable.

BUT THERE ARE A NUMBER of subscribers who overlook their telephone bills, who neglect to pay them within the reasonable specified time, and the labor of collecting these accounts is great —probably two or three times as great as that involved in collecting all the accounts that are paid within the desired period.

THE LABOR involved in collecting overdue accounts is labor that would be unnecessary, if all accounts were paid within a reasonable time, and particularly under present war-time conditions, it might better be devoted to other work of value to the community's telephone service.

We are taking this means of placing the facts before telephone subscribers in general and we feel certain that they will co-operate by paying their bills promptly.

Hamilton is Watch of U. S. Mail Aviators

The fastest of fast mails, the U. S. Mail aeroplane route between Washington, Philadelphia, and New York, reckons its flying time on a Hamilton Watch schedule.

The pilots of the first aeroplanes that carried United States mail yesterday between Washington and New York all wore military aviation model Hamilton Watches.

Major R. H. Fleet, Jr., who was in charge of the history-making flights, and Lieutenants Howard P. Culver, Torrey H. Webb, Walter Miller, James C. Edgerton, George L. Boyle, and Stephen Bousale, Jr., all of the Aero Service Signal Reserve Corps, the pilots picked for the initial trips, were presented with their Hamiltons, before the start, by Charles F. Miller, president of the Hamilton Watch Company.

Hamilton Watch

"The Watch of Aeroplane Accuracy"

Known for years as "the watch of railroad accuracy," Hamiltons are carried by the engineers of America's most famous express trains—also by the majority of all train crews on lines having official time inspection.

Now the Hamilton is destined to become the watch of aeroplane accuracy, as well as the watch of railroad accuracy, because of its thoroughly dependable, continuous, uninterrupted service.

Let your next watch be a Hamilton. This perfect timepiece measures exactingly up to every requirement of the modern pace, whether in the air, on the ground, or at sea. If you don't carry a Hamilton you're losing time.

There are 32 Hamilton models to choose from, ranging in style from rugged utility cases to slender objects of extraordinary artistic beauty.

Prices, $28 to $150. Movements $15 ($17 in Canada) and up. Sold by all leading jewelers everywhere. Send today for "The Timekeeper"—the story of Hamilton supremacy.

ARMY ESTABLISHES ZONE DEPOT SYSTEM

Thirteen Supply Stations Located at Various Points Will Facilitate Distributions

AND LESSEN THE DELAYS

Camps Hereafter Will Get Clothing and Food from Factories in the Immediate Vicinity.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 15.—Acting Quartermaster General Goethals announced today that the War Department had established a zone system designed to make possible a more equitable apportionment of purchases throughout the United States and to facilitate distribution. Thirteen general supply depots, located at various points, have been established and the Quartermasters in charge will ascertain the manufacturing possibilities of the different zones.

On the basis of their reports to General Goethals it is hoped that an equitable allocation of purchases will be made. So far as possible clothing, food, and equipment for troops at the different camps will be purchased within the zone in which the camp is located.

Formerly nearly all of a particular class of supplies was purchased through a single general supply depot, the geographical location of that depot being considered most favorable for this special article. Manufacturers located in sections far distanct from the particular supply depot buying their goods were at a disadvantage and were unable to compete with rivals nearer the point. Under the new system most classes of supplies will be purchased through each of the thirteen depots. Manufacturers will be able to transact their business through the depot nearest them.

The zones of operation apply to procurement, production, inspection, manufacture, storage, and distribution of Quartermaster supplies. The States included in the zones assigned to the thirteen supply depots follow:

Boston General Supply Depot—Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, and Rhode Island.

New York Depot—New York, Connecticut, and New Jersey, (Trenton and north.)

Chicago Depot—Indiana north of Indianapolis, Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota, North Dakota, South Dakota, Illinois, except territory south of Jacksonville, Springfield, and Decatur, and Iowa east of Des Moines and Fort Dodge.

St. Louis Depot—Missouri, Illinois south of Jacksonville, Springfield, and Decatur, Kansas, Oklahoma, and Arkansas.

New Orleans Depot—Louisiana and Mississippi.

El Paso Depot—New Mexico and Arizona.

San Francisco Depot—California, Oregon, Washington, Idaho, and Montana.

Each general supply Depot Quartermaster, besides ascertaining production facilities within his zone, will recommend to the proper central organization of the Quartermaster General's office the employment of such producers as are, in his judgment, qualified to fulfill contracts. Each depot is expected to keep informed as to market conditions and spot goods located in that zone, and when shortages occur shall submit recommendations for purchase of articles which may be obtained within the zone.

The central organizations are to make an effort to promote the industry of each zone by a proper allocation of purchases. Matters of price, quality, reliability, delivery, ultimate destination, and the sanitary conditions surrounding the production will have a bearing upon the allocation.

Purchases shall be made after advertisement by open competitive bidding when time will permit. In emergency cases competition is desired whenever possible. The record of bids received and awards made will be open to public inspection.

Total for Sale of Collection to Date Is $135,050.75.

The sale of the library of the late Winston H. Hagen was continued yesterday afternoon and last evening at the Anderson Galleries. George D. Smith was the principal buyer. The highest price was $9,700, which he paid for Catalogue No. 1155, "Speke Parrot, the Deth of the Noble Prince, Kyng Edward the fourth; A Treatyse of the Scottes, Ware the Hawke and The Tunnyng of Elynour Rummynge," by John Skelton, poet laureate to King Henry VII., London, Circa 1520. The volume also contains "Colin Choute," "Why Come Ye Not to Courte," and "The Boke of Phylly Sparowe." It is the earliest known edition. Other items, also bought by Mr. Smith, were as follows:

No. 980—First issue of the first edition of "The Dunciad," by Alexander Pope, London, 1728	$2,025
No. 984—"The Arte of English Poesie," by George Puttenham, London, 1589, first edition	672.50
No. 1,073—The second folio Shakespeare, London, 1632	2,950
No. 1,074—The rare "Poems," by Shakespeare, London, 1640	5,010
No. 1,075—The third folio Shakespeare, London, 1664	5,900
No. 1,134—"Adonais," by Percy Bysshe Shelley, Pisa, 1821, first edition	1,250
No. 1,210—"Songs and Sonets," by Henry Howard, Earl of Surrey, London, 1574, one of the rarest volumes in the English language	4,125

The total for the two sessions was $44,169. The total thus far is $135,050.75. The sale will be concluded today.

FRENCH ORCHESTRA COMING

Otto H. Kahn Arranges for Visit of Symphony of Paris in October.

Otto H. Kahn cabled from Paris yesterday to the French-American Association for Musical Art that arrangements are complete for a visit of the Symphony Orchestra of the Societe des Concerts du Conservatoire, a Government institution, to the United States from Oct. 1 to Jan. 1 next. This is the second French musical organization announced to come to America in the last few days, the other being a famous military band to be brought over by the Y. M. C. A. to tour the army camps.

The Symphony Orchestra of the Paris Conservatory includes eighty-six professors and members of the National Conservatory in Paris, and this is its first trip abroad, to be limited to three months. Fifty concerts will be given, by arrangement with Chambers of Commerce in important cities from coast to coast, and the visitors will be the guests of leading musical organizations such as the Boston Symphony and other American orchestras in their own halls.

The French-American Association for Musical Art includes in its Executive Committee these New Yorkers: Frederick G. Bourne, James Byrne, Andre de Coppet, H. P. Davison, H. C. Frick, Robert Goelet, A. D. Juilliard, Otto H. Kahn, Clarence H. Mackay, John D. Rockefeller, Jr., Charles H. Sabin, W. K. Vanderbilt, Henry Walters, and George W. Wickersham.

All profits of the tour, it is announced, will be devoted to war relief.

SENDS STRANGS TO JAIL.

Mrs. Jennie Strang of 3 Mountain View Avenue, Westerleigh, Richmond Borough, and her husband, Charles, one of the Superintendents at the Staten Island Shipbuilding Company's plant at Port Richmond, were sentenced to the New York County Penitentiary for an indefinite term yesterday in the Court of Special Sessions at St. George for branding their two children, Elizabeth, 11 years, and Raymond, 9 years. Mrs. Strang was convicted on Wednesday and Strang then pleaded guilty.

Mrs. Strang collapsed after the sentence and had to be carried out of the courtroom. It was more than an hour later before she was revived sufficiently to make the journey to Blackwell's Island. The children were not in court. Justice Murphy, who presided over the court, said: "A thorough investigation has been conducted into this case, and while we have received many letters from neighbors and friends of the Strangs who speak in the highest terms of them, we cannot see why they inflicted any such punishment on their children for the minor things they did. The crime is nothing less than torture of the worst type, and it cannot be tolerated in any civilized country."

Mrs. Strang, according to the testimony given by her mother, Mrs. Bertha White of Syracuse, on Palm Sunday placed the hands of the boy Raymond on top of the hot kitchen stove and burned them severely after he had stolen some jelly. On Easter Sunday Strang placed both hands of his daughter Elizabeth on top of the same stove and burned them after she had stolen some candy. Mrs. Strang is the stepmother of Raymond and Elizabeth.

TO AID WAR BLIND.

First of a Series of Teas at Anderson Galleries.

The first of the receptions and teas which it is announced will be given every afternoon in the Anderson Galleries at the exhibition of art works donated by artists for the benefit of the American-British-French-Belgian Permanent War Relief Blind Fund took place yesterday.

Mrs. Charles A. Potter of Philadelphia presided over the tea tables, assisted by Mrs. Jasper Bayne and others. Mrs. Anne Pierre Lloyd, authoress of "Canada Blackie," told interesting anecdotes of painters and sculptors. A well-known Australian lecturer and entertainer, Colville Dunn, recited humorous verses in the dialect of Australia. Mrs. Ruth Mason Rice, daughter of Mrs. Caroline Atwater Mason, the authoress, and herself a writer, gave lively anecdotes of her experiences while talking to crowds in New York and other cities and adventures she had had with pro-German speakers who sought to intrude upon the platform in the guise of British soldiers.

Today a number of speakers will give brief addresses, including Mrs. Jasper Bayne, who will recite "Vive La France."

B. R. T. URGES 6-CENT FARE.

Colonel Timothy S. Williams, President of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company, inspired by the ordering of a 6-cent fare on the street cars of St. Louis, yesterday renewed agitation for a similar charge on the transit lines of Brooklyn.

"It looks as if a 6-cent fare will have to come," said Colonel Williams. "Some relief will become necessary because of the fast increasing cost of railroad operation. St. Louis is a notable addition to the constantly growing list of 6-cent fare cities.

"Recent incidents show that business communities are coming to recognize the necessity of giving electric railways sufficient revenue to enable them to supply the service, which the needs of business, increased by the nation's war program, demands. One is a petition to the Mayor of the City of Rochester, signed by practically every important manufacturer in the city, asking that the New York State railways be permitted to charge a 6-cent fare."

IRISH PROTESTANTS SPLIT OVER DRAFT

Bishop of Killaloe and Other Loyalists Withdraw from Dublin Meeting.

PRIMATE PRAYS FOR ANTIS

Says Their Absence from Army Will Ever Constitute Darkest Blot on Ireland's History.

By CHARLES M. WHEELER.

Copyright, 1918, by The Chicago Tribune Company.

DUBLIN, May 15.—Whether loyalty to the King is a religious or a political question; whether the clergy who supported Washington in the American Revolution were disloyal to the Church; whether the Belgian clergy were disloyal to the Church in opposing the Kaiser, precipitated a heated debate at the meeting of Protestant churchmen in Dublin last night, finally disrupting the meeting.

After it was decided by vote that it was a political question, and that they could oppose conscription and still remain in the church, the Right Rev. Stirling Berry, Protestant Bishop of Killaloe, and several loyalists withdrew, leaving the radicals in control. They rescinded the resolution passed June 19 that had deplored the Easter rising.

Coincidentally, Dr. Crozier, Protestant Primate of Ireland, presiding at the General Synod of the Protestant Church in Ireland at Dublin, praised the loyal Irishmen who had offered their lives in war and deplored the attitude of the anti-conscriptionists. He said:

"May God in His mercy forgive our misguided countrymen whose absence from the service will ever constitute the darkest blot on the tragic page of Ireland's history."

Protestant clergy, as well as Catholic, are now active in the conscription campaign, and, though on opposite sides, both base their stand on the same principle of conscience. The Catholics hold they are not bound in conscience to support conscription. The Protestants hold they are bound in conscience to support the King and Parliament.

The Catholics are solidly united, while there are some sharp divisions among the Protestants in South Ireland outside the State church, such as Presbyterians and Methodists. The Episcopalian, which is the State church, is practically unanimous for conscription in the Ulster district. Some, however, in the South have joined hands with their Catholic neighbors to oppose conscription.

The meeting, which was disrupted, was the annual session of the Irish Guild Church of Ireland with Bishop Berry presiding. George Irvine, one of the rebels sentenced to penal servitude for his part in the Easter rising, moved the rescinding of the old resolution, holding that many Protestant Irish Republicans who had refused alliance to the King under the conscription menace would be driven from the church unless it was an announced principle that it was a political and not a religious issue.

Bishop Berry opposed this strongly. He declared that if it was rescinded it would be impossible for him or any other clergyman of the Church of Ireland to have anything further to do with the guild.

It could not be done, he said, because loyalty was an absolute part of the constitution of the Church. They prayed for the King in public services, and by the Church catechism every child was taught to honor and obey the King and all in authority under him. The Church of Ireland, he said, took that stand because it emphatically is taught in the New Testament. It had the strongest authority in the words of Christ Himself answering the Jews, "Render unto Caesar the things that are Caesar's."

On this authority, he said, the Church of Ireland taught that loyalty to the King was not a matter of politics, but religion. It was not a thing about which the members were free to take one side or the other.

The Rev. O. G. Fisher inquired whether the clergy who refused allegiance to King James and the clergy at the time of the American war for independence who refused allegiance to King George III. were disloyal; also if it applied to the clergy in Belgium who refused to acknowledge rule by might by the Kaiser.

Bishop Berry replied with the simple answer that he was not the keeper of anybody's conscience, but his own. He was not responsible for the clergy in the American war for independence nor the clergy of the time of King James.

Dean Geddes said he could not remain a member of the guild if the resolution was rescinded.

Then, by a vote of 20 to 11, some not voting, the radicals rescinded the resolution and Bishop Berry and a number of loyalists left the meeting.

TWO GERMANS CAUGHT LANDING IN IRELAND

Taken with Casement Associate in Recent Foray—Stories Exaggerate Their Number.

By CHARLES N. WHEELER.

Copyright, 1918, by The Chicago Tribune Company.

DUBLIN, May 15.—Two Germans accompanied the associate of Roger Casement who recently attempted to land in Ireland, and all three are now supposed to be in London, probably in the Tower.

The three men came ashore in collapsible boats from a submarine. An inkling of the arrests resulted in spreading the story of many German officers succeeding in landing in the south of Ireland. I have been authoritatively informed that there were only these three, and they were nabbed before they were able to stretch their legs on dry land.

In the present excited state of the populace wild rumors are soon exaggerated in the repeating. The authorities are said to possess the information that the more desperate Irish rebels have been counting on help from Germany for some time.

The story has been circulated that Germany would land men and arms from big submarines to help the new rising. In the rural districts of Ireland the presence of military forces is accounted for by the story that they were sent over to frustrate the German landing. All kinds of explanations are invented for the most ordinary events.

ALLEGED ANARCHISTS HELD.

Russians Accused of Aiding Seditious Paper Have Hearing Today.

The three alleged Russian anarchists, Ivan Novikoff, Leon Bobkin, and Alexander Burjack, arrested on Tuesday as members of an anarchistic group organized to spread Bolshevist doctrines in this country and to cause dissension among laboring men, were brought to the Federal Building yesterday. They are charged with circulating the new anarchist paper called the Kololkol, the first issue of which was seized and which, among other things, advocated the overthrow of the Government. Because President Wilson has not signed the new sedition law the case was turned over to the State for prosecution, the State penalties being greater than those provided in the present Federal laws covering such cases. The men were locked up in the Tombs and will have a hearing today.

John Ulrich of Poughkeepsie, 17 years old, who was arrested on May 8 charged with trying to destroy two rolls of waterproof canvas which the Price Fire and Waterproofing Co. at Poughkeepsie was manufacturing for the Government, was brought to New York yesterday and arraigned before United States Commissioner Samuel Hitchcock and held in $500 bail for the Federal Grand Jury. He was charged with violating the sabotage law.

Assistant United States Attorney Ben A. Matthews in charge of criminal prosecutions, said yesterday that the Department of Justice would be glad to have persons report any disloyal acts or utterances which might come to their attention. Any communication made will be regarded as confidential.

SEARCH FOR GERMAN STOCK WAS BLOCKED

Accountant Says Books of Forstmann Company Were Closed to Him.

PRODUCTION NOW ORDERED

Seven Checks Said to Represent Payments to Aliens Are in Property Custodian's Hands.

Attorney General Merton E. Lewis, acting at the request of A. Mitchell Palmer, the Alien Property Custodian, began a second investigation yesterday of the Forstmann & Huffman Company of Passaic, N. J., one of the largest woolen goods manufacturing concerns in the United States. The purpose of the new inquiry is to determine the manner in which certain stock, once owned by Germans, was transferred to American control. Samuel Untermyer, as counsel for Mr. Forstmann, protested, insisting that the proceeding was illegal, and that Mr. Forstmann was a victim of persecution.

Mr. Untermyer also maintained that under the New York law the hearings were required to be in secret—a contention which was overruled by Attorney General Lewis, who said that he himself had framed the law and that it was a matter of discretion with him whether the hearings were public or private. The Attorney General added that he preferred to hold this one in public and would do so.

Mr. Untermyer then announced that James A. McKenna, a public accountant, had been retained by the Alien Property Custodian to examine the books of the Forstmann & Hoffman Company and that Mr. Forstmann objected to him. Mr. Forstmann, he added, was willing to take any accountant except Mr. McKenna, and then admitted that there was nothing against Mr. McKenna. Mr. McKenna was put in the stand by the Attorney General and said he knew of no reason why he should be personally objectionable to Mr. Forstmann and his business associates.

Mr. McKenna then said he went to Passaic as the official representative of Mr. Palmer, with specific instructions to look into certain matters having to do with the transfer of the German-owned stock to American ownership. He said that when he appeared at the office of the company he was informed by Mr. La Porte, an official of the company, that he would not be permitted to make such an examination. He was shown a letter from Mr. McCarter, their lawyer, which suggested certain limitations and was told he must proceed along the lines suggested by Mr. McCarter.

"Was anything said about Mrs. Forstmann's dresses in connection with your proposed examination of Mr. Forstmann's accounts?"

"Yes; I was told that they did not care to have me find out what Mrs. Forstmann paid for her dresses. I told them that I was not there for any such purpose as that. I informed them I was there to find out about the payment for the stock and to see how those payments were charged on the books."

"Have you the checks you have in mind?"

"I have. There are seven of them," replied the witness, as he handed them to Mr. Becker. The checks, said to represent payments for the German-owned stock in the concern, were offered in evidence by Mr. Becker. They represented total payments of $670,000, of which $316,294 was paid to the order of Hugo Schmidt, agent in this country of the Deutsche Bank. Schmidt is now in an internment camp in Georgia.

"Under what circumstances did you come into the possession of those checks?" Mr. Untermyer asked.

"I got them from Mr. Garvin, Mr. Palmer's representative in New York."

"Have you any objection," Assistant Attorney General Becker here asked, addressing Mr. Forstmann, "to Mr. McKenna acting on behalf of the Alien Property Custodian examining the original books of entry of your company to determine the facts relating to so-called German interests in your company; secondly, how the money used for that purpose was paid, and, thirdly, all matters having to do with the supplies of wool and other raw materials of your company and any financial dealings your company may have had with enemy aliens since Aug. 1, 1914?"

Before Mr. Forstmann could answer Mr. Untermyer interposed:

"Mr. Forstmann," he said, "objects to Mr. McKenna making this examination. He does not object to other accountants who may be selected for the purpose. He does not object to the investigation of his books. He does object to Mr. McKenna."

"Answer yes or no," directed the Attorney General.

Mr. Forstmann said he objected to Mr. McKenna, and when asked on what grounds replied "By advice of counsel," the counsel in this case being Mr. McCarter of Newark.

"Now, is it not a fact that this alleged personal objection to Mr. McKenna is something trumped up to cover your face after you found you had made a mistake in declining to let Mr. McKenna look at your books?" asked Mr. Becker.

Don't answer that question," almost shouted Mr. Untermyer. A heated argument followed and terminated only when Attorney General Lewis poured oil on the troubled waters. Mr. Becker then asked Mr. McKenna what books he wanted to examine and issued a subpoena for Mr. Forstmann to produce the books at 3 o'clock this afternoon.

BARGE CANAL IS OPENED.

Many Cargoes Move with the Beginning of Traffic Season.

ALBANY, N. Y., May 15.—The opening of the new State Barge Canal to through traffic today was marked by the entrance of fifteen light barges at Troy, bound for Buffalo.

Fifty, or more, barges were reported to be under tow from New York and were expected to enter the canal tomorrow. All will return laden with freight from Lake ports.

A fleet of forty-seven barges carrying freight was reported bound south on the Champlain Canal.

Conferences were held yesterday at the Grand Central Terminal by Alfred H. Smith, Eastern Regional Director of Railroads, and G. A. Tomlinson, formerly of Duluth, Minn., who will be General Manager of the New York canal system. Under the supervision of the Regional Director the chief problem considered was that of organizing a maximum water route haul for coal and a minimum rail haul from the mining districts in order to relieve rail congestion in deliveries to the Atlantic seaboard. A number of coal experts attended the conference.

The formal opening ceremony to celebrate the completion of the barge canal will take place on July 4.

Leaders in Study and Play

They are the red-blooded children—completely alive in body and brain. Leave nothing undone to make the blood of your children rich, pure, red.

Watch, one of these Spring mornings, the regiments of youngsters swinging along to school. It's an inspiring sight. The small and tender kiddies are toddling hand in hand to kindergarten or the primary grades. The grown-up boys and girls are on their way to high or preparatory school. But no matter what their age or size, the young eyes of all are turned in the same direction, their mentalities are being trained for the same purpose. They are the bright hope of America. They are the coming workers and planners of this great country.

Very likely your own little ones are trooping along with the rest. Are they leaders or shirkers in study and play? Whether they are leaders or shirkers depends upon you as well as their teachers. For the best of teachers can't shape the little minds the way they should go without your intelligent co-operation. It is your duty to send your children into the classroom with the little heads set firmly on sturdy shoulders and deep chests; with every muscle, nerve, and brain-cell nourished by rich, red blood.

Nature herself points the way. Build up the young bodies with plain, nourishing foods, fresh air, sleep, and rest. Teach your children exercises that will fill out the little chests and keep straight the little shoulders. And at the least sign of poor blood put them on Gude's Pepto-Mangan.

Gude's Pepto-Mangan

"The Red Blood Builder"

Gude's Pepto-Mangan is a help to restoring blood foundations, the red blood cells, increasing their number and capacity to carry life-giving oxygen from the lungs through the blood-stream to every cell and tissue. When the red blood cells are normal, the blood is rich, red and vigorous and the body correspondingly healthy and vigorous in all its parts. Gude's Pepto-Mangan is a splendid general tonic and appetizer for invalids, convalescents, feeble children, and weak, thin-blooded adults of all ages and conditions. Gude's Pepto-Mangan has been used and prescribed by the medical profession for over 25 years. It is easy to digest, promptly assimilated by the blood and pleasant to taste.

FRIENDLY WARNING: There are many imitations of Pepto-Mangan on the market, but you can be sure of getting the genuine if it bears the name "Gude" and is put up in the bottle and sealed package as pictured here. Ask for it by its full name—"Gude's Pepto-Mangan." For sale at all drug stores.

Improved Summer Underwear

Regardless of your size or form, there is a Rockinchair Union Suit to fit you with absolute comfort. After studying statistics showing the varying sizes, shapes and figures of thousands of men, a leading designer of men's clothes developed the new, unique Rockinchair method of sizing—which means that the short, the tall, the lean, the stout, are as perfectly fitted as the "regular"!

The difference in comfort between Rockinchair and other underwear is the same as the difference between a comfortable rocking chair and the plain, straight-backed chair.

Rockinchair not only fits perfectly, but it is also built for comfort. The full natural blouse above the waist permits perfect ease in all bodily movements—no binding, anywhere. The waistband that snugly fits the waist, like that of your trousers, keeps the garment in position. The one-piece closed seat (just like your trousers) is both comfortable and sanitary. It means a really closed crotch. There is no complicated drop seat to sag, or gaping split seat to bunch and annoy you.

The patented side leg opening has only two buttons, placed where the eye can see them. They bear no strain; they won't tear off. This opening allows easy, quick adjustment, and a broad, wide sweep that extends clearly across the back. Simplicity!

PRESIDENT TO SPEAK FOR RED CROSS HERE

Will Start Drive for Fund Saturday Night at Metropolitan Opera House.

FIRST ADDRESS SINCE WAR

Corporations May Contribute Legally, Says Morgan J. O'Brien in Opinion to Committee.

President Wilson will start the Red Cross drive in this city with a speech at the Metropolitan Opera House on Saturday night. Word was received last night from Washington by the National Red Cross War Fund Committee, of which Cleveland H. Dodge is Chairman, that the President had decided to accept their invitation. President Wilson has not made an address in this city since the United States has been at war with Germany.

Mr. Dodge will preside at the meeting. The only speaker besides the President will be Henry P. Davison, if he arrives in this country in time from his trip to Europe, where he has been in charge of the activities of the Red Cross.

Ex-Judge Morgan J. O'Brien gave an opinion yesterday that the law authorizing direct gifts by corporations to the Red Cross was constitutional, because such gifts were made for the protection of the corporations' interests. He thus summed up his opinion:

"A war which is aimed at the destruction of our Government is necessarily aimed at the destruction of the interests of our corporations."

The opinion of ex-Judge O'Brien and other eminent lawyers, including Charles Evans Hughes and Richard V. Lindabury, counsel for J. P. Morgan & Co., was obtained by the Red Cross Committee on Corporations to clear all obstacles from the way of making collections amounting to millions of dollars from New York City corporations.

Seward Prosser, President of the Bankers' Trust Company, who was one of the speakers at a luncheon to editors of New York City papers at the Bankers' Club yesterday, spoke of the work of the Red Cross in France, which the new $100,000,000 is to maintain and expand, as follows:

"I have seen in France the chains of storehouses, stocked with American food, which could, with present shipping conditions, not be duplicated. In Paris alone there are five storehouses full of staple food, and the value of it is $6,000,000, I am informed. I have seen the dispensaries taking care of mothers and children and aiding the tuberculosis ravages. I have seen the hospitals run by the Red Cross. I have seen the transportation facilities; the social workers and the hotels provided to take care of refugees pending their assignment to different destinations."

The following appreciation of the work of the Red Cross in France from the Parisian newspaper La Presse was received yesterday at the Red Cross headquarters in the Woolworth Building:

"The American Red Cross directs twenty model hospitals, gives assistance to five others, and directs seventy-five dispensaries for the civilian population of France. In addition to this, it supports almost 4,000 hospitals in France and sends surgical dressings, instruments, and various supplies to 1,935 hospitals. Twenty-five canteens serve approximately 3,000,000 soldiers a month. They have given to General Pétain 6,000,000 francs ($1,200,000) to be distributed among the permanently disabled and the wounded soldiers of France and their families."

The participants in the agreement of stores to donate 10 per cent. of one day's receipts to the American Red Cross increased yesterday by B. Altman & Co., A. A. Vantine & Co., Rothenberg & Co., L. M. Blumstein, and the Mark Cross Company in Manhattan, and Abraham & Straus, Frederick Loeser & Co., and A. I. Namm & Son in Brooklyn. The United Cigar Stores Co., the Exchange Buffet, A. Schulte Cigar Co., and the Liggett Drug Stores were among those who entered into the profit-sharing agreement yesterday.

Preparations on a vast scale are being made under the direction of ex-Fire Commissioner Joseph Johnson for the great Red Cross parade on Saturday, which is to be the largest ever held by that organization. It was announced that, among the 75,000 who are expected to parade there will be great choruses of women singing as they march, knitting brigades producing socks and mufflers as they move along, Red Cross nurses for home service and for service abroad, wives and mothers of soldiers and sailors, and other classes of women engaging in war service.

Ethan Allen, Director of the Red Cross, designated as an error yesterday a statement sent out several days ago that no person with a German name or German antecedents for three generations back was acceptable for Red Cross work. He said that persons found on investigation to be thoroughly loyal and patriotic were acceptable, regardless of their antecedents. Many persons of German descent, he said, had been approved by the British and French Embassies and sent to France for Red Cross service.

SALVATION ARMY FUND HAS REACHED $150,000

Leaders in Drive Confident That Balance of $100,000 Will Be Raised by Saturday.

A number of large checks yesterday helped swell the total of the Salvation Army collections to $150,000. With $100,000 more to raise by next Saturday the leaders are confident that the total of a quarter of million asked for will be obtained. One of the biggest gifts yet received came to Commander Booth yesterday in the form of five $1,000 Liberty bonds from John Markle of 2 Rector Street and his wife.

Mrs. Russell Sage sent her check for $2,500, with a message of cheer for Commander Booth. In response to an appeal by George Gordon Battle, the following, Simon Guggenheim, J. E. Beurwind, R. F. Patterson, Vernon C. Brown, Judge R. E. Lehman, C. H. Sabin, and the Lorillard Tobacco Company, each sent $1,000.

A tea in aid of the War Work Committee of the Salvation Army was held yesterday afternoon at the residence of Mrs. Lewis B. Woodruff, 14 East Sixty-eighth Street, at which Sergeant Barr of Pershing's army, made a brief address, detailing the work done by the Salvation Army lasses in their work at the front.

Society girls assisted Mrs. Woodruff in receiving, among them being the Misses Evelyn Byrd Smith, Vera McNair, Edith Gould, Lucile Baldwin, Claire Van Lennep, and Mrs. Walter Kobbe, and Abby Putnam Morrison, First Class Electrician of the Navy, who poured tea. A number of subscriptions to the Army's work were made by the civilian guests.

Russellites' Case Adjourned.

Ex-Judge Joseph F. Rutherford, successor to Pastor Russell, and seven of his followers were brought before Judge Chatfield in the Federal Court, Brooklyn, yesterday for examination on charges of conspiracy to incite insurrection and disloyalty in the military and naval forces of the United States and violation of the Trading with the Enemy act. Assistant District Attorney Buckner urged an immediate trial, but Frederick Sparks, representing the defendants, succeeded in obtaining an adjournment of the case until June 3.

CARUSO IN RED CROSS DRIVE

He Will Sing at Two Benefits, One on Italy-America Day.

Signor Caruso is to appear in two Red Cross benefits for allied nations in the next two weeks. As announced last Monday, the tenor will head a gala program for the American Red Cross at the Metropolitan on May 27, the closing day of the Red Cross drive. He will also appear there Friday, May 24, the evening of Italy-America Day, in observance of Italy's third year in the war, when the proceeds will be given to the Italian Red Cross.

President Charles E. Hughes of the Italy-America Society will preside at the Italian concert, which is in charge of Captain Guardabassi of the Second Grenadier Guards, now on a war mission to this country. The program will include Mmes. Alda and Muzio, Messrs. Caruso, Scotti, Amato, Martinelli, De Luca, and two American artists, Anna Chase and Sophie Braslau.

'OUT THERE' SEEKS $500,000

Red Cross Play Touring, with All-Star Cast, in Brooklyn Tonight.

The all-star "Out There" cast, which is touring the country in aid of the Red Cross, will make its first appearance in Greater New York to-night, when a performance will be given at the Academy of Music, Brooklyn. It is expected that the receipts of the three weeks' tour, from sale of seats and premiums alone, will be in the neighborhood of $500,000. The tour began in Washington on Monday night with receipts of $18,000, and in Baltimore the following night $29,000 was taken in. A matinee performance was given yesterday in Wilmington, and a night show in Philadelphia.

The first of the Manhattan performances will take place tomorrow night at the Century, and two more performances will be given on Saturday.

Want Music in Hands of Patriots.

Friends of the New York Chamber Music Society will hold a meeting this afternoon at 4:30 o'clock at the home of Mrs. James Gamble Rogers, 160 East Seventieth Street, in the interest of plans of this organization, founded by Carolyn Beebe, "to place the future musical interests of our country in the hands of patriotic Americans."

MUSIC NOTES.

The Rehearsal Club's School for Professional Children will hold its third annual commencement at the Morosco Theatre this morning at 11 o'clock, with addresses by Winthrop Ames and Mrs. August Belmont.

Two concerts daily during the week of the Red Cross drive will be given at the house of Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, 677 Fifth Avenue, to be opened May 20 by Clarence Whitehill, Marcia Van Dresser, and the Trio de Lutece.

The National Patriotic Song Committee will hold a rally of its members at the MacDowell Club on Friday evening, when E. H. Sothern will tell of his recent trip to France.

Rudolph Ganz, the pianist, will be in America till midsummer, sailing in August to play in Paris and in camps and hospitals in France.

Cleofonte Campanini, now in Havana, has abandoned his European trip and will return to New York in June to plan his Chicago opera season.

THEATRICAL NOTES.

"The Liberty Gun," the Robert Mears Mackay-Victor Mapes war play, will have its first production in New Haven on May 30. Heading the cast are Robert Edeson, Malcolm Duncan, Henry Kolker, and Arline Hackett.

Emily Ann Wellman will soon return to vaudeville in a playlet by Richard Madden, entitled "Where Things Happen."

Laura Hope Crews will be Cyril Maude's leading woman next season in Haddon Chambers's comedy, "The Saving Grace."

The Hoyt farce, "A Trip to Chinatown," will begin a tour of the cantonments on June 10. Jefferson de Angelis and Howard Kyle will be in the cast.

Johnny Dooley has been engaged for the midnight revue at the Century Grove, and will make his debut next Wednesday night. The Dolly Sisters will begin a roof engagement at the same time.

Grace La Rue has been added to the players who will appear at the Morosco Theatre on Sunday night in aid of the Stage Women's War Relief.

"Going Up" was produced on Monday in Manchester, England, and will begin a London run on May 22.

A season of Yiddish drama will begin at the Irving Place Theatre on June 2 with the production of "Allah Carim," by L. A. Orloff.

Frank Carter, now in the Ziegfeld Midnight Frolic, will be in the cast of the "Follies" this season.

Edith Wynne Matthison and her company will give a performance of "The Servant in the House" tomorrow at the Bennett School, Millbrook, N. Y.

Harold Hartsell has been added to the company which will be seen at the opening of the Actors and Authors' Theatre at the Fulton Monday night.

CITY BREVITIES.

A bazaar to raise funds for the War Service Bureau of Greenwich House will be held at the headquarters at 27 Barrow Street today, and it will continue until Sunday. In addition to sales of pottery, woodwork, and other articles, the bazaar will have several shows and entertainments. All the money is to be used in carrying on the work of the centre, which includes the War Service Information Bureau.

Ralph D. Paine, who has returned from five months with the Allied naval forces in the war zone, will speak on May 23 at a gathering at the Morgan Library, 33 East Thirty-sixth Street. Official naval films from the British Admiralty, the French Ministry of Marine, and the United States Navy Department will be shown.

The Mayor's Committee of Women on National Defense will hold a meeting at the City Hall at 3 o'clock this afternoon to discuss plans for conserving the lives of 100,000 children. Health Commissioner Copeland is expected to attend.

Workmen are now installing a 2,000-pound bell, key of F, in St. Paul's Chapel at Columbia University. Cast in relief, the bell bears the following inscription: "To Ring Out Through the Ages for Truth, Justice, and Liberty. Presented to Columbia University by the Class of 1893, School of Arts, Columbia College, on its Twenty-fifth Anniversary, June 5th, 1918."

THE PRESIDENT'S LETTER.

President Wilson's protest against the Chamberlain resolution will undoubtedly dispose of it. It proposed that the Military Committee act as a committee to investigate the aircraft mess or "any other matters relating "to the conduct of the war, by or "through the War Department." To an aircraft investigation the President has no objection; but "any other matters" is a large phrase. He thinks it would constitute Senator Chamberlain's committee a committee "to take over the conduct of the war," or, at least, to superintend it. And he is certainly right when he says that such action would amount to "a di-"rect vote of want of confidence in "the Administration."

The people are with him in his opposition to a committee on the conduct of the war, in whatever form it may be proposed to create such a committee. Whatever of confusion may exist anywhere would be intensified a hundredfold if Congress tried to take over the executive business, or superintend it, or overhaul it, or meddle with it. It is not what Congress is for; and the Congress which did try to exercise such functions in Lincoln's time, although it was headed by much abler men than most of those at the head of this Congress, only succeeded in interfering with the nation's war activities and making bad matters worse. It never did any good. Congress should be warned by that historic example.

While the President is undoubtedly right in the position he has taken, it is to be regretted that in taking it he should have made use of certain expressions such as, "These are serious "times, and it is absolutely necessary "that the lines should be clearly drawn "between friends and opponents." They are serious times, and for that reason no line should be drawn between patriots who differ concerning methods; the only line should be between friends and enemies of the United States. There are few of the latter in Congress. In times so serious it should not be regarded as an offense for a patriotic Congressman to differ with the Administration in a matter of policy. Nor should the President speak of "friends and opponents," for in this matter of the war no Congressman should be either. No Congressman should vote on any war question as a "friend" of the President, or as an "opponent" of the President; he should vote as a "friend" of the United States, and his conscience should instruct him.

ALL GERMANY WANTS.

If Germany's peace offensive is to be characterized by the elephantine naïveté which distinguishes its first output, it will not deceive even the densest. That "prominent German politician" who sends out the first balloon via Copenhagen begins coaxingly: "We have lost, including "killed, wounded, and prisoners, "3,000,000 men. Do you think that "we intend to make foolish claims and "send our children through another "four years of war?" Obviously, Germany is in a most docile, gentle mood. What does she intend to claim, then? Why, we "only demand that "the Western Powers shall give back "our colonies."

Surely, nobody could object to that; and that is all Germany demands. But, incidentally, our German friend produces a further argument to prove that she is in no mood to "make foolish claims" and so prolong the war. Here it is: "Moreover, we shall have "enough to do during the age of man "to control the new Russian countries "and secure their mercantile and in-"dustrial influence." Will our reasonable, amiable, conciliatory, plausible German friend pardon us if we say that that makes it necessary to reconstruct his innocent and idyllic statement of Germany's demands? So reconstructed, it reads as follows:

> We only demand that the Western Powers shall give back our colonies and let us absorb the Russian half of Europe and the Russian half of Asia, so that the German Empire shall extend from the Baltic to the Pacific. Then there will never be another war, because such an empire would be irresistible, and the whole world would not dare to oppose anything it wished to do.

The trial balloon will have to be hauled down and repainted, if anybody outside of Germany is to be deceived by it.

FOR A LOYAL CONGRESS.

We are heartily in sympathy with the appeal to loyal voters sent out by the League for National Unity, urging them to see to it that a Congress 100 per cent. loyal is elected next Fall, and especially with this sentence in it:

> If in any Congressional or Senatorial election there proves to be danger of the election of disloyal candidates, it will become the duty of Americans, regardless of party affiliations, to defeat such candidates and to set loyalty to the nation above personal loyalty to the party.

Not only above "personal loyalty to the party," but above personal ambition, factional feuds, and old hostilities. It is so obvious that one would think it did not need a League for National Unity to set it forth. Yet when we look at the way the Congress campaign is beginning, what do we find? We find that in South Carolina Cole Blease is running for the Senate on a platform of open, rampant hostility to the war, calling for the damnation on Judgment Day of the President and those members of Congress who have supported him. Is there union against Blease? The loyal vote is divided already by the appearance of four candidates, Senator Tillman, Representative Lever, N. B. Dial, and the Rev. J. E. Mahaffey, and more are expected to appear.

In Mississippi the opposition to Senator Vardaman is divided between ex-Governor Noel and Representative Harrison. In Georgia Senator Hardwick is in the happy position of having six candidates against him already, with more in the offing. These three are the only States in which the loyalty issue has appeared so far, but there will be more, both North and South, and the way in which South Carolina, Mississippi, and Georgia have started to deal with the question is not encouraging. There is work ahead for the League for National Unity, judging from these beginnings.

THE ZWEIBUND.

Yesterday The Times spoke of the rapprochement of the Austrian-German Socialists and the Czechs and Southern Slavs, and of the expressed sympathy of the Arbeiter Zeitung, the Austrian-German Socialist organ, for the Bolshevist Revolution, and its criticism of the counter-revolutionary German invasion of Finland and Ukraine. Before that revolution the Austrian Socialists were imperialists. At his trial in the Spring of 1917, Dr. Friedrich Adler, the assassin of the Austrian Premier, Count Stuergkh, said of the Arbeiter Zeitung, of which his father, Dr. Victor Adler, founder of the Austrian Social Democratic Party, was proprietor, that "a Wilhelmstrasse official" discussed foreign politics in it every day. Friedrich Adler was an extreme Socialist, hot for the proletariat, disgusted with the submissiveness of his party to absolutism, with Kaiserite Socialist North German leaders like Scheidemann.

Now the German-Austrian Socialists are getting Bolshevist. The Arbeiter Zeitung insisted the other day that "even the German bourgeois "parties cannot imagine that they "will be able to withhold from the "Czechs the right to form a State of "their own"; an Amsterdam dispatch shows the German Chancellor admitting in the Reichstag that this Arbeiter Zeitung, this official voice of Austrian Social Democracy, is kept out of Germany by the German Government "in full accord with Vienna," and is "considered every day more and more a perverted newspaper."

That is, the Austrian Socialists have turned away from absolutism. They have got much further than the German Independent Socialists. In Austria, South Slavs, Czechs, Ukrainians appeal by a program of agrarian reform to the Socialists, who support them in turn on the principle, brought to Austria by the Bolshevist Revolution, spreading also now by means of Austrian soldiers returned from Russia, of national self-determination.

Amid all this thunder and bomb at German Great Headquarters, this meeting of Wilhelm and Karl, where the latter becomes, in feudal phrase, the former's man of life, limb, and earthly worship, and holds the Hapsburg lands, if held they can be, by the might of the German sword; amid all this chatter of professors and political economists, this paper Middle Europe, let us keep in sight what Austria-Hungary is—a ragbag, a crazy quilt of nationalities, nine or ten, to name only the principal ones. In Hungary eight or nine million Magyars have kept a brutal sway over eleven or twelve millions of non-Magyars. In Austria less than ten million Germans have ruled 18,000,000 non-Germans.

That condition cannot last. In Austria, at least, a political revolution is in preparation. Two great subject nationalities, the Czech-Slovaks and the South Slavs, demand separate States. Other irredentist movements have long existed. All have been quickened by the tyrannies, the illegalities, the cruelties, the persecutions, imprisonments, hangings, that have gone on for almost four years, especially in the Banat and Carniola, Bohemia, Bosnia, Croatia, and Dalmatia. Now the Austrian Socialists join the Czechs and South Slavs. The social revolution joins the political revolution. Austria is in a variously bad way. So is Hungary.

The patter of a clerical organ like the Vienna Reichspost, of an organ of the "financial barons" like the Neues Wiener Tagblatt, gulls nobody. The renewal of the alliance—it is not an alliance, but a surrender on Austria-Hungary's part—"satis-"fies the political intelligence of "Austrians," says the Tagblatt. Anybody of any political or other intelligence in Austria-Hungary knows that the motley monarchy is on its last legs. Only complete German victory on the west front can save the moribund Dual State.

LINKING THE RAILWAYS AND NEW YORK'S CANALS.

When Clinton's ditch was opened in 1825, water brought by the Erie Canal from the Lakes was poured into the ocean at Sandy Hook, along with other water brought from many of the world's greatest rivers. The ceremony signified that commerce over the canal was part of the world commerce. The opening of the enlarged barge canal, over the same route extended, is marked by a marriage of railways and canals not less significant than the mingling of the waters almost a century ago. It was not in the foresight of any man that the canal when opened would be operated by the nation in connection with the railways of the nation as a unit. Yet the opening of the canal was accompanied by official notice that the United States is building a fleet of suitable boats for work through the canal, which it took over April 17.

These two announcements together are most heartening. If the announcement merely was that the canal was ready for service, it would be necessary to add, with regret, that there was no sign of its being put to the designed use. The State has spent $150,000,000 upon the enlargement of a work which has cost, from the beginning, $386,000,000, upon the assumption that there would be a rush to use it. But, until the Federal intervention, there had been no preparations worth mention. The old boats were unsuitable for the larger canal and only four new boats were under construction. There was danger that a potential annual capacity of 20,000,000 tons would go almost to waste. Even now the nation's boats to ply over the State's canal are unbuilt, and there will be delay in the use of the canal at a time when the demand for its use is at the maximum.

The canal was built as a competitor of the railways, as a means of reducing their rates and profits. It will go into use as a feeder and distributer of railway traffic, as a supplement to the railways and not as a rival or competitor. As a competitor of the railways there was no future for the canal. Its work was done when its existence brought the basing rate of railway rates for the United States to the rate between New York and Chicago. That was a water rate, the lowest rate in the world, perhaps too low a rate for the good of the United States itself, and a benefit more for foreign buyers of goods exported through its stimulus. The entire rate structure of the nation would be much higher if it were built upon a land rate, say from New York to St. Louis. The canal has the capacity to reduce even the present low rate, but it is not to be supposed that it will be used for that purpose. There is a deficit for the railways payable by the nation to a total of hundreds of millions, and railway rates are about to be raised a quarter or more. To suppose that the canal will be put to the carriage of grain at 2½ cents instead of 5 cents is unreasonable. There is no sense in reducing rates when traffic cannot be done which ought to be done, and it is a favor to get transportation at any price. It will be a service of almost incalculable value if the millions of tons of capacity over the canal, corresponding to the use of hundreds of thousands of cars, should be provided at existing charges.

It would have shocked the entire country if the canal had fallen into the control of the competitive railways under private management. It is different when the railways are operated for the national account. Under competition, each canalboat owner competed with every other, and the railways competed with all of them. The Interstate Commerce Commission forbade the railways to have water extensions, and there was dry rot in the canal business. Interchange of business is the present policy, and it is full of hope. The railways and the canal will make joint and through rates, and there will be no cutting of rates. The Interstate Commission has issued a general order, at the request of the Director General, authorizing carriers to file all-water rates, all-rail rates, and joint rail and water rates at all-rail figures, regardless of the long and short haul, and with Duluth and Chicago on an equality.

The result of the operation of the railways and canal in that manner will be to increase the capacity of both, and not to put either out of business, as the Panama Canal has put the Tehuantepec Railway out of business. Before that order there was announced a river, canal, and lake rate tariff of a competitive nature, which presumably will be dropped, and without mourners. The craze for too low rates has passed. Service is the present need and demand. It can be supplied by co-operation better than by competition, and that is the new note.

It is hardly necessary to add that the event is of worldwide importance. It has direct relation to winning the war. Foodstuffs will be brought east and coal will be sent west by millions of tons. Traffic more suitable for water than for land transport, and which the railways had fought for with uneconomic rates, will be taken out of the way of the railways. It will be the same as expediting food and munitions to the men in the trenches, of whatever allied nation. It is a war measure which it will be peculiarly profitable and seemly to continue when peace shall return. It is one of many signs that the war on business and the domestic war between rival businesses are both ended. War dividends carry a costly penalty. The dividends of peace are more honest and fruitful. The marriage of the railways and the canals is an auspicious event, foreseen by no man and to be regretted by none.

THE SALVATION ARMY WAR FUND DRIVE.

Next Saturday the "drive" of the Salvation Army for its war work fund ends. Already 400,000 contributions have been received for a work which must appeal to every heart. These are the small and cheerful subscribers who were particularly sought for the Liberty 4¼s. No doubt the 400,000 will be a half million before the books are closed, but there are grounds for an appeal of a sort the reverse of the effort in the Liberty Loan drive. The Salvation Army is in especial need of larger givers, for the mites of their sympathizers mount up slowly and meagrely. The Salvation Army has never been accused of waste or misuse of funds. The money given to it is used for the purpose designed, and there can be none higher. It is in the same class with Red Cross work, and in the case of the war is effective for earthly consolation as well as for religious counsel.

There have been many reports of the good work done by the army among the defenders of democracy "over there," and it is work of a sort which cannot be duplicated, and should not be allowed to languish. There are many appeals nowadays, but this is exceptional. When hundreds of thousands of small givers have done their share, they have set an example which may well be followed by those to whom this war has brought large profits. It might seem that such money would rest more easily in the pockets of anybody if a share, even an insignificant share, comparatively, were contributed for the use of those who ask nothing for themselves, and who are grateful for the help which enables them to help others in need. It is desirable that those so disposed should be prompt as well as generous. After this week the books will be closed.

AERIAL MAIL SERVICE.

The Post Office service has had historic days since Sir Brian Tuke became Postmaster, (A. D. 1533,) "both "in England and in other parts of "the King's dominions beyond the "seas"; but from Tuke to Sir Rowland Hill, the father of penny postage, no Postmaster or reformer seems to have dreamed of the conveyance through the air of mail matter by any other medium than a carrier pigeon. Perhaps Benjamin Franklin, Postmaster General in the American Colonies, had a vision of the flying machine, but one can think of no man of the posts except him whose mind so far outran his time. Therefore the inauguration of a regular airplane mail service between New York, Philadelphia, and Washington on May 15, 1918, even though the first day's program was not carried out entirely, may be regarded as the most historic event in the Post Office Service, in that of the United States beyond cavil.

It is true that Denmark is preparing, under the auspices of the Danish Aeronautical Society, for such a service after the war. Thirty-nine municipalities are planning to construct landing stations and hangars. In Austria the International Air Traffic Company has been formed to carry letters and parcels on the Hamburg-Berlin-Dresden-Vienna, Budapest-Belgrade-Sofia-Constantinople route. These enterprises are interesting as indicating a great revolution in the postal business of all countries, (there will be an Atlantic service some day, of course,) but that is of the future, when swords have been turned into plowshares.

In the United States, engaged in the great war with all its resources, but happily 3,000 miles from the shock of conflict, the dream of an aerial post can be realized in a practical way. Yesterday the service was begun, and it will be extended and carried on until the mail flier shall become only less familiar in the sky than the sable crow. When there are "flivvers" of the air, a creation perhaps not very remote, the rural free delivery route will have its flying machine, and the housewife paring potatoes under the apple tree will hardly pause in her task to mark its passing.

The air mail wagon which Lieutenant Torrey Webb piloted to Philadelphia yesterday on the first stage of the journey to Washington carried 350 pounds of mail, or 12,000 letters and parcels, for which there was plenty of room in his fuselage. A great Caproni plane could carry many times that weight of mail, together with sorters and stampers. Twenty-four cents an ounce seems like a reasonable rate for the rapid service provided, and the rate is bound to fall when mail planes darken the sky, as they surely will some day. It is not fantastic to believe that in course of time all first-class mail will be carried through the air at a speed of 150 miles an hour.

At this stage of aeronautic development the elements will sometimes be deterrent; at a later stage the aviator may be able to triumph over even the tempest and the blizzard, and find his way through the fog, guided by signals from the earth. It wasn't many years ago that the Wright brothers would not make a flight if the wind was ruder than a zephyr. Today the skillful flying man scorns to stay on the ground in half a gale.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Honors Are Due to Italy. There ought to be made—and there will be made, if public attention can be aroused to the need for doing it—an earnest, sincere, and cordial effort all over this country to make the celebration of May 24, as "America-Italy Day," a fitting expression of the gratitude which we, as a part of the right-thinking world, owe to Italy for the services she has rendered and the sacrifices she has offered in the great war.

For reasons not very easy to understand—for reasons that certainly are not adequate—we, like the other allies against Germany, too often fail to remember the importance of Italy's contribution to the common cause, and we, with our large Italian population, have less excuse than some other countries for forgetting that the Italian flag well deserves equal honors to those we so gladly pay to the flags of France and Great Britain. Of Italy it certainly can be said with truth that she has done what, and all, she could.

Never since she entered the war—and truly it is not for us to recall her delay in doing that—has there even been a moment of doubt about her loyalty as a nation to the common cause, about the courage of her sons, or about their fighting efficiency. She has utilized to the full resources comparatively small, and we can well afford to let oblivion cover her one disaster for the sake of her magnificent recovery from it—the speed with which her momentarily broken lines were reformed. Again and again she has taken the offensive against a foe whose strength would have justified her in remaining on the defensive, and today she is repaying help received with help given.

Over here, Italians have been among the readiest to volunteer for service in our armies, and they have not been surpassed by the representatives of any racial strain in cheerful acquiescence in the draft. They have not resented, though they have felt, what has seemed to be the tendency to treat Italy as a minor factor in the war. Of real inappreciation, however, there has been none, and this fact should be made manifest on the day that has been selected for paying valiantly earned tributes to the country to which, more than to any other, the whole world has been so long and deeply indebted.

A Practice Better Abandoned. There was another long and slightly acrimonious discussion this week, in the Senate at Washington, of an ancient abuse—the printing in the Congressional Record of columns and columns of words which, not having been spoken in that august chamber, are out of place in a publication that pretends to be, and should be nothing more than, a chronicle of proceedings in our National Legislature.

It was Senator Wadsworth of New York who brought the matter up this time, and his text was the insertion by Senator Thomas of Colorado of a long series of criticisms of President Lincoln, made by inappreciative contemporaries. Senator Wadsworth admitted that these reminders of long-evaporated animosities had an academic interest, but he denied their right to a place in the Record unless actually "read into it," as the phrase is, and so made a part of the day's transactions. "Leave to print" he condemned both as a violation of the legislative veracities and as a waste of paper, especially at a time when paper is scarce and expensive.

The Times has what might be called a special interest in this controversy, for very frequently, of late, both Senators and Representatives have asked and received permission to reprint in the Record articles of one sort or another that first appeared in The Times columns. This is an appreciated compliment, and it probably has advertising value. Neither of those considerations, however, is sufficient to prevent The Times from seeing the soundness of Senator Wadsworth's contention that the practice of loading up the Congressional Record in this way should cease, or at any rate should be far more strictly regulated than at present.

In only a few cases are public interests served by "leave to print." Far oftener the interests served are those of an individual legislator, and the chances are that even he rarely gets much advantage from the privilege he so much enjoys. It provides him with "documents" to shower on his constituents, but the number of people that read them must be small and the number influenced by them smaller still.

Idleness Has Its Utilities. Unless Governor Whitman takes great pains in wording the proclamation putting in force the anti-loafing law, our police and our Magistrates are going to have some most difficult problems to solve, and only the fact that laws of the same sort seem to work smoothly enough in New Jersey and Maryland enables one to view the prospect with composure. For while we are all content to have real loafers made to justify their existence by doing some honest work, opinions differ as to what constitutes the difference between reprehensible idleness and a commendable enjoyment of leisure.

The case of actors out of engagement has already excited understandable apprehension in their class. There are also not a few "literary fellows" whose activities, while vastly important in their own esteem, are regarded as a lamentable waste of time by editors and other inappreciative members of the general public. Again, a large amount of "loafing" seems to be an essential part of several kinds of production. Genius must wait for inspiration, and meanwhile genius cannot, or at any rate it won't, turn its hand to bricklaying or the running of street cars.

And how about men more or less like Thoreau—men who scorn luxuries and cut down necessaries to what other people hold an intolerable minimum, and do it in order that they may have more time in which to invite their souls? Mr. Gradgrind would call them all loafers—and prove the accuracy of his characterization by all the recognized tests.

Only war, and only just such a war as this one, would warrant the condemnation of all men to the sedulous performance, for a fixed number of hours every day or week or year, of what is obviously "useful labor." But all such thoughts as these only make it the more evident that we must "get on with the war" and have it over with—in the right way and with Germany beaten—as soon as possible. If the new law does that, it is all right—as is anything else that has the same effect or can be hoped to have it.

GERMAN PROFESSORS.

Statement of the Department of Justice on Their Position.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

It may be instructive to the administration offices in other colleges to read the inclosed letter from the Department of Justice. The inquiry which elicited this letter dealt with the problem of retaining on the academic staff professors of German citizenship who, while known to be loyal to their native country, conducted themselves in all respects conformably to the regulations of the Department of Justice.

I proposed to the Department of Justice that if professors were to be considered as a class apart from other German aliens the Department of Justice should issue an intimation to American college boards of trustees that the continued presence of German aliens as professors was not desired.

The letter which follows was written after consultation by Mr. Wallace with the Attorney General:

> H. N. MacCracken, Esq., President, Vassar College, Poughkeepsie, N. Y.
> Dear Sir: I reply to your letter of May 1, 1918, submitting memorandum as to employment of German aliens as teachers in American colleges. The Attorney General requests me to advise you that the Presidential proclamations expressly state that there should be no discriminations against alien enemies other than those specified in these proclamations. As the feature you suggest is not covered by the proclamation, to attempt to enforce it would be opposed to the proclamation itself.
> Very truly yours,
> William Wallace, Jr.
> Special Assistant to the Attorney General.

What Soldiers Can Find.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Your editorial article, "Of Course, They Stole That Stove," in today's Times reminded me of the following extract from a letter written early in March by an English soldier:

> About huts, &c., I am one of a lucky few. We are six in a hut with bunks, but the wood is hard, so we just look about and, hey, oh, it's softer. Winter came; no stoves for us. Looked about again; one stove came in. Must have walked in. Any rate, we were warm.
> A fresh officer came to my late battery one day; just come from Blighty. He wanted to know why we always said that we found this or that; so explained. A soldier, walking along, sees something he wants, takes it. Result: Found it. Get me? If you don't look after yourself a little bit on active service, other people won't. That's our motto.

You wrote some time ago of the English mail service being satisfactory. It takes three weeks, as the rule, for letters both coming and going, though my letters are not censored. His letters are censored by an officer at his depot and again at the base. Only twice in the last two years have I received letters without the base censor's strips. Considering the fact that he is now behind the lines with an engineer detachment, this does not seem to be fast mail service.

The Gentle Conductorette.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In your article of May 11 you have taken up the subject of the conductors and conductorettes, as to their efficiency, comfort, &c., and of the all-important topic of women in men's jobs. Will you allow at least one of the third party to this arrangement, or a passenger who rides a great deal on the cars of the city at all hours, a remark? I find, since we have these conductorettes, I am able to get on and off cars, pay my fare, receive change when needed, can be told to move up front, &c., and all in a civilized manner, absolutely no brutality, and a great deal less confusion and just as much speed. By all means let us have the cheery "Fares in the box, please!" compared with the "Money-or-your-life!" method of old.

A SIMPLE LIFE.

(To Charles Wagner.)

"A few strong instincts and a few plain rules"
Sufficed to guide thy life aright,
To make thy name a true and steady light
Where most men err and many more are fools!

Still ring the echoes of thy old appeal
To us, who heard thee once with joy.
From thee no platitudes that shortly cloy,
But sturdy truths for men who still can feel.

They, touched, impressed, respond with worthy deeds.
No subtleties of mystic lore,
No fruitless dogma, rotten at its core,
No labyrinth of philosophic creeds—

Not such thy gospel to a pain-wracked age,
But simple trust in God, and Faith
That Righteousness is not an empty wraith,
And hope, that saves when powers of evil rage!

Last came thy call that men should join the fight Against the imperiling tides of crime
Or stand convicted to the end of time
As equal criminals, and foes to Right.

"To make of life a something more sublime
Than merely life"—this was thy aim.
Thou hast achieved it. Well we know thy flame
Renews itself beyond the grasp of Time!

INTERNATIONAL THINKERS.

A Board Suggested to Consider Matters of Foreign Relations.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

"The science of creating and transmitting public opinion under the influence of collective emotion is about to become the principal science of civilization, to the mastery of which all Governments and all powerful interests will in the future address themselves with every resource at their command."

This quotation from Benjamin Kidd's book, "The Science of Power," points out what in the future may well be one of the most important branches of governmental activity.

The question arises, "What can or should be done by the United States to develop this science in its relation to foreign countries?"

It has been said that there are less than one hundred men in the United States who think internationally. If this is true, the imperial rescript of the Emperor of Japan commanding his subjects to go forth into the world in search of knowledge is applicable to us also. It is imperative that we conserve and utilize the experience and wisdom of the few men who have a knowledge of international relations.

It would seem that there might be a council on foreign relations or a house of diplomats which should comprise in its membership ex-Ministers and ex-Ambassadors of the United States and other American citizens who have done constructive work internationally. This council might be controlled by a Board of Governors, somewhat as the Federal Reserve Bank is controlled, who should give their undivided attention to the question of foreign relations, each Governor specializing on the country with which he is familiar; it should be as independent of politics as the Supreme Court; it would act in an advisory capacity to the President and departments of the Government if called upon. Its headquarters should be in New York. Its method of operation might be somewhat similar to that of the Roman College of the Propaganda, that is, through intensifying and multiplying the personal equation by conference and exchange of thought rather than by publicity. As a sheep is shorn of its wool to be converted into cloth, so would the international expert be shorn of his knowledge that it might be placed at the disposal of the Government.

Such a board would tend to stabilize our foreign policy and give it a continuity. It would also operate to maintain a happy medium between secret diplomacy and the tendency of the people to take diplomacy into their own hands.

TARIFF AFTER THE WAR.

As to New Fears of Foreign Competition.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The textile trade organs are in ecstacy over the possibilities of "Made in U. S. A." It was the keynote of the late convention of cotton goods manufacturers held here, and a big feature of the textile show just closed. It does not therefore need the gift of second sight to uncover our old friends the tariff-pampered interests in the background. It is not difficult to see, either, why the cotton goods people especially should be thus enthused, and why so apprehensive about foreign goods coming in after the war.

In this agitation the familiar tactics of the protectionists are resorted to, the browbeating of the consumer. "If you allow yourself to be tempted to buy the cheaper goods from outside, home industry will be destroyed and all will starve." The consumer so far has preferred to do without the cheaper goods than to take a chance with his income. The protection plea rests on the proposition that for every dollar's worth of foreign goods bought there will be one dollar's worth of goods less produced here. Enterprise is a restricted quantity, not capable of expansion. The proposition is exactly the same as that of the laborer in respect to labor-saving inventions—there is a given amount of work to do and inventions by increasing individual output reduce the work for each. The protectionist uses the tariff to shorten the supply of goods, and the laborer restricts output to curtail the supply of labor. But notwithstanding the rising tariffs the world over the importations of each nation in response to economic necessity have tremendously grown, and without the calamities vociferously predicted. Inventions, too, have advanced at a marvelous pace and, forsooth, there is as much employment, relatively, as there ever was, if not more. In both cases lowered costs increased the power to buy, and in turn increased production. This basic fact, the consuming side, the balancing side of the proposition, the business and the labor restrictionists entirely ignore.

It is peculiar that in the industries where prices are decided by free competition there is no fear of the foreigner. That fear is the exclusive quality of the "regulated" trades. The manufacturers, too, that stand on their own bottoms are also ready to adjust themselves to conditions as they arise. If perchance competitors here and there are able to produce cheaper they are willing to turn to fields in which they may excel. They know that there are no bounds to enterprise, that there is plenty of room for home goods and foreign goods of merit. This is the spirit of progress, the spirit that conquers and builds up a nation, and not the spirit that depends upon favoritism, economic exclusion, and false appeals to patriotism.

War Stamps Better Than Fireworks.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Why not start a movement to make the coming Fourth of July holiday a stamp day celebration? Instead of buying fireworks, it should be the duty of each one to buy war saving and thrift stamps. A movement like this would save noise, life, and money.

ART NOTES.

Furnishings and ornaments belonging to the estate of Grant B. Schley and to several other estates and private owners are on view at The American Art Galleries until the dates of sale, which commence the afternoon of May 20 and continue until May 25, inclusive.

The exhibition includes a great variety of objects, furniture, rugs, pottery, bronzes, glass, pewter, porcelains, and pictures. Perhaps the most interesting section is the pewter, with examples of French, English, Flemish, Dutch, American, Swedish, Danish, and German, many of the pieces very large and in beautiful condition, with the soft rich surface that has never known a buffer. A very unusual piece is a Persian pewter kettle with curved spout, domed cover, and flat wrought iron ball handles. The body is engraved with diapered scrollings of leaves and flowers, and the lid is repoussé with a lotus leaf pattern.

GERMAN PROFESSORS WARN OF IDEALISM

Campaign Is Started Against Applying the Principles of "Dreamers" to Peace.

WANT WORLD LEADERSHIP

Special Cable to The New York Times.

LONDON, May 15.—The London Times says that a regular campaign is being conducted in certain quarters in Germany against the "perils" of international idealism and what is called "world citizenship."

The Suddeutsche Monatsheft, an influential review, published in Leipsic and Munich, devoted almost the whole of its last issue to warnings against all "German dreamers." The principal articles were contributed by university professors.

Dr. Martin Spahn, Roman Catholic Professor of History in the University of Strassburg, and son of the leader of the Centre Party, concluded a learned review of German political idealism with the assertion that if Germany consented to any league of nations, she must lead it. After admitting that it was necessary to discover a formula reconciling the right of States to self-determination with the "common right of Christianity," Dr. Spahn said:

"The need of the present hour is not yet universal peace, the rule of law and the freedom of peoples, but a clearness about the vital conditions of the German people as a State, and about the full development of our own condition of existence. We have to make good the omissions of centuries and to extirpate weakness that has penetrated our very being. Much was made good in the year 1871, but we could not be healed all at once.

"The unity of peoples will prosper only under the leadership of the most efficient people. The peoples are made for equality just as little as individuals are. Assuredly our leadership will not mean serfdom for other peoples.

"It was we who brought into the world the idea that the common state life of mankind should depend upon a trinity—the right of all, freedom for every individual member of the community and peace as an ordered state of civilization. Only a race so full of idealism as the Germans are was capable of lighting up the horizon of humanity with an idea so great and eternal. If mankind is gradually to draw nearer to such a superterrestrial goal, it will only be if we once more advance as leaders."

Professor Ernest Häckel of the University of Jena contributed a brief note on "the false cosmopolitan idealism of the German people the greatest danger to its national existence." He wrote:

"I am afraid that German dreamers are again being deceived by political phrases and Utopian imaginings of peace. Since the Reichstag, in its infamous resolution of July 19, 1917, gave fresh and terrible proof of the proverbial political incompetence of the 'German Michael,' it must unfortunately be feared that at the impending conclusion of peace the ideal of an international itch for agreement will be victorious over the indispensable national real increase of power."

Professor Reinke of the University of Kiel, in an article called "Conciliation by Magnanimity," attributed German idealism to the fact that the Germans "were attacked and had to wage a defensive war for their existence." He wrote:

"The advocates of the idea of renunciation are theorists who have not even thought out their theory to its final consequences. In practical politics, as long as the world has existed, the only power which has won peace is the power that has been able to inspire the enemy with respect by force of arms.

"The latest example is provided by Brest-Litovsk. In the first act of the drama played there we achieved nothing because we appeared as gentle and benevolent characters. The third act will be successful because of the plain language meanwhile spoken by German arms.

"The proper maxim for us is to extract from the situation as much material advantage as the military state of affairs permits. If we were to act otherwise our enemies would laugh at us or gloat over us in secret. The idea that we could conciliate defeated enemies by magnanimity would be a dream, and not even a pretty dream. That idea is disproved on every page of history, and it is only from history that we can learn how a nation and an empire should behave in such a situation as the one in which we now are."

INSURE 2,029,886 TROOPS.

Federal Bureau's Policies to Date Total $15,663,514,000.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 15.—No single organization in the history of life underwriting has ever matched the work achieved by the Government's War Risk Bureau, which has just completed its first six months of operations.

Up to the close of business last Monday night 2,029,886 applications for policies had been received and acted on, the total amount of insurance sought being $15,663,514,000. If all the business of twenty of the largest life companies of the United States now standing on the books were to be footed into one grand total, it would not equal this. The average amount of insurance applied for has been $8,209, the maximum under the law being $10,000.

The applications are coming in at the rate of 11,000 a day, and in the last fortnight the bureau wrote $1,000,000,000 of policies. The men have under the regulations 120 days after enlisting in which to put in their applications, and it is apparent that the new men are availing themselves of the liberal treatment extended to them by the Government. The insurance is against death and permanent disability.

RUMANIA'S KING HOPEFUL.

Expresses Confidence in Future—Ex-Ministers to be Prosecuted.

AMSTERDAM, May 15.—A dispatch received here from Bucharest says King Ferdinand of Rumania, in a telegram to Alexander Marghiloman, the Rumanian Premier, has expressed his confidence in the future of his people. In the telegram the King also thanked Marghiloman and his associates for their work in the preservation of Rumanian rights.

"I hereby take cognizance of the peace which has been concluded at Bucharest," says the King's message to M. Marghiloman, "and thank you and the other Rumanian delegates for the difficult and self-sacrificing work you have done to preserve our rights at a painful time.

"As King and a Rumanian, I have every hope for the future of my brave and valiant people. I thank you for the assurance of confidence you express in the prosperity and strength of the country under my leadership and that of my dynasty."

The Bucharest newspaper Steagul, a copy of which had been received here, forecasts the prosecution of the members of the Cabinet of J. J. C. Bratiano and Take Jonescu, former Minister without portfolio in the Rumanian Government. An investigation, says the newspaper, is being made regarding the preparations for and the conduct of the war, and also the administration of State funds.

21 INDICTED IN BISBEE FOR DEPORTATIONS

SEQUEL TO FIGHT ON I. W. W.

More Than 1,000 Were Expelled After Strike Order—Defendants' Bail High.

TUCSON, Ariz., May 15.—Twenty of the most prominent citizens of Bisbee, Ariz., were at liberty under $5,000 bond tonight following their arrest at Bisbee on Federal indictments returned here last week, according to advices reaching the office of the United States Marshal here. Twenty-one men were indicted for "conspiracy to deprive a citizen of the United States of his legal rights in violation of Section 19 of the Penal Code." The indictments grew out of the deportation from Bisbee and the Warren mining district of 1,186 copper miners and others following a strike which had been called at Arizona mines by I. W. W. officials in May, 1917.

The twenty-first man, for whom officers had a warrant, was reported to be in New York. He was said to be prominent in mining and financial circles throughout the United States.

The men arrested today appeared before an Acting United States Commissioner at Bisbee and gave bond for their appearance at Tucson May 28 for a preliminary hearing. All the men indicted are widely known in Arizona, and some of them have national reputations in mining and financial circles.

Prominent citizens among the indicted men declared today they believed the deportations were made for the good of the community and of the Government, in that the I. W. W. strike which prevailed in the district at the time was hampering production of copper badly needed in wartime.

Among those arrested today were:

GRANT H. DOWELL, general manager of the Copper Queen Consolidated Mining Company at Bisbee.

MILES MERILL, Copper Queen miner, one of the organizers of Warren District Loyalty League.

M. J. CUNNINGHAM, Cashier of the Bank of Bisbee and former President of the Arizona Bankers' Association.

Dr. N. C. BLEDSOE, head of the Calumet and Arizona Mining Company's medical staff.

Captain JOSEPH PARK HODGSON, consulting engineer, Phelps-Dodge Corporation.

JAMES ALLISON, City Marshal of Bisbee.

ALVIN W. HOWE, Deputy Sheriff of Cochise County.

M. J. BROPHY, general manager Phelps-Dodge store in Bisbee.

PHIL TOVREA, Bisbee cattleman.

HENRY SNODGRASS, Bisbee miner, former City Marshal.

GEORGE B. WILLCOX, watchman, Calumet and Arizona Mining Company.

Dr. C. H. HUNT, member of Phelps-Dodge medical staff.

J. L. GANNON, Deputy Sheriff.

VANCE JOHNSON, Chairman of Board of Supervisors of Cochise County.

Sheriff Harry Wheeler, who was in charge of the deportations, is now a Captain in the American forces in France. James S. Douglas, one of the leading officials of the Phelps-Dodge Copper interests, and one of the owners of the Verde Extension mine, also is in France in Red Cross work and has with him as assistant, W. H. Brophey, manager of the Phelps-Dodge mercantile interests.

BOOM COLER FOR GOVERNOR

Friend Says Up-State Democratic Leaders Favor Candidacy.

Brooklyn friends of Charities Commissioner Bird S. Coler said yesterday that he was preparing to throw his hat into the gubernatorial ring. A close friend of the Commissioner said he would soon open campaign headquarters in his office, 215 Montague Street, to boom Mr. Coler for the Democratic nomination for Governor. According to this authority, Mr. Coler has given his sanction to the movement, and several up-State leaders who have been consulted have expressed themselves favorable to his candidacy. At Mr. Coler's home in Brooklyn last evening it was said that he was in Washington on business.

When Mr. Coler failed to win the Democratic nomination for Borough President last Fall it was generally understood among Brooklyn politicians that he would seek gubernatorial honors this year. He has made no definite declaration in that connection, however, and it was thought that following his appointment as Charities Commissioner he had dropped his Governorship aspirations.

Mr. Coler was the Democratic candidate for Governor against Benjamin B. Odell in 1902, and was defeated by only 8,800 votes.

SHIFTS SUFFRAGE FIGHT TO THE HERRENHAUS

Friedberg Announces Dissolution of Prussian Parliament if Equal Vote Fails.

AMSTERDAM, May 15.—Herr Friedberg, Vice President of the Prussian State Ministry, speaking yesterday in the Prussian Lower House, said, according to Berlin dispatches, that the Government continued to adhere unshakably to equal suffrage and was resolved to employ all constitutional means to carry through the suffrage plan. The Government, he also said, took the view that the Upper House was an equivalent factor of the legislature and must first pronounce its decision in the matter. The bill, accordingly, will be submitted also to the Upper Chamber.

Should this procedure not lead to the final acceptance of equal suffrage within a definite period, the Vice President said, the House would be dissolved at the earliest date compatible, in the opinion of the Government, with the war situation.

An amendment to Article 2 offered by the Centre Party was adopted to prevent the Lower House from being outvoted in the committee of the two houses, which sits in the event of a conflict, as that the budget right of the Lower House might not be prejudiced.

Deputy Lohmann's motion dealing with the question of plural voting, which provided that under certain circumstances two additional votes might be granted, was rejected by 238 to 78.

The franchise bill as amended, eliminating the provision for one vote for each man, was passed on the third reading. The Poles, Social Democrats, and Progressives voted against it. The House adjourned until June 4.

SOCIETY ATTENDS BENEFITS

Helps Home for Homeless Boys and American Girls' Aid.

Two benefit entertainments attracted society last night.

At the Ritz-Carlton a musical and dancing program was held in aid of the New York Home for Homeless Boys, Mrs. Philip A. S. Franklin acting as Chairman of arrangements. A boys' orchestra from the home played. H. Clinton Eva, Mrs. Tarleton Winchester, Mrs. Russell Lansdale, and Miss Grace Crossman were also on the program.

For the American Girl's Aid, a benefit performance by the Snarks and the Amateur Comedy Club drew a large assembly to the Hotel Plaza. "Some Boston Beans," "Food," and "Suppressed Desires" were the comedies offered. Articles made in France by the refugees and soldiers were on sale, and dancing followed the performance.

MISS BOURNE BETROTHED.

Daughter of Frederick G. Bourne to Wed Alex. Benson, Diplomatist.

Frederick Gilbert Bourne of Indian Neck Hall, Oakdale, L. I., announces the engagement of his daughter, Miss Marion C. Bourne, to Alexander Benson of Philadelphia.

Miss Bourne is prominent in the younger set of society, and is an enthusiastic motorist. She is a sister of George G. Bourne of 70 East Seventy-seventh Street, who married Miss Helen C. Whitney of Boston, and of Miss Marjorie Bourne and Howard Bourne. Her father is President of the Singer Manufacturing Company and ex-Commodore of the New York Yacht Club.

Mr. Benson is the son of Mrs. E. N. Benson of Philadelphia, and is in the diplomatic service. He was formerly Second Secretary of the American Embassy in Rome.

No date has been set for the wedding.

Boody-Valentine Engagement.

Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Boody of Brooklyn have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Marjory H. Boody, to Stephen Valentine, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Valentine, also of Brooklyn. Miss Boody is a granddaughter of ex-Mayor David A. Boody. Mr. Valentine is now in training at the Naval Aviation School at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Miss Peggy O'Connell Engaged.

The engagement of Miss Peggy O'Connell of Manhasset, L. I., to William J. Henderson has been announced. Miss O'Connell is Deputy Town Clerk of North Hempstead, being one of the first women ever appointed to that position in this State. Her brother, Thomas O'Connell, is Chairman of the Democratic County Committee of Nassau County.

Snyder-Wahle.

The marriage of Judson Fuller Snyder, U. S. N. R., and Miss Amelia Clara Wahle, a daughter of Charles F. G. Wahle, a lawyer of 220 Broadway, was celebrated at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon in the Church of the Transfiguration by the Rev. W. W. Davis. A reception for the relatives and a few friends followed at the McAlpin. Miss Wahle was attended by Miss Alice Chute of New Rochelle and Mr. Snyder had Wells Conklin as his best man. Mr. Snyder has just been graduated from the Radio School at Columbia University.

H. R. Wenck Marries Miss Taylor.

The marriage of Harry Rutter Wenck of the Medical Department, attached to the Light Tank Corps, stationed at Camp Colt, Gettysburg, and son of W. G. Wenck of Northumberland, Penn., and Miss Alice Elisabeth Taylor, a daughter of Mrs. Taylor of 614 West 136th Street, took place at 9 o'clock yesterday morning at the Church of the Annunciation, 131st Street and Convent Avenue, the Rev. Father McCahill officiating. Miss Talyor had Miss Mary McCoy as her attendant, and Mr. Wenck's best man was Orville H. Browne. After the wedding breakfast Mr. and Mrs. Wenck left for Atlantic City to spend their honeymoon.

Miss Barr to Wed Lieut. Robinson.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Barr of Brooklyn announce the engagement of their youngest daughter, Miss Mary Godfrey Barr, to Lieutenant Richard Dodson Robinson, 47th Infantry, N. A., a son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward L. Robinson of Baltimore, Md. Lieutenant Robinson, who was graduated from Brown University, attended the first Summer camp at Plattsburg, and is now with the army in France.

One of the Changes in Real Estate is that more attention is being paid to management. The cost of good service yields a large return to the owner.

REVENUE RECEIPTS EXCEED ESTIMATES

Treasury Statement Encourages Opponents of Legislation to Raise More Money.

WILL TAKE VIEW TO WILSON

Cabinet Member Tells House Leaders Wilson Is Still Undecided, and Is Not Backing Measure.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 15.—Opponents of the proposed revenue legislation gained two points today. A statement was made to the Senate from the Treasury Department showing that the revenues which will be collected under the present law will be greatly in excess of former estimates, and a Cabinet member transmitted the positive denial to the House of President Wilson's supposed support of the measure.

This message represented the President as not having yet made up his mind, and as rather impressed in fact with the plea of Congressmen to get back home. It was said that he would not make a decision until he had had ample opportunity to discuss all phases of the bill both with Secretary McAdoo, who has been too ill to lay his complete plans before the President, and with Congressional leaders.

The information came as a reply to an inquiry by a leader of the House as to a published report that the President would soon insist publicly that Congress should proceed with the bill. As a result of this assurance and of the favorable Treasury statement Capitol leaders are planning to get their views before the President. A series of calls will be made by influential members of the House and Senate in which all phases of the "untimeliness" of the proposed law will be laid before the President.

He was represented by the Cabinet member today as being convinced that more taxes should be raised and uncertain on the sole point of whether the bill should be pressed now or next Fall. It is likely that Democrats responsible for the campaign next Fall which will decide the political complexion of Congress may ask Secretary McAdoo to look again into what he considers necessary for legislation.

A bit of ammunition to work with was furnished the Congressional leaders this afternoon when the Treasury Department sent to the Senate in response to a resolution by Senator Pomerene of Ohio a statement that the present revenue law will, under present estimates, raise $4,095,699,000, as against $3,000,000,000 estimated when the bill was drafted. It may be that when the final income tax and excess profits tax figures are in an even more favorable balance may be shown.

The figures, however, are said by the Treasury Department to be quite accurate, so far as it has prepared and totaled bills which it will send the various taxpayers for collection. The details are income and excess profits, $3,643,899,000; customs, $180,000,000; miscellaneous, $270,000,000, of which $40,000,000 is from increased postal rates; sale of public lands, $1,800,000.

A situation which has given Congressional leaders some worry is that the oversubscription of the last Liberty Loan appears not to have been as large as had been expected. Some estimates of as high as $5,000,000,000 had been made, and as the Treasury Department had decided to take all that was offered, it was hoped that a substantial amount of revenue for which plans could not be laid would be realized. While the loan figures are incomplete, it seems certain that these hopes are not well founded.

Senator Simmons and Chairman Kitchin of the House Ways and Means Committee are still awaiting word as to when Secretary McAdoo will be ready to see them. He is reported as stronger, but as yet not ready to talk business.

PLEDGES AID TO NATION IN HEALTH MATTERS

Copeland Confers with Washington Officials—Blue Now Expects Complete Co-operation.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 15.—Following conferences today between Dr. R. S. Copeland, the new Health Commissioner of New York and Surgeon General Rupert Blue of the Public Health Service, Acting Surgeon General Colonel James W. Furbush of the Army, and Surgeon General W. C. Braisted of the Navy, it was announced that the Health Department of New York would co-operate fully with the national health services.

The Federal health authorities, by the exchange of views at the conferences, were assured that there would be no lowering of the standards of health conservation in New York. No details of policy were entered into.

The policy of disorganizing, retrenchment, and the substitution of talent of lesser efficiency in the New York health service, it was distinctly said, would not be permitted to continue.

Surgeon General Blue expressed the highest satisfaction tonight at the outcome of the visit of Dr. Copeland to Washington. He said that he felt confident that there would be the most complete co-operation between the city and the Federal authorities, and that the result would be to the advantage of the people of New York and to the national services interested.

The Health Department made public yesterday letters received by Commissioner Copeland from Secretary of War Baker and Surgeon General Braisted of the Navy. In his letter Secretary Baker expressed his appreciation of the offer of co-operation extended to the War Department by Dr. Copeland. Surgeon General Braisted's letter was similar in tone.

At the request of Mayor Hylan, who had received numerous complaints from persons living near the garbage plant at Lake Island, Staten Island, an inspection of the plant was made yesterday by health officials. Since the garbage plant was constructed at Lake Island many complaints had been made regarding the fumes.

The Executive Committee of the Bronx County Medical Society last night at a meeting at Ebling's Casino adopted a resolution commending the action of ex-Health Commissioner Lewis Amster in resigning his post. The resolution was as follows:

> Resolved, That the Bronx County Medical Society hereby expresses its hearty approval of the action of Dr. J. Lewis Amster in resigning from the position of Commissioner of Health of the City of New York. We are convinced, from the circumstances and manner of his resignation, that he was actuated by a sincere desire to act in the best interests of the community and the City of New York and the medical profession.

The resolution was introduced by Dr. J. A. Scheller and seconded by Dr. H. I. Radin.

TO DEBATE SIXTUS LETTERS

Commons Discussion to be of "Highest Importance," It Is Said.

LONDON, May 15.—The Manchester Guardian says that the peace offer made to France last year by Austria, as revealed recently in the letters written by Emperor Charles to Prince Sixtus, will form the subject of a debate of the highest importance in the House of Commons tomorrow.

Since the publication of Emperor Charles's letters, the question has been raised whether the Austrian offer should not have received greater attention, and especially whether President Wilson should not have been consulted.

LIBERTY LOAN TOTAL IS DELAYED BY BANKS

Federal Reserve Institutions Unable to Complete Tabulation of Subscriptions on Time.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 15.—It has been simply impossible for the Federal Reserve Banks to complete the tabulation and classification of subscriptions to the Third Liberty Loan on time. Today was the last allowed them in which to close up their work and enable the Treasury Department to arrive at the grand total of subscriptions. No announcement could be made at the Treasury Department tonight as to when the banks would be able to finish their task, but it is expected that the totals will be reached by the end of the week.

Today's Treasury statement showed that in the first half of the day there had been paid into the Treasury for bonds of the Third Loan $1,213,854,402, which, with payments made in April, makes the complete total so far received from the Third Loan $1,318,654,084. There is a large volume of payments to be made before the total of the loan has been determined.

The Treasury Department has mailed to holders of registered bonds of the Second Liberty Loan the checks covering the first semi-annual interest, payable today. The books of the Second Liberty Loan closed on April 15, in order that the preparation of the interest payment might be unhampered by transfers and exchanges; and on Monday there were 523,673 registered bonds of this loan outstanding, representing an aggregate face value of $409,733,500. The bonds are held by 306,908 individual owners, in the following denominations:

$50	110,390	$5,000	8,693
100	244,935	10,000	8,931
500	68,537	50,000	776
1,000	80,477	100,000	934

While the registered part of the Second Liberty Loan now stands at $409,733,500, only $359,124,250 represents original issues, the difference representing coupon bonds exchanged for registered bonds. On original deliveries on subscriptions for coupon bonds of this loan the following coupon bonds were delivered to subscribers:

Denomination.	No. of Bonds.	Denomination.	No. of Bonds.
100	4,444,452	5,000	47,808
500	654,421	10,000	46,001

During the closed period 306,908 interest checks, aggregating $8,194,670 were prepared. Prior to the war the Treasury prepared approximately 150,000 checks annually for the payment of interest on registered bonds of all loans, the issue of these 150,000 checks being distributed through the year.

BRITISH BOND SALES DROP.

£619,000,000 Invested in War Funds from October to April.

LONDON, May 15, (via Ottawa.)—Savings certificates and the 4 and 5 per cent. war bonds which the Bank of England is issuing produced £619,000,000 from Oct. 1 to April 1, Chancellor Bonar Law said today in the House of Commons.

There had been a recent falling off in subscriptions, he added, but he was considering steps for stimulation of the campaign, and he was not in the least despondent over the prospects of obtaining the money required in this way.

The Chancellor indicated there would be no change in the new duties.

SEEK TO AID N. Y. INFIRMARY

Doctors Emphasize Need for Education of Women Physicians.

About 100 women physicians of New York gathered last night at the home of Mrs. Philip M. Lydig, 14 Washington Square North, and listened to prominent physicians appeal for a fund of $200,000 to enable the New York Infirmary for Women and Children, at 321 East Fifteenth Street, to continue its work among the poor and needy of the east side.

The Infirmary was established in 1853 by Doctors Elizabeth and Emily Blackwell, two women pioneers in the field of medicine. For the last sixty-five years the institution has ministered to the sick and needy of the east side and has introduced many of the new ideas in hospital work that have been followed in institutions all over the country.

Dr. Flexner described the need for physicians in the army and in civil life at present. He said that soon there would be 20,000 medical men in service, all withdrawn from caring for the civilian population. It would be a simple calculation, he said, to learn how many physicians would be withdrawn in the event of the establishment of an army of 5,000,000, and in such circumstances, he declared, the people of the city should not allow the New York Infirmary for Women and Children to close its doors. Women in medicine must be willing to take the place of the men who have gone into service, said Dr. Flexner, and the community could not afford to deprive itself of an institution which had trained so many young women physicians.

LEWIS WILL STICK.

Friends Say He Will Ask for Votes as a Prohibition "Neutral."

Attorney General Merton E. Lewis, candidate for the Republican Gubernatorial nomination against Governor Whitman, will stay in the fight right up to the finish of the primaries. Mr. Lewis, who was in the city yesterday, would not discuss his candidacy, but friends made it clear there was no truth in the reports that the Attorney General had decided to oppose the Governor for the nomination for other than political reasons and would probably withdraw before primary day.

Mr. Lewis had a talk with William Barnes, leader of the Old Guard Republicans and anti-Whitman faction, and with Frederick C. Tanner, ex-Chairman of the State committee, who has been mentioned as the probable leader of the Lewis forces. Mr. Lewis also talked over the telephone with Jacob A. Livingston, Republican leader of Brooklyn, who is strongly opposed to Whitman. Mr. Lewis said he had not seen Col. Roosevelt and had no appointment to see him soon.

According to the Attorney General's friends, it has practically been settled that their candidate will make the basis of his campaign an attack upon the Whitman prohibition and third term issues. Mr. Lewis will go before the people as a prohibition "neutral," advocate a referendum on the ratification of the national prohibition amendment, and declare for local option. They believe that he would get strong support on a platform that the people be given an opportunity to express their opinions regarding prohibition.

NEWSPRINT STOCKS LOWER.

Shipments Exceeded Production in Four Weeks in April.

WASHINGTON, May 15.—Newsprint paper production during the four weeks ended April 28 amounted to 102,905 net tons, shipments were 105,520 tons, and stocks at the end of the period 24,864 tons, or 2,120 tons less than at the beginning of the period.

Newsprint mill stocks are about equal to one week's output. Fifty-nine mills were operated during the period.

Marshall McCormack.

BERRYVILLE, Va., May 15.—Marshall McCormack, general counsel for the Norfolk & Western Railroad, died at his home here today. He was born in Clarke County, Va., on June 20, 1849, and was educated at the University of Virginia and the Virginia Military Academy. In 1871 he was admitted to the Virginia bar. He was a member of the Virginia Senate from 1883 to 1887 and originated the Anderson-McCormack election law. Mr. McCormack was a member of the American, Virginia, and Roanoke Bar Associations.

HEARST PAPERS SUE OUT AN INJUNCTION

ORDINANCE IS DENOUNCED

Ex-Ambassador Gerard Makes Application to the Court—Hearing Set for Next Week.

The following announcement was made last night by The New York American:

"Justice Greenbaum, sitting in Part I., Special Term, Supreme Court, yesterday signed an injunction restraining the Mayor, the Aldermen, and the Chief of Police of Mt. Vernon from enforcing an extraordinary ordinance passed by the City Council on Tuesday evening.

"The Aldermen assumed to themselves the right to exclude any publication whatever from sale in the City of Mount Vernon. In the resolution they named The New York American and The New York Evening Journal and made it a crime for any one to sell those papers in the City of Mount Vernon. The action was taken suddenly and without any notice to these two newspapers and without public hearing.

"Ambassador Gerard of the law firm of Scott, Gerard & Bowers immediately made application to Judge Greenbaum for an order restraining the Mount Vernon officials from taking any action whatsoever against the two newspapers named under this unusual and unheard-of and unprecedented ordinance.

"Judge Greenbaum, after reading the ordinance and the papers in respect thereto, immediately signed an order restraining the enforcement of the ordinance. This order is returnable next week, when the Mayor and Aldermen must try to convince the court that they have the power, without public hearing and on their own motion, to prevent the sale of any newspaper or publication that they may choose to name or wish to exclude for any reason, public or private."

SUMMIT, N. J., May 15.—Mayor Ruford Franklin went to each of the seven newsdealers of Summit today and induced them to sign an agreement pledging the newsdealers to refrain from selling the New York American and The New York Evening Journal. All of the newsdealers signed the agreement, which reads:

"We, the undersigned newsdealers of Summit, agree not to sell or have for sale The New York American or The New York Evening Journal during the continuance of the war."

Mayor Franklin is a lawyer with offices in New York, but has paid little attention to practice since he was appointed Chairman of Local Exemption Board No. 3 of Union County.

Asks Hylan to Drop Hearst.

The removal of William R. Hearst as a member of the Mayor's Committee on Taxation and the Investigation of Mortgage Loans was demanded yesterday, in a letter written to Mayor Hylan by William P. Rae, President of the Brooklyn Board of Real Estate Brokers. Mr. Rae said in the letter that the views of Mr. Hearst upon mortgages, as expressed in financial articles in his paper, The New York American, made him an undesirable member of the committee. One paragraph of the letter of the real estate brokers said: "Do you think that the editor and owner of a great newspaper advocating the calling of mortgages on the homes of the people can properly servie the purposes of your commission?

ASSAIL GERMAN PAPERS.

Speakers at Mass Meeting Discuss the Suppression of Publications.

About a thousand persons were present at the Waldorf last night at the mass meeting called by the American Defense Society and the American Patriotic Legion to discuss the suppression of German language newspapers and the abolition of the teaching of German in the schools of America. The Rev. Cyrus Townsend Brady, the chief speaker, asserted that we were at war with Germany and all Germans and that America should not permit German language papers to flourish in this country any more than the German Government would allow English papers in Prussia. Dr. Brady said that it was not the Kaiser alone with whom America was at war, but every German of every walk in life.

Henry C. Quinby, Chairman of the Executive Committee of the American Defense Society, who presided, said that fourteen German language papers had ceased publication. Mrs. Oliver Cromwell Field told of her efforts against German language papers, while Robert G. Patterson, an American and member of the Red Cross, who was gassed in France, and Thomas Skeyhill, a wounded Anzac, also urged the suppression of German language papers.

Ex-Ambassador James W. Gerard, who was expected to be one of the speakers, sent word at the last moment he could not attend. He expressed his approval of the movement.

House Applause for Clark's Son.

WASHINGTON, May 15. — Unusual tribuate was paid by the House to Lieut. Col. Bennet M. Clark, former parliamentarian of the House, now in France, and son of the Speaker. Every member rose and applauded, and tears welled in Speaker Clark's eyes when Representative Garrett of Tennessee, announcing Clark's safe arrival at a European port, said that he had endeared himself to all members of the House, and that the House had every confidence that in his chivalry and ability in the field his service would "ring true to the Commonwealth of Missouri and to the blood that flows in his veins."

Appoint Buyer for Local Red Cross.

Hugh Lynch, who is assistant to Secretary S. C. Mead of the Merchants' Association of New York, will on June 1 become associated with the local Red Cross Bureau of Purchases, 222 Fourth Avenue, as office manager and buyer of miscellaneous supplies. He will receive no remuneration from the Red Cross, his services being donated by the association for an indefinite period. He will succeed J. D. Campbell, who has joined the navy.

Locomotive Engineers to Join A. F. L.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, May 15.—Delegates to the triennial convention of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, in session here, today unanimously adopted resolutions affiliating the engineers' organization with the American Federation of Labor. Samuel Gompers, President of the Federation, was officially notified of the action taken by the convention.

OTTAWA, May 15.—The names of the following Americans appear in today's Canadian casualty list: Wounded—C. W. Donald, Portland, Ore.; P. Freeman, Boston, Mass.; W. Marshall, Jersey City, N. J.; C. G. Frisbie, Portland, Ore.

Private in Marines Dead.

WASHINGTON, May 15.—Today's Marine Corps casualty list contained only one name, that of Private Herman Lesley Wilson of Franklinville, Ill., dead of disease in France.

BENNETT WILL SECRET UNTIL AFTER FUNERAL

Body of Newspaper Owner Will Be Taken to Paris for Interment.

PARIS, May 15.—The body of James Gordon Bennett, proprietor of The New York Herald, who died at Beaulieu yesterday, will be brought to Paris early next week in accordance with Mr. Bennett's desire, often expressed, that Paris be his last resting place. Mr. Bennett's legal representative in Paris is informed that it is not expected that the will will be made public until after the funeral services.

In an article in Le Journal, Maurice de Waleffe writes:

"James Gordon Bennett was more than famous. It may be said of him that he was immortal, having created the type of the transatlantic millionaire, serving as a model for all our novelists."

This is but one of a dozen kindly and appreciative references in the Paris morning newspapers to Mr. Bennett. The "Newspaper Napoleon" and the "Maecenas of Sports and Arts" are some of the characterizations of him by the writers of the tributes. All of them lay emphasis upon his labors to the end of securing the entry of America into the war.

Uncertainty as to what disposition would be made of the property of James Gordon Bennett continued yesterday. It is not yet known whether his will will be filed in New York or Paris, nor who is to inherit his newspapers and other property. Robert W. Candler, his attorney, had no information to give yesterday, and nothing was known by the executives of The New York Herald as to the sttlement of the estate.

Henry Lloyd Herbert, Chairman of the Polo Association since 1890, yesterday paid this tribute to Mr. Bennett as a sportsman:

"It is my desire as Chairman of the Polo Association, and as a friend, to add a personal tribute to the late James Gordon Bennett, with whose friendship I have been favored more than forty years. I feel sure that the people of the nation are a stronger and more healthful race through the efforts, influence, and aid which Mr. Bennett has always shown toward legitimate sports.

"It was he who introduced polo into this country, and that is only one of the many examples of what he had done for the deevlopment of health and strength of the men and women of this country.

"Out of 1,440 active polo players there are now 985 strong, able-bodied men in the service of their country, 6 of whom are Major Generals; 6 Brigadier Generals, 39 Colonels, 90 Lieutenant Colonels, 239 Majors, 238 Captains, 21 sergeants and Corporals, and 321 in the service, rank unknown."

DUKE OF NORTHUMBERLAND

Head of Old English Family Had Held Many High Positions.

LONDON, May 15.—Henry George Percy, seventh Duke of Northumberland, died at Alnwick Castle, Northumberland, last night. His heir is his eldest living son, Earl Percy, formerly an aid to the Governor General of Canada. A younger son, Lord Eustace Percy, is a member of the staff of the British Embassy at Washington.

The Duke of Northumberland was born on May 29, 1846, the eldest son of the sixth Duke of Northumberland and Louisa, Duchess of Northumberland. The Duke was educated at Oxford University, and after leaving the university entered politics as Conservative member of the House of Commons for Northumberland from 1868 to 1885. In 1887 he became a member of the House of Lords, and succeeded his father as Duke of Northumberland in 1899.

The Duke of Northumberland held many positions of honor. From 1874 to 1875 he was Treasurer of the Household of Queen Victoria, and during the coronation of King George in 1911 he was appointed by the King to serve as Lord High Steward of England. He was Lord Lieutenant of Northumberland and Chancellor of Durham, and President of the Archaeological Institute from 1884 to 1892. Since 1900 the Duke has been a Trustee of the British Museum.

The Duke of Northumberland married Lady Edith Campbell in 1868, who died in 1913. He was a member of the Athenaeum, Carlton, St. Stephen's, Travellers', Northumberland, and Northern Counties' Clubs.

Richard Walsh.

Richard Walsh, one of the founders of the Amphion Musical Society, died in his eighty-ninth year on Tuesday at his home, 255 Penn Street, Brooklyn, from heart disease. Mr. Walsh was born in Manchester, England, and in his early days was a tenor singer. He was the choir leader and tenor singer in the old Central Baptist Church and also sang in other Brooklyn churches. The Amphion Musical Society, of which he was the first President, erected the Amphion Academy, which later became the Amphion Theatre, and was for many years the leading playhouse in the Eastern District. Mr. Walsh was a charter member of the Congress Club.

Count de Biscuccia-Villafranca.

Count Silvio N. de Biscuccia-Villafranca, member of an old Venetian family, died yesterday in this city at the age of sixty-six. He made his home at 200 Madison Avenue and is survived by his wife and two sons.

Count and Countess de Biscuccia-Villafranca and their children arrived here three years ago. Their sons went to Cuba to take charge of a sugar factory in which their father was interested. The family made their home in recent years mainly in London and Paris.

YANKEES SUCCUMB TO BROWNS IN A LONG BATTLE PUNCTUATED WITH MANY THRILLS

BANISHED YANKEES GLORY IN REVENGE

CELEBRATE AS BROWNS WIN

After Tying Up Game in Ninth Col. Ruppert's Team Is Beaten in Twelfth Inning, 5 to 4.

The Yankee players who were placed on the bargain counter last Winter by Manager Miller Huggins came back to the Polo Grounds yesterday with the St. Louis Browns to haunt the man who auctioned them off. Urban Shocker, Les Nunamaker, and Joe Gedeon, who were part and parcel of the famous trade for Del Pratt, bobbed up dangerously in all nooks and corners of the matinée which oozed slowly through twelve innings, and at some time, well along in the gathering night, was won by St. Louis by a score of 5 to 4.

And don't think that the players showered on the Browns in that Pratt deal weren't tickled half to death. When the last man was out in the twelfth, Shocker jumped around like a schoolboy and threw his cap in the air. He rushed up to Nunamaker and shook his hand. Fritz Maisel also joined in the celebration with Gedeon and the rest, and it set Huggins to wondering whether or not he was a David Harum.

Large chunks of excitement were sprinkled throughout the game, the most emotional moment coming in the last of the ninth, when the Yanks tied up the score at 4 to 4. It was getting late and folks were getting uneasy. It was the biggest week-day crowd that ever turned out to see the St. Louis Browns, and when the score was tied there was a rush back to the grandstand seats again. All the telephone booths were jammed, with men waiting in line, to tell the missus to keep the beef stew on the fire. Yesterday's game holds the season's record for breaking up dinner engagements along Broadway.

Yankee Chatter Annoys Evans.

The game was full of snarls and arguments, and Umpire Bill Evans had to raise his voice in authority to the players of both clubs. There was a lot of verbal gas escaping from the Yankee bench in the ninth. and Evans detected the trainer of the Yankees, Doc Woods, spilling chatter right and left. The umpire ordered the Doc right out of the park, which was something entirely new in baseball. It is the first time in many a day that a poor innocent trainer ever got chased out of the orchard like a common ball player. Doc Woods is new with the Yanks this year, but he had to go. He picked up his bag containing the hammers, monkey wrenches, and saws with which he doctors up the injured Yank players, and hiked for the clubhouse.

The Yanks started after Shocker in the first inning with a rush and nearly had him standing on his head. Gilhooley banged a hot liner at Urban, and he could only knock it down, Gil reaching first safely. Peck sent Gilhooley to third with a single, and Baker slammed a two-base drive to left which scored both runners. Baker tried to stretch his slap into a triple, but he was nipped by the ancient and honorable James Austin at third. Pipp also got a hit in that inning, a single, and died for the third out trying to squeeze a double out of it.

Slim Love, Huggins's first choice against the Browns, was wild in the first and second. With two gone in the first he walked Sisler, and Sis stole second. He walked Joe Gedeon and Joe and Sissler pulled a double steal. He also walked Tim Hendryx, also a former Yank, and jammed the bases. Earl Smith then fanned and saved Slim a lot of embarrassment.

Shocker Glories in Revenge.

Love, aided by good support, kept the Browns from causing any trouble until the fourth. After Earl Smith had flied to Marsans in this round, Nunamaker walked and so did Gerber. Shocker then picked out this occasion to get even with Huggins for firing him by smashing a single to right centre which scored Nunamaker. Johnny Tobin hoisted a fly to Ping Bodie in left and Gerber raced for the plate. Umpire Evans first called him out, but when Truck Hannah dropped the ball he reversed his verdict and Gerber was safe and the score was tied.

Sisler opened the next inning with a double, and Ray Caldwell supplanted Love on the pitching hill. With the bases loaded and two gone Caldwell faced a trying ordeal with Gerber at the bat. He finally struck him out, and the old Polo Grounds echoed with cheers.

The Browns went to the front in the seventh. With one out Gedeon doubled to left and went to third on Demmitt's single. Smith rolled a bouncer to Peck, who chucked the ball home to get Gedeon, but Umpire Bill Evans decided that Hannah had overlooked the all important function of tagging the runner with the ball. Nunamaker then made Huggins wince by cracking a three-bagger to right centre, which scored Demmitt.

The Browns were pretty confident of the game then by a score of 4 to 2 until the last half of the ninth, when the Yanks showed that there was still a lot of fight left in them. After Marsans had died at first, Hannah walked and went to second on Shocker's balk. Caldwell skied to Demmitt and Gilhooley got a pass. Peck singled to left, scoring Hannah, and when Smith threw the ball wild returning it to the infield Gilhooley also scored with the tying run.

The Yanks had a good chance to win in the tenth, but Shocker mowed them down. St. Louis won in the twelfth, when Demmitt singled, advanced on Smith's sacrifice, and scored on Nunamaker's single to centre.

Coveleskie Wavers in 13th and Indians Are Beaten, 3 to 2.

PHILADELPHIA, May 15.—Coveleskie weakened in the thirteenth inning today, after Cleveland had scored a run in the first half of the inning, and Philadelphia won, 3 to 2. With one out, Captain Oldring hit a single, then Coveleskie passed both Jamieson and Kopp.

With the bases filled, Walker hit sharply to Halt, who made a great one-hand stop, and touched out Jamieson on the base line, but stumbled and could not complete a double play. Oldring scored the tying run, and Burns's third hit, a single to left, scored Kopp with the winning run.

SENATORS WIN IN 18TH.

Chicago Loses Protracted and Errorless Contest by 1 to 0.

WASHINGTON, May 15. — Walter Johnson and Cy Williams battled eighteen innings here today before Washington got a 1 to 0 decision over Chicago in the first game of the series. Johnson helped win his victory with a long single which put Ainsmith on third from where Williams scored the catcher with a wild pitch.

OLIVER TEBEAU A SUICIDE.

Former Baseball Manager, Despondent Over Illness, Shoots Himself.

ST. LOUIS, May, 15.—Oliver P. Tebeau, who in the early days of the National League was manager and first baseman of the Cleveland Club, shot and killed himself here today, following a period of illness.

Tebeau managed the Cleveland Club for several years, and when its franchise was moved to St. Louis came here and for a year piloted the local club. He was succeeded by John J. McGraw, now of the New York Nationals.

REDS ADD GIANTS TO THEIR STRING

Special to The New York Times.

CINCINNATI, Ohio, May 15.—The Giants were the unwilling victims of the Reds' sixth consecutive victory today, losing the opening game of the series to Matty's men, 3 to 2. Rube Benton allowed only five hits, while the Giants nicked Schneider and Eller for ten blows. But the Reds were more successful in bunching their safeties, and an error by Heinie Zimmerman figured in the scoring of one of Cincinnati's runs.

Schneider, who started the game for the Reds, was injured in the third inning, after the Giants had reached him for two runs. Eller, who finished the game, was very effective.

McGraw's men were the first to score. In the third inning Kauff singled to centre and stole second. Burns crashed one past Groh, the ball bounding off the wall of the grandstand in left field, scoring Kauff. Groh and Blackburne pursued the pellet, leaving third base uncovered, and Burns, quick to note this, rounded second and dashed for the far corner.

Schneider ran over to third and took a throw from Groh, and as Burns slid into the bag Schneider attempted to put the ball on him. He was unsuccessful, and in addition received a painful bruise on his right arm, which necessitated his retirement from the pastime. With Eller in the box, Burns made a daring steal of home. Eller allowed only six scattered hits during the remainder of the game. The Giants had him in one or two bad holes, but he emerged from them with very little trouble.

Sherwood Magee singled to right and advanced to second on Griffith's sacrifice. Neale beat out a slow roller past Zimmerman, and Magee scored when Zimmerman, in his eagerness to execute a double play, fumbled Blackburne's grounder.

Benton started the eighth by walking Groh. Lee Magee's sacrifice put little Heinie on second, whence he scored on Roush's double to left centre. Roush attempted to stretch the hit into a triple, but was cut down at third on Fletcher's fine relay of Burns's throw to Zimmerman. However, the damage was already done.

OPERATE ON LARRY DOYLE.

Captain of Giants Ill at Post-Graduate Hospital.

It was learned yesterday that Larry Doyle, captain and second baseman of the Giants, who has not been with the team for a number of days, was admitted to the New York Post-Graduate Hospital Tuesday, and was operated upon that night for intestinal trouble. His condition yesterday was reported as favorable.

Doyle has not been with the Giants since the recent series at Boston. When he did not play in the game of May 6 it was said that he was suffering from a mild attack of malaria, and that he would probably return to the lineup within a few days. He came back to New York with the club on Wednesday, May 7, and when the team started out on the first Western invasion on May 10 Doyle remained here. It had been supposed until yesterday's announcement of the operation that the veteran player was rapidly recovering from his supposedly minor affliction. No complications are anticpated by the attendant physicans.

ROBINS FALL UPON COOPER.

Assail Pirate Pitcher Who Shut Out Giant, and Win, 5 to 1.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURGH, Penn., May 15.—The fact that Wilbur Cooper shut out the New York Giants last Saturday had no terrors for the Dodgers today, and after he had held them for four innings without a hit, they suddenly let loose, and in the next five innings smashed out seven singles and two triples, all of which tallied five runs, more than enough to win. The Pirates could only garner one little tally off Rube Marquard.

That was by his old team mate, George Cutshaw, who singled to centre in the second inning, stole second, and scored on King's hot shot to right field. The Pirates got a hit in each of the first five innings, but after the fifth the Rube was invincible and sent the Buccaneers back to the bench as fast as they came up.

ARMY NINE ON A RAMPAGE.

Oliphant Leads Attack That Beats Springfield Y. M. C. A. College.

Special to The New York Times.

WEST POINT, N. Y., May 15.—Contrary to expectations Elmer Oliphant, star athlete and Captain of the army baseball nine, reappeared in togs today and took his place in left field. The other upper classmen who have been absent for the last two games, due to the intensive war work incident to the premature graduation next month, also got back into the game.

As a result Oliphant and his teammates walloped Springfield Y. M. C. A. College 11 to 1. Oliphant's record at the bat was four safe drives in five times up. He scored three runs and batted in two more. One of his drives was for the circuit with two men on bases. Jones pitched airtight ball for the Army.

PREAKNESS SHARED BY EAST AND WEST

PIMLICO, Md., May 15. — More than 30,000 persons saw three-year-olds representing Eastern and Western sportsmen divide the honors in the running of the Preakness Stakes here today, for which $30,000 was given in added money by the Maryland Jockey Club. The imported colt, War Cloud, redeemed his defeat in the Kentucky Derby by placing the first division to the credit of A. K. Macomber, while in the second half Jack Hare, Jr., carried the colors of W. E. Applegate to victory. Both horses won with comparative ease, but the Western colt had a greater margain at the finish than did War Cloud.

Because of his victories as a two-year-old, War Cloud had to concede weight to the rest of the field of ten, picking up 110 pounds to 107 carried by Lanius. The latter failed to show the brilliant form expected of him and at the finish was soundly beaten for second place by Sunny Slope, a rank outsider, owned by William Martin. There were four moneys in each of the races and Johren one of the Whitney entry, accounted for the minor position, four lengths behind Lanius.

War Cloud was handled with extreme confidence by Johnny Loftus, and the clever jockey took his time in allowing his mount to find his feet. While the Macomber crack was being rated along in third place, Wilfred Viau's George Starr was setting the pace, with Harry Payne Whitney's Flags in close attendance, half a dozen lengths in front of War Cloud. After being held in restraint for the first half mile War Cloud was allowed to move up to his field and at three-quarters he was leading by half a length.

Sunny Slope, meantime, had followed the rush of War Cloud and was in second place, with Flags third. From that point to the finish Loftus, on War Cloud, just kept his eye on Callahan, who had the mount on the outsider, and the pair drew clear away from the rest of the field. Sunny Slope struggled along gamely, but there was no overtaking the Macomber champion, and War Cloud crossed the line with three-quarters of a length to spare. Lanius came with a rush in the final eighth and disposed of Johren, which just nosed out Johren for fourth money. The time of the race was 1:53 3-5.

Jack Hare, Jr.'s splendid form was the cause of the field in the second division being reduced to half a dozen, and the Western son of Marathon was made an odds on favorite, with S. Ross's The Porter next in demand. Jack O'Hare, Jr., was allowed to go to the front by his rider, Peak, and never was in danger of being caught. He rated along in front of The Porter, always with a safe advantage of from two to three lengths. Kummer was hustling The Porter along and he held second place easily all the way. It took very little urging to land him a winner by two lengths, while The Porter was six lengths in front of A. Neal's Kate Bright, which outgamed J. E. Widener's Trompe La Mort for third money.

The summaries:

FIRST RACE.—Steeplechase, for 4-year-olds and upward, two miles. Superhuman, 150 pounds, (Blake,) $12.70, $8, and $5.50, won; New Haven, 152, (Crawford,) $7.20 and $4.10, second; Sixty-four, 152, (F. Williams,) $5, third. Time—3:56 2-5. Repentant, Garter, The Carmet, Infidel 2d, Porin, Melos, Turmoil, King Simon, Rhomb, and Saturn also ran.

RACING BEGINS HERE TODAY.

The local racing season of 1918 will begin this afternoon at the Jamaica track and an excellent card of six races has been arranged by the Metropolitan Jockey Club for the enjoyment of New York racegoers. Even though there will be a conflict with Maryland racing until after the Pimlico meeting ends tomorrow the local association has not suffered in the matter of entries and every event is well filled, while a field of ten good sprinters is named for the Paumonok Handicap, the feature of the program.

A shipment of 200 thoroughbreds arrived from Pimlico on Monday, which brought the total of horses on the Long Island track up to more than 2,000. A cold Winter and fine Spring favored the racers and most of them are wound up for the coming campaign, which will continue in New York State until the end of September. The rain of Tuesday was all that was needed to put the track in first-class condition and with fine weather today the going will be fast.

Several of the heavily weighted horses have declined the allotments in the Paumonok, which is a sprint of six furlongs. This leaves R. T. Wilson, Jr.'s, Campfire, the champion two-year-old of 1916, at the head of the list with 123 pounds. Though Campfire failed as a distance performer he won the Toboggan Handicap at six furlongs as a three-year-old, and there is no reason why he should not be in the front flight today. James Butler's old campaigner High Noon and A. K. Macomber's Hank O'Day are weighted at 120 pounds, and R. F. Carman's Startling, fresh from Pimlico, is in with 110—the same weight allotted to Old Koenig. The light weights are mostly three-year-olds, making their first start against older horses.

The time schedule of previous years will be adhered to, the first race being set for 2:30. Trains will be run from the Pennsylvania and Flatbush stations, beginning at 12:30 and at intervals until 1:55.

FIRST RACE.—For two-year-olds, selling, five furlongs. War Zone, (imp.,) 116 pounds; Harry M. THOROUGHBREDS FOR U. S.

Jockey Club Gives Four to Government for Remount Purposes.

WASHINGTON, May 15.—Active steps toward the improvement of the cavalry remount have been taken by the Federal authorities, who have asked The Jockey Club of New York for four thoroughbred stallions. In response to the request, which was made by the Department of Agriculture, through its Bureau of Animal Husbandry, the turf leaders have placed six horses at the disposal of the Government from which a selection will be made.

All of the stallions offered have raced with success, possess size, bone, and conformation, and have splendid dispositions. All are stake winners, and with the exception of Textile, which is a chestnut, are bays or browns, the ideal color for troop horses. The horses, their date of birth, and breeding follow:

Four of the six will be selected by H. H. Reese, who has had charge of the Front Royal, Virginia, experimental station, where thoroughbred and standard-bred sires have been located for some years. They will be distributed throughout the West at Fort Sill and other remount stations, where they will be mated with mares of quality, which have been purchased by officers of the remount division of the United States Army within the last year. These purchases aggregate 1,475 to date, and one-third of them will be sent to Front Royal.

The experience of foreign Governments and the experiments at Front Royal, where sires of blood such as Henry of Navarre and Octagon, which were donated to the Government by Major August Belmont, have proved beyond a doubt the merits of the thoroughbred as a top-cross. In addition there was the growing necessity for renewing the sadly depleted supply of remounts for the American troops abroad to serve as a spur at this time.

Cochran Defeats Mayer Twice.

Welker Cochran won both games in the 18.2 balkline match with Joseph Mayer, which began at Maurice Daly's Seventh Avenue Academy yesterday. In the afternoon Cochran ran out his string of 300 while Mayer was getting 34. The former's average was exactly 30, and his best run was 79. In the evening game Mayer did a bit better, clustering together 127 points while Cochran was getting 300. Cochran's best run in the evening was 165, and his average was 33 3-9.

ONE-ARMED PLAYER GAINS SEMI-FINALS

H. R. Hathaway Triumphs Over J. S. O'Boyle in Harlem Tennis Tourney.

By another remarkable demonstration of tennis skill, Harrison R. Hathaway, the one-armed player who has been the sensation of the Harlem open tennis tournament, advanced to the semi-final round of the singles event yesterday when he vanquished no less formidable a rival than the former Georgetown player, J. S. O'Boyle. The score of the match was 6—0, 3—6, 6—3. Hathaway's victory over Sigmund Spaeth in an earlier round stamped him as a player of merit, but it was hardly anticipated that he would be able to earn a decision over such an accomplished racquet wielder as O'Boyle.

The great resourcefulness of Hathaway's play was shown throughout the contest. With a pronounced tendency toward the net position, he forced the play at the barrier from the outset, and O'Boyle was completely routed in the first clash, failing to get a single game in the opening set. It was at once apparent that Hathaway possessed a clever overhead game, and his smashing was a telling factor in the match. He volleyed sharply and the placements which he was continually shooting into his opponent's territory forced O'Boyle to play defensively for the greater part of the time.

O'Boyle, with one set against him, struggled bravely against the sturdy play of his rival in the second set, and succeeded in gaining the laurels, but he could not maintain the pace through the next set, and Hathaway forged ahead and won because of wealth of brilliant tennis.

The doubles tournament started yesterday, but it was rather an unimpressive beginning for this part of the tournament, as only three matches were played and two of those went by the default route. The contest that was actually played out was a second round encounter which Ingo Hartman and Elliott Binzen experienced little difficulty in winning from Iler and Schmidt at 6—1, 6—1.

The summaries:

SINGLES.—Fourth Round—Harrison R. Hathaway defeated J. S. O'Boyle, 6—0, 3—6, 6—3.

DOUBLES.—First Round—Iler and Schmidt won from Mersereau and partner by default; Ingo Hartman and Elliott Binzen won from S. Spaeth and partner by default.

Second Round—Hartman and Binzen defeated Iler and Schmidt, 6—1, 6—1.

SAILORS HAVE FIELD DAY.

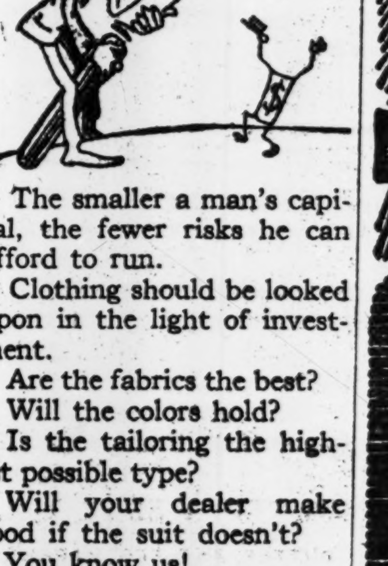
N. Y. A. C. Conducts Athletic Contests at Pelham Bay Station.

Sailors of Uncle Sam in training at the Pelham Bay Naval Training Station had an abundance of fun, plenty of entertainment and considerable exercise yesterday in a series of track and field competitions held at the station by the New York Athletic Club. The field day was another step in the program of the Mercury Foot organization to furnish relaxation for the nation's fighters in training. Preceding the games there was a review and drill directed by Captain Franklin, which was witnessed by Admiral Grassi of the French Navy.

Sailor-athletes of the Third Regiment showed superiority, and if there had been a point score, would have won it easily. They finished first in four of the nine events. R. L. Kruser was the most successful competitor, winning two prizes, first in the equipment race, and third in the 100-yard handicap event. In addition, he was a member of the winning team in the medicine ball relay.

The two sprinting events attracted the biggest entries, eighty starting in the novice century, while about forty tried for prizes in the handicap dash. Both events were well contested and resulted in close finishes.

In the half-mile handicap two athletes of prominence in metropolitan circles were among the first three to finish. They were Joe Giorgio, the former Paulist A. C. distance runner, the winner, who carried the Second Regiment the former Millrose A. A. harrier, who emblem to victory, and Charlie Pores, finished third. Pores is a member of the First Regiment. He started from scratch, while Giorgia had an allowance of eight yards.



The smaller a man's capital, the fewer risks he can afford to run.

THE COTTON MARKET

Prices Decline from 47 to 60 Points Net on Favorable Weather Report.

The local cotton market continues to be primarily a weather market. Yesterday's Government weather report was unexpectedly favorable, giving the most optimistic view of new crop prospects that has yet emanated from official sources. This was all, and more than all that was needed to inspire local traders to sell, and prices went down accordingly. At the bottom of the swing prices were low enough to tempt considerable bargain-hunting by trade and Liverpool representatives, but this was only supplementary to short covering which checked the decline at a steady closing, with prices off from 47 to 60 points net.

The opening was off from 3 to 6 points, and the market declined an average of nearly 40 points further, under selling from all around the ring, before the rally on covering and evening-up which preceded the appearance of the weather summary. Practically all interests, local, Wall Street, Western, Southern, and Liverpool, promptly threw fresh selling orders into the ring in a general scramble which forced October down to 24 cents flat, only a few points from the low level of the current movement. It was at this point, however, that the new crop months, and October particularly, became the object of bargain-taking by domestic trade representatives, and this with the last-hour realizing steadied the market 10 or 20 points up from the bottom.

The trade is now looking for the May 25 condition and acreage report, confident of favorable prospects in both respects. Southern spot markets yesterday were unchanged to 50 points lower, but are still far above parity with local quotations.

Yesterday's quotations follow:

BUTTER AND EGG MARKET.

BUTTER.—Receipts yesterday, 8,526 packages. Feeling barely steady. High grades of fresh creamery are not over plenty, but the secondary qualities are beginning to accumulate a little, and there is some anxiety to sell. The range of values, however, is about the same as previously reported. Creamery, higher scoring than extras, a lb., 47@47½c; extras, (92 score,) 46¼@46½c; firsts, (88 to 91 score,) 43½@46c; seconds, (83 to 87 score,) 38½@42½c; thirds, 35@37½c; creamery, unsalted, higher than extras, 49@49½c; extras, 48@48½c; firsts, 44½@47½c; seconds, 41@44c; State Dairy, tubs, finest, 46@46½c; good to prime, 43@45½c; common to fair, 34@36c; renovated, extras, 39@40c; firsts, 38@38½c; lower grades, 34@36c; imitation creamery, firsts, 35@35½; ladles, current make, firsts, 33@34c; seconds, 31½@32c; lower grades, 30@31c; packing stock, current make, No. 1, 31½@32c; No. 2, 30@30½c; lower grades, 27@29½c.

EGGS.—32,768 cases. Arrivals are showing considerable increase as compared with last week, trade is quiet and the market is in unsettled and generally weak condition. There is a small proportion of strictly fine Northern goods showing good body, and most receivers report some call for them at sustained prices; buyers are very critical. Average eggs are offering at some decline, and the average of sales in the market is considerably lower. A good deal of Southern stock is offering in range of 33½@34½c, and good useful qualities of Western at 35@35½c, with only very prime qualities reaching the higher quotation. Nearby white eggs are plentiful. The few selected lots of large chalk white hennery eggs coming are still working out at sustained prices, but only a small proportion of the supply reaches our top figure, the greater part of the sales ranging from 38@41c. Fresh gathered extras, a dozen, 38@38½c; storage packed firsts, 37@37½c; regular packed, extra firsts, 37@37½c; regular packed, firsts, 35@36½c; seconds and poorer, 33@34½c; fresh gathered, dirties, No. 1 storage packed, 33@33½c; No. 1 regular packed, 32½@33c; No. 2 and poorer, 31@32c; fresh gathered checks, good to choice, dry, 30@31½c; under grades, 25@29c; State Pennsylvania and nearby Western hennery whites, fine to fancy, 40@42c; ordinary to fine, 38@40c; Western and Southern, gathered whites, 36½@38c; State Pennsylvania and nearby hennery browns, 39@40c; gathered brown and mixed colors, 36@37½c; duck eggs, 29@45c.

UNITED STATES GOVT. BONDS

Inasmuch as most of the trading in the older issues of United States Government bonds is done over the counter, and not on the Stock Exchange, THE TIMES gives the following quotations, obtained from bond dealers:

CONSOLIDATED EXCHANGE

The market on the Consolidated Stock Exchange yesterday closed very strong, active, and broad. In the final hour of trading the feature was the advance of Baldwin Locomotive. Under its spirited advance the other equipment shares moved upward. Steel shares, which were rather irregular in movement, closed strong. The activity in these two groups practically monopolized the trading in the late afternoon.

COMMODITIES MARKETS

WHEAT.

Reports on the condition of the new wheat crop continue most encouraging. The heavy rains which recently occurred throughout a large part of the Winter wheat belt are believed to have supplied sufficient moisture to carry the crop pretty close to maturity. The plant is unusually vigorous and promises an abundant yield.

RYE.

The local rye market was easy, with prices 5c lower at $2.11, cost and freight New York. Minneapolis was down 5c at $2.03, or just $1 below the high point of the season.

CORN.

The corn market was again feverish and, after showing early weakness, prices rallied and closed steady at ¼c decline to ⅛c net advance. In the local cash market kiln-dried No. 3 yellow was quoted at $1.60; No. 4 yellow, $1.50 cost, insurance, and freight New York.

OATS.

The technical position of the oats market was again the principal dominating factor and prices closed firm with net gains of ⅝c to 1⅛c on covering. The market was apparently in an oversold position. This applied not only to May, which has caused a good deal of concern of late, but also to July. The local cash market was dull and irregular; natural quoted at 83½c to 85c; clipped white at 84½c to 88c, all elevator.

PROVISIONS.

The provision market showed a further decline under liquidation prompted by a decline in the hog market and on the recent statement by the Food Administration that conditions in regard to supplies do not justify a higher level of values. Shorts covered on the decline, however, and prices experienced quite a good rally, especially for lard, which closed with moderate net gains. Receipts of hogs at Chicago were 21,000, estimated for Thursday, 27,000; Kansas City received 18,000 and Omaha 10,000 hogs.

COFFEE.

The coffee market opened at a 3-point decline, and later showed further weakness under a little outside liquidation, and, in the absence of demand, final prices showed net losses of 4 to 6 points, with only a moderate day's business. The local spot market was again reported neglected and nominally unchanged. Range of prices:

SUGAR.

Consumers of refined sugar are not purchasing supplies in the volume that was expected with the advent of the small fruit crop, and while refiners' allotments to brokers are only moderate at the present time, they have been sufficient for immediate requirements. The International Sugar Committee reported purchases of 10,500 bags Cubas at 4.985c, cost and freight, and 4,800 tons Porto Ricos, at 6.005c, cost, insurance, and freight, both May shipment.

War Activities and Public Utility Companies

The successful prosecution of the war depends to a considerable extent on the quality of the services rendered by public utility corporations. The war has emphasized the necessity of developing public utilities, as they not only supply gas, electricity and transportation, indispensable in times of peace, but in addition enable plants now operating for the Government to run at maximum efficiency.

Offerings of Public Utility Securities will be supplied on request.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Baldwin Leads New Advance in Active List—Liberty Bonds Recover.

In some respects yesterday's stock market outdid all the previous sessions since the inauguration of the highly speculative trading, with advances running from 1 to nearly 10 points and a better distribution of activity as between the rails and industrials. Opening with bullish enthusiasm still running high, the early part of the day was featured by further gains in some of the lower priced rails, which it is supposed will benefit relatively more by rate increases the Administration is understood to favor. As soon, however, as the professional operators were satisfied that the demonstration in this department had gone about as far as it should on the rate increase proposal, they returned to the industrials figuring in Government business, and the other side of the market moved forward rapidly until late afternoon, when selling checked the advance without bringing about material reactions.

One issue which did not get into its stride until yesterday and then refused to be halted was Baldwin Locomotive, which climbed with unusual rapidity under the skillful guidance of a newly formed pool that was reported to have been formed on the expectation of an early announcement of the allotment of large war business. Baldwin came out on the ticker at 97 after the close of the market and closed at the top price, with a net advance of 9½ points. Almost as much in demand, though moving upward more gradually, were Westinghouse, People's Gas, and Midvale Steel. Nearly all of the leading speculative stocks scored substantial gains, Steel getting back more than 2 points from its low of the day and closing with a net gain of 1⅛, with Colorado Fuel and Iron up 4; Republic up 2, and Gulf States Steel, selling ex-dividend, up 5. An exception was supplied by Distillers, which fluctuated uncertainly and closed slightly lower.

There was a better tone in the bond market, with the Liberty issues showing a stronger tendency, which carried the new 4¼s back across 98. Dealers are convinced by the number and nature of inquiries that, with the pressure under which bonds were held during the campaign to sell the last Government loan removed, a resumption of investment buying will be seen. The railroad issues have come into greater favor since the dissemination of the report that Mr. McAdoo favors an increase in rates which will more than cover all additional costs of operation.

The continuation of great activity in the stock market resulting in sales of almost a million and a quarter shares brought about a higher price for call loans, most of the borrowing being done yesterday at 6 per cent. The second weekly bulletin of crop conditions to appear since the statement of condition on May 1 was as favorable as the first. Good weather in all of the important crop districts has done much to improve the outlook for a very large increase in this year's wheat yield. The Iron Age estimates that the new gun and projectile plant to be built by the Steel Corporation will mean an expenditure of more than $60,000,000 for construction, and additional expenditures must be made on a similar scale for the Government works to be built by the Midvale Company.

LONDON MARKET IS FIRM.

Traders Make Frequent Demands for American Securities.

LONDON, May 15.—The stock market was firm today. Gilt edge securities were in steady demand. Home rails were wanted and the supply was short.

Dealings in American stocks were more frequent. There was a good inquiry for Japanese issues. Another £260,000 of bonds was canceled. Brazilians were stronger in sympathy with the rise in exchange. Portuguese securities improved on the favorable economic outlook in Portugal. Tin mining shares were buoyant. Shipping stocks were stronger.

Money was in better demand. Discounts were slack.

Trading Dull on Paris Bourse.

PARIS, May 15.—Trading was dull on the Bourse today. Three per cent. rentes, 58 francs 75 centimes for cash. Exchange on London, 27 francs 15¼ centimes. Five per cent. loan, 88 francs 70 centimes.

MONEY AND EXCHANGE.

Call Loans Renewed at 6%—All Industrial Time Loans Bring 6%.

Although the opening rate for call money yesterday was 5 per cent., most transactions were put through at 6 per cent., which was also the renewal rate. The closing quotation was 5 per cent. The market showed a harder tendency by reason of the demands made upon the banks by the Government in connection with war loan deposits. The rate for time loans secured by industrial collateral was 6 per cent., while for loans up to ninety days secured by mixed collateral, 5¾ to 6 per cent. was quoted.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

Baldwin Makes Unusual Rise.

More than half the outstanding common stock of the Baldwin Locomotive Company was turned over in yesterday's market. Under a rush of buying orders so heavy as this an extraordinary advance might be expected, but, at that, the day's net gain of 9½ points brought a surprise to the traders hovering over the ticker in commission houses. A big pool was active in Baldwin, and it was learned that some of the members were told on Friday afternoon that a big move could be expected for the reason that the company would shortly receive orders from Government sources for fully $124,000,000 of locomotives and war munitions. The upward swing appeared to be accelerated also by dispatches from Philadelphia predicting that the shares would be put on a dividend basis shortly. The Directors meet before the end of the month.

A Puzzling Market in Steel.

The course of yesterday's market in Steel puzzled many tape readers. After the advance from 110 to 111⅝ in the morning hours there were plenty of offerings, which were absorbed with a fair degree of ease, and whenever the supply of stock appeared to contract the quotation made numerous quick spurts forward. Traders who devote their talents to the pursuit of price tendencies said they could not persuade themselves whether short sellers were chiefly responsible for the steady output of Steel or whether the pressure reflected distribution by speculators who had bought some days ago. The strong close indicated that buyers in the last hour were more than ready to take up the offerings of that period.

Republic Steel Dividend.

Declaration of the regular quarterly dividend on Republic Iron and Steel common stock yesterday put a quietus on rumors heard of late that an extra distribution would probably be considered by the Directors. The announcement appeared in the Street late in the day but did not prevent the stock closing close to the top for a 2-point gain.

Doubters Still Remain.

The evidence of million-share days and the upward movement of stocks and many bonds has by no means persuaded all Wall Street brokers that a bull market is under way. Among the doubters are those who fear that additional taxation plans may be discussed at Washington before long in a way to discourage buying of industrial and mining stocks.

Liberty Bonds Advance.

Trading in Liberty Loan bonds on the Stock Exchange yesterday was lighter in volume than on Tuesday, but the market was strong and the closing quotations for the 4s and the 4¼s were the highest of the day. The 4¼ per cent. bonds of the Third Loan sold up to 98.12, an advance of .60 compared with the low record established Tuesday and a net gain of .32 for the day. The "second fours" changed hands at 95.28, a net gain of .30, while the so-called "conversion fours" sold at 95.48, a net gain of .38. The 3½s were quoted at 99, but closed at 98.96. In some quarters it was suggested that the Secretary of the Treasury was supporting the market by the use of the sinking fund, but confirmation of the report was of course unobtainable, and, in fact, some bankers did not credit it. It is generally understood that in order to make the operations of the sinking fund effective it is requisite that secrecy be observed.

Liberty Bonds at Auction.

For the first time yesterday the auction sales of securities included a block of Liberty Loan bonds. A sale of $64,300 worth of Second 4s was made at 94.92.

New York City's Banking Power.

The City of New York has 128 commercial banking institutions with total resources of approximately $7,150,000,000, and aggregate deposits of about $5,865,000,000. Of the 128 institutions, 51 are national banks, with resources of slightly more than $3,702,000,000; 32 trust companies, with resources of $2,704,000,000, and 45 State banks, having resources of about $653,000,000.

Holding Cotton for Profit.

Local cotton men were inclined to be amused yesterday at a report that South Carolina farmers had pledged themselves, at a meeting, to hold their cotton for a price of 35 cents a pound. "Nobody prevented those fellows from selling their cotton when they could have obtained 35 cents for it," said one local dealer, "but they wanted to hog all they could. Holding back cotton to squeeze the maximum profit out of it, when a famine seemed likely, was something the consumer had a right to get sore about, but now that a good carry-over is assured, such a declaration is merely laughable. The sooner those fellows wake up and take the good price and good profit that is still open to them the better for them. We shan't worry if they don't, however, for they can hurt no one but themselves."

No Longer Blaming Speculators.

One gratifying feature of the decided drop in cotton prices on the local market in the last two days, has been the comparative absence of the cry that "bear operators," and particularly one celebrated plunger, were responsible for the falling market, which was rather persistent during the big declines of mid-April. Apparently even the stubbornest bulls are now willing to admit that 36-cent cotton was higher than market conditions permanently justified, and that there was something more behind the decline of $50 a bale than "So-and-so pulling 50,000 bales out of his hat," as one indignant dealer described the big selling wave a month ago.

Dividends and Surplus.

A Director of one of the prosperous shipping companies yesterday was discussing the question of dividend disbursements, apropos of some handsome dividend declarations recently made in the shipping industry. "Many of the big shipping men," he remarked, "were brought up in the atmosphere of the time when the shipping industry in this country was still—as for that matter it is now to a considerable extent—a very personal thing, when each company or line was practically the private property of one man or at most a little, very exclusive partnership. They would as soon discuss their business affairs with the public as their family affairs—in fact they placed them in the same category. In the same way men brought up in that school really seem to hate to pay dividends. Their ideal is stability and solidity—a fine ideal, but they carry it so far as almost to make a fetich of the surplus account. My idea is, however, that such methods don't apply to a corporation, in the shipping business or anywhere else, whose stock is widely held. To pile up the surplus until it is bigger than the outstanding capitalization is an injustice to the stockholders."

Express Officials in Doubt.

The jubilation with which the prospect of a plump increase in railroad rates, even though the Government is the sole immediate beneficiary, was received in Wall Street yesterday inspired some officials of express companies to melancholy reflections. It is practically settled now that they are to be merged under Government auspices, but one of them remarked yesterday that if the Government neither guaranteed their earnings, as in the case of the railroads, nor raised their rates, they were wondering how much, at the present rate at which costs are rising, there would be left to merge.

BIG GUN WORKS ADD TO STEEL DEMANDS

Will Bring Upon Market Orders for Heavy Tonnage of Structural Material.

$50,000,000 FOR BUILDING

Ordnance Not Expected to be Turned Out by the Steel Corporation for Eighteen Months.

Steel trade reports this week indicate that the construction of the great Government gun works near Pittsburgh will bring upon the market in due course orders for a heavy tonnage of structural material which was not included in the calculations of manufacturers until a few days ago. In addition to this plant many thousands of tons more will be needed for the gun works to be built by the Midvale Steel and Ordnance Company for the Government, news of which appeared yesterday. It is believed in steel-making circles that these projects were the ones referred to by J. Leonard Replogle, Director of Steel Supply, before the meeting of steel men last month, when he said that certain Government plans in contemplation were still in a confidential stage.

Guns will not be turned out of the works to be built by the Steel Corporation for eighteen months, according to The Iron Age, but in the meantime between $60,000,000 and $70,000,000 will be expended in construction. As the days pass the size of the Government's war program as affecting steel products grows rapidly.

"Ship plate and shell steel programs have been expanded in the last week," The Iron Age states. "In addition to 4,000,000 tons of shell steel at first scheduled for this year, 1,250,000 tons are now figured on to carry the Government and its allies up to April 1. Ship plate requirements for 1918 are now put at 1,450,000 tons, and those for 1919 at 1,850,000 tons. With plate mills that will be completed in 1918, capacity of all kinds of plates by the end of the year will exceed 7,500,000 tons.

"Steel capacity in all lines exists in plenty, but it is the spectre of short fuel supply that is behind all the predictions of long-continued monopoly of steel output by the Government. Ingot production in April was at the yearly rate of 43,000,000 tons. A year at that rate would mean a very considerable surplus above war needs, direct and indirect.

"Material for the 100,000 cars the Government has bought has not been placed and more delays are ahead. It was planned to have steel wheels for 55,000 cars, but to save steel cast-iron wheels will be used for many of these. Bar iron makers have asked that arch-bar trucks be specified for a part of the cars, giving them some tonnage that would otherwise be steel.

"Bids have been asked for 300,000 axles for the new cars. All told 400,000 will be needed. No price has been fixed as yet for axles, but the trade belives the Railroad Administration does not expect to pay more than 4.25 cents per pound or about $15 per ton below the basis of late sales. Signs point to an award on makers' cost figures with an estimated margin of profit, as with the car contracts, if the bids are not deemed low enough."

The Iron Trade Review says that producers have adjusted themselves to the view that at least six full months of mill operations lie ahead on Government business, and adds:

"Despite all that is being said, however, as to the insufficiency of the iron and steel supply for Government requirements, the authoritative opinion of the industry is that not only will there be enough for war purposes, but in time some will be left over for commercial use. The needs of the allied Governments are surprisingly large in shell bars. Seven hundred and fifty thousand tons each, it is stated, will be needed at an early date for England, France, and Italy. The British continue to call for an unexpectedly large tonnage of plates, shell steel, rails, &c."

Pullmans Making 11,500 Cars.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Ill., May 15.—The closing of a Government order for 8,000 freight cars brings the Pullman Company's total orders on hand to 11,000 freight and 500 passenger cars and insures continued operation of its freight car manufacturing plant for about ten months. In addition to car orders the company is working on shells.

MORE TIME TO FILE REPORT.

Brokers Have Until June 1 to Turn in Registry Returns.

Stock brokers and members of all Stock and Produce Exchanges have received an extension of time for filing their registry returns to the Internal Revenue Bureau of the Treasury Department at the Custom House, from May 15 to June 1. This extension is granted at the request of many brokers. Francis M. Riley, Special Agent of Internal Revenue, in announcing the extension, said:

"The returns, including the returns on the borrowed and loaned shares and all transactions on the various Stock and Produce Exchanges, are required to be filed in this office on or before the 15th of the month following the month of the transactions. These returns are now due, but owing to the urgent appeals of many brokers for extension of time for filing the returns, their petition was forwarded to the department in Washington with the result that their request was granted by the commissioner of Internal Revenue, who has extended the time for filing the returns to June 1, 1918, and that date is fixed as the limit for making these returns. No further indulgence will be granted after June 1, 1918."

Yesterday was the final day for the interest deduction of 3 per cent. on advanced payments of income and excess profits taxes, and many individual and corporation taxpayers settled with the Government for the amounts due under the 1917 tax assessment.

PLANS FOR PETROLEUM CO.

Metropolitan Stockholders to be Asked to Give Small Sum.

The two stockholders' committees of the Metropolitan Petroleum Corporation are expected to merge their interests shortly, and thereafter the single unit is to co-operate with the Directors in working out the company's affairs. It was learned yesterday that the committees control more than a majority of the outstanding shares, and the owners of the balance will be asked to deposit their holdings with the stock already at the direction of the committees.

The stockholders who elect to co-operate with the committee members in negotiations with the Island Oil and Transport interests over certain oil lands in Mexico will be asked to contribute not more than 10 cents a share of stock to meet expenses. Committee members yesterday said that this was to be looked upon more in the nature of united contribution for the purpose of getting the company on its feet than as an assessment.

Boston Brokerage Firm Assigns.

BOSTON, May 15.—The brokerage firm of Codman, Fletcher & Co., members of the Boston and New York Stock Exchanges, made an assignment today for the benefit of creditors. A. B. Brickley, who was named as assignee, said the liabilities would probably amount to $500,000 and the assets to $300,000. The proceeds of the Exchange memberships, he stated, were expected to cover all the obligations with other brokers.

HIGHEST BIDDER GETS PIER 69 LEASE TODAY

Controversy Over Property on North River Will Be Settled at Auction.

BID OF $75,000 EXPECTED

Sale Will Be Held in Accordance with Justice Greenbaum's Ruling—City's Policy Reversed.

The lease of Pier 69, North River, will be put up at public auction at 10 o'clock this morning and sold to the highest bidder. The sale is scheduled to take place at the Dock Department offices, Pier A, North River, and Dock Commissioner Murray Hulbert will be the auctioneer. The Commissioner has chosen this manner in which to settle the controversy over the leasing of the pier, which has been before the Sinking Fund Commission and in the courts since April 10.

The sale will be in accordance with the ruling of Supreme Court Justice Greenbaum that no bid lower than $35,000 must be received. Several offers in excess of this amount have already been made to the Dock Commissioner, and it is probable that the lease will not be sold for less than $75,000. In fact, the James Auditore Company, stevedores of Brooklyn, stated yesterday that it was willing to pay this amount for the dock privilege. The company has already offered $40,000 for the lease, but the Bristol City Line, the present lessee, has offered $41,000.

Pier 69 is the one which Dock Commissioner Hulbert recommended that the Sinking fund Commission lease to the Hudson Dock and Terminal Corporation for $25,000, when the question came before the Sinking Fund Commission on April 10. The commission voted to award the lease to the Hudson company, although the Bristol City Line, holding company for the Occident Dock Company, had offered $30,000. When the lease went to the former concern the Bristol company brought injunction proceedings, and Supreme Court Justice Greenbaum appointed a referee to hear the facts in the case. The city took an appeal from the decision, and while the case is pending in the Appellate Division Justice Greenbaum granted a modification of his order to allow the pier to be sold at public auction, providing that no offer below $35,000, the amount the Hudson Dock concern finally offered, be received.

The pier is at the foot of West Twenty-ninth Street. It is about 500 feet long and 60 feet wide with a one-story shed over it. For many years it was leased by the Bristol City Line, now engaged in handling British war supplies, at $15,000 a year. The renting of a city pier by public auction is a reversal of long-established city policy. The lease to be sold today will be for a period of five years, but the Dock Commissioner reserves the right to reject any bid by noon tomorrow if he considers such action to be for the best interest of the city.

There is a condition in the lease also by which the Dock Commissioner holds the power to break the contract. The lessee will be required to agree that if at any time the Dock Commissioner decides to go ahead with the work of rebuilding a section of the waterfront, including Pier 69, he may terminate the lease on written notice to the lessee. The contract specifies that the rent "shall cease from the date specified in said notice," and it also contains the condition that "no claim for damages or compensation in favor of the lessee by reason of the termination of such interest" shall at any time be made.

It is expected at the auction that both the Bristol City Line and the Hudson Port and Terminal Corporation will materially increase the offers they have already made to the Dock Commissioner for the lease of the pier.

The New York Harbor Line Board will meet in the Dock Department offices after the auction to hear arguments on the proposed plan for the construction of the Coney Island Ship Canal from Gravesend Bay to Sheepshead Bay and the establishment of Kimball Basin in Jamaica Bay. An interesting meeting of the Sinking Fund Commission is expected to take place immediately afterward, when the question of rescinding the granting of the lease of 200 feet of the pier at Fifth Street comes up. On the recommendation of Commissioner Hulbert the commission at its last meeting voted to lease the property to the Pawtucket and New York Transportation Company for $8,400 a year. Later Controller Craig objected to the granting of the lease and requested the Sinking Fund Commission to rescind its action. Commissioner Hulbert bitterly attacked the Controller for his action and at today's meeting of the commission it is expected that he will insist that the lease be given to the Pawtucket concern.

The question of approving a lease to the Compagnie Générale Transatlantique, the French Line, of Pier 84, West Forty-fourth Street and the North River, for a term of three years at an annual rental of $52,000 is also expected to be taken up at the meeting.

City Trust Companies Make Report on Their Resources.

The aggregate resources of the thirty-two trust companies in the City of New York amounted to $2,704,464,400 on March 14, the date of the last call of condition made by the State Superintendent of Banks, according to a compilation made by the Clearing House. On the same date the resources of the forty-five State banks under his jurisdiction totaled $652,537,800.

The previous call for condition reports was as of Nov. 14, 1917, and during the four months that elapsed between calls, the resources of the trust companies decreased by $81,740,200 and those of the State banks by $30,176,200. On March 14 the aggregate deposits of the trust companies totaled $2,158,657,600, a decrease of $142,084,100 compared with the figures for Nov. 14; while the deposits of the State banks amounted to $570,955,800, a decrease of $32,224,900.

Following are the comparative figures for the thirty-two trust companies and the forty-five State banks, the number of the latter class of institutions having been reduced by one since November by reason of an amalgamation:

RAILROAD EARNINGS SHOW A BIG DECLINE

$71,705,000 for First Quarter, Against $179,431,000 in Same Period Last Year.

WASHINGTON, May 15.—Railroads in the first three months this year earned only $71,705,000, as compared with $179,431,000 in the same period last year, making a loss to the Government under the system of common operation of about $109,000,000. This report today by the Interstate Commerce Commission covers all but five of the 196 railroads in the country.

The net income in March was $63,083,000, or $7,000,000 less than in March, 1917. This difference, much less than in the preceding months, indicates that conditions are becoming better for Government operation and returns from later months may go far toward making up the loss.

Operating revenues in March were $365,000,000 and operating expenses $282,000,000, making net revenue a little over $82,000,000. From this was deducted taxes of $15,000,000 and rents for equipment and joint facilities, leaving the net income, the item on which Government compensation is based, $63,000,000.

Eastern railroads earned $16,870,000 as compared with $23,000,000 in March last year; Western roads $30,000,000 as compared with $31,000,000 in March last year, and Southern roads reported $16,000,000, about $1,000,000 more than in March last year.

For the three months period, the falling off in net income was caused mainly by the record of Eastern roads, which reported a deficit of $15,924,000, as compared with earnings of $51,962,000 last year. Western carriers earned $56,000,000 as compared with $84,000,000 last year, and Southern roads $31,000,000 as compared with $43,000,000.

THOUSANDS GET CASH FOR LOAN COUPONS

MANY BUY THRIFT STAMPS

Payments Expected to Continue for Some Days—Total for District Placed at $23,000,000.

Several thousand persons called yesterday at the offices of the Bond Division of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York, 120 Broadway, to cash the initial coupons on their 4 per cent. bonds of the Second Liberty Loan, floated last November. All day there was a long line formed along the cages of the coupon department, and several officers were on hand to keep order and to direct inquiries to the proper windows.

Right alongside of the cages where cash was paid out on presentation of coupons there was a window where thrift and war savings stamps were sold. A large number of men and women, noticing the "W. S. S." sign, did not stop to get cash, but passed their $1 or $2 coupons to the clerk behind the stamp window and got their stamps. Although complete figures were unavailable, it was said that up to about 2 o'clock $1,200 in coupons had been turned in for thrift and war savings stamps.

While bond holders in large numbers sent their coupons to their banks, and others presented them at banks near their homes or places of business, many took the trouble of going to 120 Broadway to cash the small pieces of paper, which to all intents and purposes are equivalent to United States currency.

Officials of the Bond Issue Division said last night that they had not completed tabulating the cash payments made yesterday, but announced that the checks paid over to banks and trust companies which had sent in coupons a few days in advance amounted to more than $6,000,000. The payments of coupons will continue for some days, although holders of large blocks of bonds are usually prompt in collecting their interest.

The total amount of interest due on the 4 per cent. bonds is $76,175,323, and it is estimated that the total for bonds held in the New York district is approximately $23,000,000.

The Federal Reserve Bank has not yet given out any figures showing the amount of money paid in by the banks last Thursday when the initial payments on the Third Liberty Loan were due. Neither has the bank made public the final figures for subscriptions filed in this district. It was explained yesterday that the data were not being given out for publication because of "an embargo" placed by one of the Assistant Secretaries of the Treasury.

The delivery of bonds of the Third Liberty Loan have been far more prompt than deliveries in the case of any of the previous loans. It was learned yesterday that practically every bank in this district had obtained bonds for which full payment was made last Thursday. Bonds of all denominations are being received daily from Washington, and the distribution is being hastened in every way possible. Although all the deliveries have not been fully completed, every bank has an ample supply on hand, and subscribers who have paid for bonds in full should have no difficulty in getting their certificates. All of the bonds have attached to them only four coupons, and at the end of the two years, the Government will exchange these bonds for new certificates containing coupons for the remaining eight years, the term of the loan being ten years.

Hughitt, Past 80, Is Re-elected.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, May 15.—Marvin Hughitt was re-elected Chairman of the Board of Directors of the Chicago & Northwestern Railroad on Tuesday, according to announcement made today. Several weeks ago he resigned after Director General McAdoo had stated that railroad chairmanships were largely ornamental, and declined to permit their salaries to be charged against earnings. Mr. Hughitt returns to the Northwestern at the request of the Directors, and provision for his remuneration is to be made under an arrangement whereby the railroad company will receive certain funds from its contract with the Government for corporate expenses. Mr. Hughitt is past 80 years of age.

Battle-Planes and the United States

What are this country's facilities for the manufacture of aeroplanes?

Have we arrived at the stage of production in big quantities?

In view of the wide-spread discussion regarding the aeroplane industry, DOW-JONES & CO., publishers of THE WALL STREET JOURNAL, will publish an article in the

DOW-JONES NEWS BULLETINS
Today, May 16

giving the facts in full regarding our aeroplane activities from a manufacturing standpoint with pertinent and interesting data direct from the source.

This article will also be published in the THURSDAY AFTERNOON and FRIDAY MORNING EDITIONS of THE WALL STREET JOURNAL.

Drug Prices Continue Firm.

Higher primary markets for numerous crude materials and the scarcity of local stocks have restricted trade in drugs and chemicals, Drug and Chemical Markets will say today. Government buying has kept the market fairly well cleaned of stocks. The export movement continues to be restricted under the new ruling of the War Trade Board, and in some quarters shippers are complaining bitterly of the difficulties in obtaining licenses. Narcotics closed easy, with prices tending downward, due in part to larger arrivals of the crude materials. Price fluctuations have been narrow and mostly upward. The only development of importance was the sharp decline of $1 a pound in thymol.

Gray Goods Sales Fair.

A fair business was put through in the local gray goods market yesterday, with first hands the principal sellers. In fact second-hand transactions of importance were missing during the day. The "stars" of the day's selling were 38½-inch 60-48s, which sold at 15⅞ cents for delivery in May, June and July. Eighteen cents was paid for 38½-inch 64-60s for this month's delivery, and spot Northern goods of 39-inch 68-72 construction brought 19½ cents. Further business for nearby deliveries was put through in sateens and twills, but the business done in sheetings and other coarse yarn goods could easily have been larger. These were mill prices on printcloths at the close:

39-inch, 72-76s	22½c	38½-inch, 64-56s	17½c
39-inch, 68-72s	19½c	38½-inch, 60-52s	16c
39-inch, 56-44s	15c	38½-inch, 60-48s	15⅞c
38½-inch, 64-64s	18½c	27-inch, 64-60s	12⅝c

Sleeveless Coats of Velvet.

There seems to be a growing demand for sleeveless coats made of velvet. According to reports from several local manufacturers these garments come in for frequent mention in the reorders that are now being placed by merchants in all parts of the country. Black is usually preferred. Many of these coats are little more than vests. Some of them do not even come together in front, but are held to the figure with a belt, also of black velvet. On a few of the popular models, black patent leather belts are being shown and promise to gain wide favor.

Bathing Suits Well Sought.

Business in bathing suits is becoming very active, according to a number of local manufacturers. Buyers are said to be numerous just now, and they seem to be eager for supplies. Vivid colors and startling combinations of colors are said to be as actively sought as they ever have been in the past, contrary to many predictions made earlier in the year. Lavender seems to be particularly liked and appears in a majority of the latest suits shown, either as the body color or as trimming. Gray and lavender is one of the favored combinations. Wool jersey is the leading fabric, and is frequently trimmed with embroidery in heavy wool yarns of several colors.

Expect Lace Exports to Increase.

Men who have their fingers on the pulse of the lace and embroidery trade are predicting a rapid expansion of the American export business in this merchandise as a result of the war. While the totals are still small, steady gains in this business have been noted in the last several years, and with the growing use of lace and embroideries in various foreign markets still larger increases are looked for. Especially is this trade expected to increase with Australia, Canada, and the South American countries. St. Gall is said to be virtually eliminated as an export factor for the time being in countries outside of Europe, and for two reasons. The first is that manufacturers there are apparently having their hands full in supplying the European demand, and the second is the scarcity of tonnage to carry the goods that can be spared for other markets.

Good Piano Season.

Piano sales during the last four weeks seem to have been very good. Several manufacturers report having bettered last year's record of business for the same period, while others claim not to have fallen behind any. Cash business was fair, though the bulk of the orders were placed on a part payment basis. Most of the business during the period mentioned seems to have been in the medium priced lines which give good quality without the various elaborations obtained in the most expensive grades. The demand for the very cheap instruments is said to be small.

Do Not Want White Gold.

A resolution recommending the discontinuance of the use of white gold in place of platinum in the manufacture of jewelry embodying precious stones was passed yesterday at a meeting of jewelry manufacturers and retailers at the Hotel Biltmore. The meeting, which grew out of the commandeering of platinum, iridium, and palladium by the Government for war uses, was called by the Jewelers Vigilance Committee, and was attended by representative retail jewelers from Chicago, Cincinnati, St. Louis, Pittsburgh, Boston, and this city. A second resolution passed recommended the inclusion in the karat designation stamped on articles such as watch chains, cigarette cases, &c., of the letter "w" or the words "white" or "white gold" in cases where they are made of this metal instead of platinum. The purpose is to protect the public from the selling, by unscrupulous dealers, of articles of white gold as platinum. While this metal resembles platinum more or less in appearance, it does not resemble platinum so far as "workability," value, and wearing qualities are concerned.

Cotton or Silk Gingham?

Dress manufacturers in this city are unable to decide as yet whether cotton or silk gingham is to be the best seller in dresses during the coming Summer. In some quarters it is said that silks in gingham effects have been very actively sought, and the opinion is expressed that they are displacing the cotton ginghams of last year. Others in the trade, however, believe that cotton gingham dresses are going to be as good as they ever were, chiefly because of the fact that they can be laundered without in any way injuring the dress. "However," as one manufacturer put it yesterday, "only time will tell."

Oxfords and Pumps Are Liked.

It seems to be pretty definitely determined that oxfords and pumps are to be the correct thing in women's shoes this Spring and Summer. Business in those lines is said to have been consistently good since the season opened, and so far makes a very favorable comparison with the record of sales for the same period a year back. There is a tendency, it is reported, toward the darker shades of tan, and this has manifested itself particularly in oxfords, which began the season in black patent leather. It is said that gray is also considered smart.

Has Paid the Second Installment.

Ferdinand Ehrlich of Ferdinand Ehrlich, Inc., dealers in general merchandise, is now 72 years old. In 1910 he was in business as the senior partner of Ferdinand Ehrlich & Sons when that firm failed. An arrangement with the creditors was made at that time, but in spite of this Mr. Ehrlich has taken upon himself the responsibility of paying the indebtedness dollar for dollar. About a year ago this time an installment of 12½ per cent. of the obligation was paid, and a few days ago creditors received personal checks from Mr. Ehrlich for a similar amount. Additional payments will be made until the whole obligation is wiped out, and in the event of Mr. Ehrlich's death before this is accomplished his sons are pledged to finish what he leaves undone. Letters written by creditors in acknowledgment of the second payment are couched in language of appreciation that is rarely seen in the course of everyday business.

Accuse Three More Companies.

WASHINGTON, May 15.—The Federal Trade Commission today issued complaints against the Ironite Company of Chicago, the Master Builders' Company of Cleveland, and the United Products Company of Chicago, alleging unfair competition.

BUSINESS NOTES.

A meeting of the United Waist League of America will be held in the Green Room of the Hotel McAlpin on Monday evening next for the election of officers and Directors for the coming year, and for the approval of the by-laws of the organization. Committee reports will be made, and, among other things, plans for economy in the industry will be discussed. It is expected that the meeting will be attended by every waist manufacturer of importance in this city.

The National Cigar Leaf Tobacco Association will hold its twentieth annual convention here on Monday and Tuesday next in the Assembly Hall of the Merchants' Association. Several matters of importance to this branch of the tobacco industry will be discussed. An elaborate entertainment program has also been arranged.

Buyers of Sweaters, Sport Caps and Hockey Caps

Are Hereby Offered a Great Chance to Buy a Special Lot of 6000 Dozen at About 60 per cent. of Their Actual Value.

The price at which we will sell is not only below the Regular Market, but about 40 per cent. lower than our own Regular Prices, which enables us to give our Customers a Wonderful Opportunity to stimulate sales with Merchandise for which there is Great Demand.

There never has been a greater year for Sweaters than this. Four mills—one at Cleveland, Ohio; one at Philadelphia, Pa.; one at Brooklyn, N. Y.; one at West New York, N. J.—produce for us the 350 styles of Sweaters that we create. They are kept going all of the time and we have kept Our Customers fully and promptly supplied.

But now comes along a Government order of very large proportions for Puttees and Sweaters, which requires immediate clearance of decks at the Cleveland mill, for the filling of an order for the U. S. A. is a paramount duty.

6000 dozen pieces of merchandise make a Big Pile which must be moved immediately. Hence, we make our extraordinary offer at a greatly reduced price in the face of a rising market.

We might store these goods and sell them as demanded at Regular Market Prices. But it has been custom with us for years to give our Customers the benefit of all unusual conditions that arise in our business; hence, we pass along this great opportunity to them.

The Sweaters are of Wool, Zephyr and Fiber Silk, in Coat and "Slip-on" styles—for Women, Misses and Children.

The Sport Caps and Hockey Caps are of Wool and Fiber Silk for Women, Misses, Boys and Children.

Fortunately for our Customers, the assortment divides itself on about the 50-50 basis as regards goods suitable for summer wear and fall and winter wear, thus permitting them to stage special sales in June and September.

In order that all buyers may be given equal opportunity, no reservations will be made. Every order will be booked in the order received. There will be no preferences shown.

16-18-20 West 32nd St.

This sale requires quick action.

WAR NEED TO LEAVE WOOL FOR CIVILIANS

Government Takes Account of Domestic Requirements in Planning to Outfit Army.

MANUFACTURERS IN SESSION

Hear Each Will Receive a Blank on Which to Notify Federal Authorities of His Wants.

It was made plain at the annual meeting of the Woolen Goods Exchange in the Metropolitan Tower yesterday that the Government does not intend to overlook the requirements of the civilian population for woolen clothing, in its anxiety to adequately care for the new armies to be brought into the field for service against Germany.

Nathaniel Stevens of M. T. Stevens & Sons Company, North Andover, Mass., President of the exchange, presided at the meeting, which was attended by the leading woolen manufacturers and mill representatives of the United States.

With the Government holding close supervision over the country's stocks of raw wool, the prevalent opinion at the meeting was that it would not be safe to make large commitments on Spring goods until the policy of the Government was more fully outlined and the amount of wool available for civilian uses was determined. Some of the manufacturers said that the only thing to be done now was to work up such wools as happened to be available for civilian uses and not adaptable to military fabrics.

The fact that the Government proposed, to the best of its ability, to safeguard civilian needs in making allotments of raw wool, was announced by Frederic S. Clark of North Billerica, Mass., Chairman of the War Service Committee of the Wool Manufacturing Industry. Mr. Clark said the War Industries Board would, as soon as practicable, send circular letters of information to all manufacturers with blanks on which they could indicate their needs for wool for commercial purposes.

"We must all make up our minds to the fact that to a greater and greater degree, the resources of the American wool manufacturers are going to be absorbed by the needs of the brave men who are fighting our battles overseas," said President Stevens in his annual address. "To serve them and to serve the country must be more and more our final consideration.

"Unless they win, our business, and everybody else's business in America, will be of no particular account. The American soldiers who are fighting in the fields of France are fighting for America as definitely as if the foe were on our sea coasts. We owe it to our army and navy to support them with just as much vigor and whole-heartedness as if an enemy fleet were in Massachusetts Bay and enemy troops on Long Island. This is the spirit in which all of us should conduct all our dealings with our Government."

BUSINESS RECORDS

In Town.

ROSS & SISTI.—Marion J. Ross and Marco Sisti, who composed the firm of Ross & Sisti, iron works at 615 East Twelfth Street, have filed a petition in bankruptcy, with liabilities of $6,929 and no assets. Part of the liabilities are for indorsing notes of the Orchard Iron and Steel Corporation, held by Patrick J. Murray, $3,008, and Mary Murray, $[illegible]. A petition in bankruptcy was filed against them on July 3, 1912, which was dismissed in November, 1912.

SARA KATZ of 911 Tiffany Street, Bronx, has filed a petition in bankruptcy, with liabilities of $11,550 and no assets. Among the creditors are Lizzie Van Riker, $6,000, and Anna R. Fairchild, $2,500.

LOUIS PESACOV of 1,479 Fulton Avenue, Bronx, has filed a petition in bankruptcy, liabilities of $1,595 and assets of $100, consisting of one share of stock of the White Bed Corporation.

MAYWOOD SPRINGS, INC., mineral water, at 434 East Ninety-second Street.—Judge Knox has dismissed the petition in bankruptcy filed on Nov. 15 against the Maywood Springs, Inc., maker of mineral water, at 434 East Ninety-second Street, and Hackensack, N. J., on a settlement with creditors at 10 cents on the dollar. Liabilities were $14,205.

FEDERAL DYESTUFF COMPANY.—Judge [illegible] in the United States District Court yesterday appointed Charles W. Holloway additional receiver for the Federal Dyestuff and Chemical Corporation, whose plant is at Kingsport, Tenn., on the application of the Noteholders' Committee. He has already qualified in Tennessee. The Judge also approved a contract of the committee to advance money for the payrolls, for purchasing of materials, and other materials to carry out the contract with the United States Government for the purchase of 9,000,000 pounds of picric acid.

S. C. BAUER & SON.—Simon Bauer, doing business as S. C. Bauer & Son, a manufacturer of bakers' utensils, 444 Hart Street, Brooklyn, has filed a petition in bankruptcy, liabilities of $3,400 and assets of $754.

OLIN R. VANDERWATER.—A petition in bankruptcy has been filed against Olin R. Vanderwater, a butcher and grocer of Bayside, L. I., by the following creditors: [illegible] Co., $500; J. J. Harrington & Co., [illegible] A. E. MacAdam, $200.

MAX GARSHOFSKY, 117 Seigel Street, Brooklyn, has made an assignment to Allen [illegible]ow, 1,092 President Street, Brooklyn.

LEGAL NOTICES.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT, Southern District of New York.—ELIE SHEETZ, Complainant, against J. M. WASHBURNE COMPANY, Defendant.

To the Creditors of the J. M. Washburne Company: Notice is hereby given that the receivers of the J. M. Washburne Company have filed with me their final account herein showing that they have in their hands a balance of $2,703.59 and certain claims which they have been unable to collect. I hereby appoint Friday, May 24th, 1918, at 10:30 A. M., at Room 442, U. S. Court House and Post Office Building, New York, for the filing of objections to said accounts and hearing thereon, for the sale, subject to the approval of the Court of the said outstanding claims, and for the determination of the allowances to be made to the receivers and their counsel, and for such other matters as may be brought before me.

At that time the creditors and all others interested are directed to show cause if any why the receivers should not be discharged and their bonds be cancelled.

Dated May 8th, 1918.

WM. BARKIN, Master.

REAL ESTATE FIELD

Shipbuilder Acquires the San Domingo—Buyer for Front Street Parcel.

A West End Avenue apartment house passed into new ownership yesterday in a transaction which also involved a small element of trade.

The Schuyler Square Realty Company, Harry Schiff, President, sold to D. Rush Stoddard, who is in the shipbuilding business, the twelve-story apartment house known as the San Domingo, at 947 West End Avenue, on a plot 75 by 100, facing Straus Square. The house, which stands on the site of the old Bloomingdale Church, is entirely rented and has been held at $550,000.

In part payment, Mr. Stoddard gave the five-story apartment house at 110 East 116th Street, on a lot 25 by 100. Nassoit & Lanning were the brokers in the transaction, Charles H. Bellows representing Mr. Stoddard as attorney.

Front Street Deal.

Henry R. Taylor has sold to a client of William A. White & Sons the two five-story buildings at 62 and 64 Front Street, on a plot 45.7 by 85.9. An interesting detail in connection with the deal is that it is the third sale in a period of twenty-six years, and each sale has been made through the same brokers. Mr. Taylor acquired the property in 1906.

A $260,000 Manhattan-Bronx Trade.

Joseph Schwartz, President of the S. B. Building Corporation, sold to Adolph and Minnie Wolff the five-story apartment house, with four stores, on a plot 57.6 by 100, at the southeast corner of St. Nicholas Avenue and 192d Street.

The buyers gave in exchange 1,520 St. Nicholas Avenue, a five-story apartment house, on a plot 40 by 100; 402 East Seventy-third Street, a five-story tenement, on a lot 25 by 100, and the five-story flat, on a plot 40 by 100, at the northeast corner of Davidson Avenue and North Street. The deal, which was negotiated by M. I. Strunsky & Co. and H. F. Byrnes, involved about $260,000.

East Side Tenement in Sale.

Mrs. Marie E. Schleiermacher has sold the four-story tenement with stores at 421 Sixth Street, on a lot 20.10 by 90.10. Joseph P. Day, in conjunction with George F. Mahnken, negotiated the sale.

Investors Buy Dwellings.

The Clayton Realty Company purchased from the Bond and Mortgage Guarantee Company 307 West Seventy-seventh Street, a four-story dwelling, on a lot 18.6 by 102.2, located between West End Avenue and Riverside Drive. John R. and Oscar L. Foley negotiated the sale.

Walter V. Reynolds sold 254 West 131st Street, a three-story dwelling, on a lot 17.6 by 99.11, and 143 West 130th Street, a three-story dwelling, on a lot 16.8 by 100. Both buyers are investors.

Buying Bronx Property.

Fred L. Scribner purchased for occupancy from Alfred Kuhlke 475 East 137th Street, a three-story dwelling.

The Fanyer Building Corporation, composed of John C. and P. J. Dwyer, sold to Frederick Brown, operator, 2,436 to 2,440 Webb Avenue, two five-story apartment houses, occupying a plot 100 by 100. Richard A. Scobia negotiated the sale.

Weissman & Kendall purchased from George W. Short the two-story dwelling with stable, occupying the entire block front on the south side of 192d Street, between Creston Avenue and the Concourse. The plot was held at $80,000. It was acquired by the seller last month for $69,000 in foreclosure proceedings.

Samuel Cowen sold the two-family brick dwelling at 638 Faile Street, on a lot 20 by 100, to M. Lubit.

Brooklyn.

David Walker has sold to a client of the Jerome Property Corporation, for occupancy, 384 Third Street, a three-story dwelling on a lot 22 by 190, running through to Fourth Street. This is the first sale of the property since May, 1868.

A $722,000 Factory for Long Island City.

Plans have been filed by S. Karpen & Brothers, manufacturers of furniture, for a $722,000 factory to be erected in Long Island City in the block bounded by Jackson Avenue, Hulst Street, Sunnyside Yard of the Pennsylvania Railroad and Harold Avenue.

The building will be a six-story concrete structure with a frontage of 489 feet and a depth of 465 feet. About 800 operatives will be employed. It will contain 800,000 feet of floor space.

Queens Borough Sales.

A. L. Palmer sold to M. Berman, who immediately conveyed it to J. W. Levingson, a plot 100 by 225 feet, on the southeast corner of University Place and Thrall Place, Woodhaven.

The Bond and Mortgage Guarantee Company sold to H. Prince a plot 110 by 466 feet on the west side of Remington Avenue, 594 feet south of Arverne Boulevard, Arverne.

C. Muller sold to the Evangelical Lutheran Church of Holy Trinity of Hollis a plot 40 by 100 feet, adjacent to its present property on the west side of Palatina Avenue, 182 feet north of Hempstead and Jamaica Plank Road, Hollis.

Long Island.

James L. Dowsey, Manhattan, has purchased the estate of the late James M. Clark of Great Neck, L. I. The property comprises fifty acres, and has a frontage of 1,600 feet on the North Hempstead Turnpike.

Westchester County.

Olcott & Egger sold the Nightingale cottage at Larchmont to Mrs. Mary B. Vermilye of New York City, who will occupy.

New Jersey.

The Western Tool Company has purchased from Mrs. T. G. Sellew of Montclair, for a reported price of $25,000, the three-story brick factory on North Third Street, Newark. Robert B. Stoutenburgh was the broker.

The Standard Wire Company purchased from Mrs. Elizabeth J. Reid the three-story brick factory building, formerly the plant of the Federal Wire Cloth Company, on plot 111 by 202, on the west side of Passaic Avenue, at Harrison. The sale also included all riparian rights in the Passaic River in front of the plot.

Title has been passed whereby the Evening Journal Association, publishers of the Jersey Journal, transferred to the Manufacturers Liability Insurance Company of New Jersey its former publication building, a four-story structure on a plot 75 by 100 at the southwest corner of Montgomery and Greene Streets, Jersey City.

Commercial Leases.

Joseph P. Day has leased for the Farmers Loan & Trust Company for a term of years, 117-119 Mercer Street to the Mutual Gas Light Company. This property was sold recently at auction by Mr. Day.

The Charles F. Noyes Company leased to Maurice Mendel, retailer of gowns and dresses, his fifth New York store to be at 24 East Thirty-fourth Street. The lease is for a term of years and includes the store and first loft. The property is owned by William Waldorf Astor.

The Rowantree-Schley Company leased in conjunction with Spear & Co. the store, basement, first and second lofts at 155-157 Wooster Street, containing 20,000 square feet, to M. Bermas & Brother, dealers in woolen clippings, now at 121-123 Sullivan Street.

George R. Read & Co., sub-leased for the Fuhr Wall Paper Company, to Michael M. Oganesoff, the store and basement at 2,178 Broadway, for an automobile salesroom.

Realty Note.

William A. White & Sons have placed a building and permanent loan of $200,000 at 6 per cent. interest for five years for the Freel Investing Company, Philip A. Curran, President, to cover the new Strand Theater at Fulton Street and Ashland Place, Brooklyn.

This enterprise will represent an investment of about $800,000. The theatre has been leased to the Mitchell H. Mark Realty Corporation, owners of the Strand Theatre in Manhattan.

THE WEATHER.

WASHINGTON, May 15.—Low pressure prevails over the western half of the country, with the greatest depression over the Dakotas, Western Nebraska, and Eastern Colorado, although there was no resulting precipitation except in the northern upper lake region, North Dakota, Western Montana, and Northwestern Wyoming, where there were light showers.

The weather was fair elsewhere except in the lower Atlantic and North Pacific States, where there were rains. It is generally warmer over interior districts east of the Rocky Mountains, with quite high temperatures in the southern upper lake region, the great central valleys, and the plains States west of the mountains.

Fair weather will prevail Thursday and Friday in the Washington forecast district, with temperatures above the seasonal average in the interior, and also on Friday along the Atlantic Coast.

Winds for Thursday and Friday along the North Atlantic Coast will be moderate variable, becoming east and southeast, fair weather; Middle Atlantic Coast, moderate southeast, partly cloudy; South Atlantic Coast, moderate winds, mostly east, unsettled.

FORECASTS—TODAY AND FRIDAY.

New Jersey and Eastern Pennsylvania—Fair Thursday. Friday, fair and warmer.

Western New York—Fair and warmer Thursday and Friday.

Northern New England—Fair Thursday and Friday.

DEMOCRATS CALL ON WOMEN TO ENROLL

Accuse Governor Whitman of Wasting People's Substance for His Ambitions.

APPEAL FOR THE PRESIDENT

Six Women Sign State Committee Address Calling for Support of Administration.

The Democratic State Committee yesterday promulgated an address to the women voters of the State urging them to enroll as members of the Democratic Party. The enrollment of women, to enable them to qualify as voters in the State primaries this Fall, begins in up-State communities with less than 5,000 population today. Such enrollment will continue until June 15 and women voters may indicate their party preference by signing a certificate in the presence of a witness and forwarding this to the custodian of election records. In cities and villages of 5,000 or more inhabitants the enrollment will be held a week from Saturday, the enrollment places being open from 8 in the morning until 10 at night.

In its appeal to the women voters the committee urges as a ground for asking their support the progressive legislation which has been enacted by the Democratic Congress and the Legislature in this State under Democratic control, and the fact that in its conduct of the war the Democratic administration at Washington will be greatly hampered through Republican victories this Fall.

The address says:

"The Democratic Party under the inspiring leadership of Woodrow Wilson has in six years enacted more progressive and humanitarian laws than the Republican Party has enacted in sixty years. The Democratic Party enacted the child labor laws. It created the factory investigation commission and enacted the factory code to protect working women and children. It passed the income tax amendment and forced the ratification thereof in New York, the State where above all others the money power had been most firmly interenched.

"The Democratic Party, in order to bring about the widest popular participation in the choice of public officials, enacted the direct primary law and direct election of United States Senators. It enacted the Federal Reserve act, which forever destroyed the power of the money kings to manipulate the country's banking system and produce panics at will. It enacted the workmen's compensation law, the greatest measure ever put upon the statute book for the protection of the toiler in hazardous employments and those dependent on his toil.

"A Democratic Legislature created the Conservation Commission to develop the State's natural resources for the benefit of the whole people. A Republican Legislature drove that commission from office at the behest of the water power interests. A Republican Legislature gave to the Water Power Trust the vast water power of the St. Lawrence River. A Democratic Legislature recovered and restored that power to the people by the repeal of the notorious Long Sault grant. The Republican Party signalized its return to power three years ago by submitting a State Constitution so reactionary that it was rejected by a popular majority of more than half a million votes.

"GGovernor Whitman has wasted the people's substance in pursuit of his political ambitions. He has governed the State with his eye on the White House and his mind on the machinery of politics. He has treated the State's agricultural interests like a political pawn, and, by his political intrigues, has all but destroyed the efficiency of the Agricultural Department. He has increased the cost of the government so enormously that his total appropriations are 68 per cent. greater than those of his predecessor. He has so multiplied the placeholders that the cost of the State payroll today equals the total cost of the State government under Governor Odell.

"President Wilson and the Democratic Party are responsible for the conduct of the war. The women of our land have a right to demand that their husbands, their brothers, and their sons who are fighting gallantly at the front shall be returned to their homes at the earliest possible moment consistent with victory. They have a right to demand the election of a Governor who will no more profiteer in power than in money—a Governor who will give, as they have given, all that he has, even to the sacrifice of all political ambition, in whole-hearted support of the Commander in Chief to win the war.

"The American people have but the one desire—to win the war and win it quickly. They have but the one thought—sustain the President and speed the triumph of our arms. They are opposed to whatever might retard, divide, or distract our efforts in that direction. Civilization today hangs in the balance. The hopes of humanity, the ongoing of the world, all that we hold nearest and dearest and best, are at stake. A result politically adverse next November would be interpreted at home and abroad as a vote of repudiation of the great leader in the battle for human rights and world democracy."

The address was drafted and signed by a subcommittee of the Executive Committee of the Democratic State Committee, composed of six women and two men. The members were Mrs. L. Mulcaire, Brooklyn; Miss Beulah Bailey, Troy; Miss I. Stebbins, Mrs. Westmiller, and Miss Sara McPike, New York; Mrs. F. E. Kennedy and W. W. Farley, Binghamton, and Senator Robert F. Wagner, New York.

LENDS HOUSE TO RED CROSS

Jacob H. Schiff Provides Rest Home for Nurses—Mrs. Vanderbilt to Help

Jacob H. Schiff has given a house on his estate, Rumson Road, near Seabroght, N. J., to the War Department and the Red Cross as a rest home for nurses worn by work at the front. The house is ready for immediate occupancy, and soon will be taken over by the Red Cross.

The house is a large dwelling, formerly the home of his mother-in-law, Mrs. Solomon Loeb, and includes about 200 acres. Mr. Schiff has a Summer home on the same grounds nearby. The house is ideally situated, surrounded by woods and fields, and will accommodate about twenty-five nurses.

Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt has given her home, 677 Fifth Avenue, to the Red Cross for the period of the drive for $100,000,000 next week. Musical entertainments will be given there each afternoon and evening. Among those who will aid are Frances Alda, Clarence Whitehall, Mabel Garrison, Reinald Werrenrath, Elsie Baker, Herbert Witherspoon, Marica van Dresser, Lambert Murphy, Carolina Lazzari, Leon Rothier, Povla Frijsh, Margaret Dunlap, Henry Weldon Hughes, May Peterson, Florence Hinkle, Marie Tiffany, Vera Curtis, Olive Kline, Paul Althouse, Josephine Jacoby, Andreas de Segurola, Eva Didur, Christine Langham, Paul Kefer, George Barrere, Carlos Salzedo and the Trio de Lutece.

CANADA TO TAKE TWO BIG RAILROADS

MAY OWN ALL ROADS SOON

Plan to Weld Them Into One Great National System Revealed to Parliament.

OTTAWA, Ont., May 15.—Negotiations for Government acquisition of the Grand Trunk Railway and the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway were announced in the House of Commons today by Premier Borden. The Grand Trunk Pacific, he declared, was a national enterprise "to which the credit of the Canadian people has been committed and in my judgment it is expedient to maintain it and not permit it to go into liquidation." The taking over of the Grand Trunk Pacific practically involved the taking over of the Grand Trunk as well, he said.

Confidential negotiations had been opened with the Grand Trunk Railway, the Prime Minister stated.

"We have," he said, "made what we regard as a reasonable offer. They have replied to us by making a counter-offer which was of such a nature that we did not consider we could ask Parliament to accept it."

The Government had then proposed, he explained, that if no agreement could be reached the question should be submitted to arbitration without fixing any limit, as was done in the case of the Canadian Northern Railway.

During the Summer, Sir Robert added, a sub-committee of the Cabinet would be in London, and he had some "reasonable hope" that when Parliament was again summoned the Government might be in a position to place before it proposals which would involve the constitution into one system of State-owned railways in Canada of the chief railways in the country except the Canadian Pacific Railway.

"It may be possible," Sir Robert added, "indeed, I think it is probable, that at some later date, but not in the immediate future, all the land transportation facilities in Canada, in the shape of railways, may, so far as operation at least is concerned, be amalgamated into one system, carried on under one management."

The announcement came in the course of a general statement on the railway situation. In regard to the Canadian Northern Railway, Sir Robert said it was not intended that Sir William Mackenzie and Sir Donald Mann should be on the Board of Directors. Sir Robert emphasized that while a road owned by the Canadian people must be subject to the direction and control of the people, yet it was absolutely essential that political influence should be eliminated from its administration.

It was intended to operate the road through a reconstituted Board of Directors, consisting of the best men it was possible to obtain. Interference would not be tolerated, and every means available to the Government would be used to operate the road properly.

Sir Robert gave a statement showing the financial standing of the system. Total liabilities were given as $438,264,377, as against assets of $520,437,885.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier said the Prime Minister had been very vague as to the organization under which the Canadian Northern Railway was to be run. Why wait until the arbitration proceedings were over before reorganizing the road? Sir Wilfrid asked. Sir Wilfrid declared further that the management of the Grand Trunk should not be in London. If the Government was thinking of taking the Grand Trunk Railway over, he added, he would warn it that the road was loaded with bad securities.

BRITISH IMPORTS CUT IN HALF SINCE 1913

Reduction Accomplished with Little Apparent Discomfort, Says Sir A. H. Stanley.

LONDON, May 15.—Introducing the Board of Trade estimates in the House of Commons today Sir Albert H. Stanley said that the volume of imports in 1917 was only two-thirds the volume in 1913. This year it was estimated that the imports would not represent more than half those of 1913. No one before the war would have prophesied that the country could carry on as it was doing, suffering very little apparent discomforts, on half the imports before the war.

This was a valuable lesson, said the President of the Board of Trade, and the people of Great Britain should not allow themselves again to drift into dependence on foreign sources.

Taking the pre-war prices and adjusting the price level, the imports would be 40 per cent. and the exports 30 per cent. below the pre-war figures, he continued. The aggregate output of the various industries so far was very little less than before the war. More overtime was worked, and the work people worked harder; there was an improvement in the methods of manufacture, and at least a million and a half more women were engaged in work today than before the war.

NED WAYBURN IN CONTEMPT

Theatrical Man Also Fined $2,960, Amount of Unpaid Allimony.

Ned Wayburn, theatrical producer, was declared in contempt of court yesterday by Supreme Court Justice Platzek for failure to pay $40 a week alimony to his former wife, Mrs. Helene D. Wayburn, under a decree of divorce in 1916, and was fined $2,960, the amount of the unpaid alimony. An order for Wayburn's commitment to Ludlow Street Jail was signed, and unless he arranges to pay the fine the order will be carried out. His attorney offered yesterday to pay the sum in installments.

Mrs. Wayburn said that although her former husband has had an income of more than $500 a week he has sent her and her son an average of $3 a week, while he has been supporting the co-respondent, whom he married, in luxury in an apartment at 431 Riverside Drive and a cottage at Bayside, L. I. Wayburn told the court his former wife is seeking vengeance instead of alimony, and stated that he is struggling under an indebtedness of $40,000 sustained by the failure of theatrical enterprises.

FIXES BLAME FOR ODORS.

State Health Board Threatens to Revoke Licenses of Accused Companies

After an investigation regarding the source of obnoxious odors complained of by residents of Riverside Drive, and particularly the West End Association, the State Board of Health in a report yesterday stated that it had decided that the Corn Products Company and the General Chemical Company, whose factories are along the Jersey shore of the Hudson River, and who have been accused by the complainants, are mainly responsible for the odors. The companies were served yesterday with a notice to appear on June 4, at 10 A. M., before the State Board of Health, at 17 West Forty-third Street, and show cause why their licenses to transact business in New York State should not be revoked. The companies will be allowed to continue in business here if they agree to abate the nuisance.

While investigating the source of the obnoxious odors Inspectors for the State Health Department also found that offensive odors originated in one of the city's garbage dumps at the foot of West Ninety-sixth Street. State Health Commissioner Hermann M. Biggs has written the Street Cleaning Commissioner and other city officials asking that conditions be remedied.

In a letter to Health Commissioner Copeland, State Health Commissioner Biggs stated that it was not necessary for the city to spend any part of the $25,000 appropriated by the city to investigate the origin of the odors complained of by west side residents, as the investigators for the State Health Department had obtained sufficient evidence to place the blame where it belongs. Engineers of the State Board of Health have reported that it will not cost more than $25,000 for each of the companies found responsible for producing the objectionable odors to make changes in their chimneys so that the conditions will be obviated. In the proceedings James A. Warren of 61 Broadway acted as attorney for the State Board of Health.

Brooklyn Bank Drops German Name

The Board of Trustees of the Germania Savings Bank, Brooklyn, announced yesterday that the name of the institution has been changed to Fulton Savings Bank of King's County. This action of the Trustees is the outcome of a meeting held Tuesday night, when it was decided to strip the bank of every suspicion of German influence. Nearly all the officers of the bank are of German extraction.

W. L. Douglas President W. L. Douglas Shoe Co., 210 Spark St., Brockton, Mass.

At the age of 15, W. L. Douglas could make a Brogan shoe complete. He was ambitious, however, to learn the trade of bootmaking and two years later went to South Braintree, Mass., to work with that famous old time bootmaker, Mr. Ancil Thayer, under whom he thoroughly mastered the trade of making Men's Fine Calf Boots. The first year he was paid $1.50 a week and his board. The second year he received $3.00 weekly.

Independent woman

And independent dictator.

Both free from the shackles of shorthand that make two persons' presence necessary to dictate a letter.

You able to dictate early or late, first minute or last; she all finished with a good day's work with not a minute wasted taking notes.

That's what happens in the office where they dictate the direct way, the ready on the dot way, the money-saving way of The Ediphone.

You're facing "vacations" along with other help troubles. Good enough. The Ediphone thrives in hard situations. Let vacations come along—and let The Ediphone fill the gap.
